On arrival at the Howrah Railway Station, His Excellency will be received by the Chairman of the Corporation of Calcutta, the Commissioner of Police for the Town of Calcutta, and the Magistrate of Howrah, and at Government House by His Honor the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal and Staff, the Honnurable Members of His Excellency's Council, the General Officer Commanding the Presidency District and Staff, the principal Civil and Military Officers, and other gentlemen who are desirous of attending.

A Guard of Honour of the East Indian Railway Volunteers will be drawn up on the platform of the Howrah Railway Station and a Guard of Honour of Native Troops, with Band, outside the Station.

The route taken will be by the Hooghly Bridge, Strand Road, Fairlie Place, Dalhousie Square, North, and Old Court House Street.

The Body-Guard and the Calcutta Light Horse will form His Excellency's Escort.

A Royal Salute will be fired from the Ramparts of Fort William as His Excellency alights from the train.

A Guard of Honour of British Infantry and of the Presidency Volunteers will be drawn up in front of the Grand Staircase of Government House.

Full Dress will be worn by those entitled to wear uniform, Review order by Military Officers. Gentlemen not entitled to wear uniform will appear in Morning Dress.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS TO CIVIL AND MILITARY AUTHORITIES

When travelling by rail, His Excellency will be met at all intermediate Stations where halts of one hour and upwards are made, by the senior Civil and (if a Military Station) by the senior Military Officer only, who will report themselves to the Military Secretary. No salute will be fired at these stations, and no Guard of Honour will attend. At minor halting places no Officer need attend.

Full Dress Uniform will be worn. Review order by Military Officers. Gentlemen not entitled to wear uniform will appear in Morning Dress. These instructions for Dress apply to all occasions on which His Excellency the Viceroy is received.

Local authorities will place themselves in communication with the Railway officials, and learn through them the time of arrival of the Viceregal Train.

The usual Police arrangements will be made by the local authorities along His Excellency's line of route, as well as at all the places of halt.

The following rules will be observed by the Military authorities at all Stations visited by the Viceroy and Governor General during His Excellency's Tour —

Salutes — V
at all Stations
which Salutes
and departure, and on other ceremonial occasions when called for. When the Viceroy's arrival or de parture takes place after sunset, or on Sunday, the Salute will be fired the following morning. Any Salute due on a Sunday will be fired on Monday morning

The Artillery firing the Salute must be placed at some distance from the road along which His Excellency the Viceroy is to pass

Escort — His Excellency the Viceroy's Escort consists of—

1 On occasions of high State ceremonial—

One Battery, R H A

One British Cavalry Regiment

Volunteer Cavalry or Mounted Rifles, if present

His Excellency the Viceroy's Body Guard,
when present

One Native Cavalry Regiment

The Viceroy's Body Guard will, on all occasions
when present, have the post of Honour immediately preceding and following His Excellency the Viceroy's carriage, the Officer Commanding the Body Guard riding on the right of the carriage.

This Escort will only be furnished when specially asked for by the Military Secretary to the Viceroy.

2 On all ordinary State occasions,—that is, for public arrivals or departures when His Excellency the Viceroy attends any public ceremony, or visits Native Chiefs in British territory

A Field Officer's Escort of British Cavalry of the following strength —

One Field Officer with the necessary proportions of Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers, and 96 rank and file

If no British Cavalry is present a similar Escort of Native Cavalry will be found

When the Viceroy's Body Guard is present, it will form part of the Escort in addition to the above

3 On all other than State occasions,—that is, for private arrivals and departures for private visits to places His Excellency the Viceroy may inspect,—

A Travelling Escort of one Subaltern, one Sergeant, and 12 rank and file of a British Cavalry Regiment. If no British Cavalry is present, the Escort will be found by Native Cavalry, but in all cases a British Officer will command.

Should the Viceroy travel long distance by road, the Military authorities, through whose district His Excellency passes, will, in communication with the Military Secretary, make special arrangements for Escorts which will be reduced to the minimum necessary.

Ca

Excellency is not in the same carriage as His Excellency the Viceroy the third division of the Escort will follow the second carriage of the procession His Excellency the Viceroy will in all cases, right hand side carriage as the

Parades—Rules for the Order of March when His Excellency the Viceroy attends a review will be found in Army Regulations, India, Vol II, Part I, paragraph 346 If the Viceroy's Body Guard is not present, the Field Officer's Escort will be found

Should His Excellency inspect single Corps, the travelling Escort will be sufficient

Guards of Honour—A Guard of Honour of British Troops if present, if not of Native Troops of 100 rank and rifle with colours and band will parade in Review Order at the Railway Station or if the Viceroy is travelling by road at the most convenient place, usually the house where the Viceroy will reside, on the arrival and departure of His Excellency, unless the arrival or departure is notified as 'private'

When a Guard of Honour is found, Commanding Officers and Heads of Departments will attend When the Viceroy's arrival or departure is private only the Officer Commanding and one Staff Officer will attend Officers receiving His Excellency the Viceroy will always be in Review Order

No one will be required to attend between 10 P M and 6 A M, unless special instructions are issued

Whenever Volunteers are present in sufficient numbers to furnish Guards of Honour, they will be detailed for this duty as well as regular troops

Guards—An Officer's Guard of British troops, if available if not of Native troops will be mounted on the house or tent occupied by the Viceroy

This Guard will, in all cases except in Native States where no troops of the Indian Army are present, be under the command of a British Officer, who will report himself to the Military Secretary to the Viceroy for orders. This Guard will pay compliments to His Excellency the Viceroy alone

It must be of sufficient strength to furnish one double sentry on the door sentries immediately round the house or tent occupied by the Viceroy and the usual sentry over the arms of the Guard itself

In addition to the above, a Guard of Native Infantry will be furnished of sufficient strength to find two double sentries, one for the Private Secretary's Office Treasury, and one for that of the Military Secretary, and to guard the Camp if His Excellency the Viceroy and Staff are in tents, and the enclosure, if the Viceroy is in a house

The outer limits of the enclosure in which His Excellency the Viceroy is residing will always be guarded by Police. The Military authorities should therefore put themselves in communication with the Police authorities, and should ascertain what arrangements the latter are making. This will prevent confusion arising between the Military and Police Guards. The Officer Commanding the Station will satisfy himself that the Military Guards are posted so as to ensure the safety of the Viceregal Camp or enclosure for which they are responsible.

Orderlies—Four Native Cavalry Orderlies and six Native Infantry Orderlies should be furnished. They will report themselves to the Military Secretary and be distributed between the Private Secretary and Military Secretary's Offices. The Cavalry Orderlies will be wanted from 7 A.M. to 8 P.M., unless other instructions are given. Infantry Orderlies should remain day and night. Both should be relieved during the day as convenient.

NOTE ON IMPERIAL SERVICE TROOPS.

NOTE ON IMPERIAL SERVICE TROOPS.

The Udaipur State maintains a regiment of cavalry, 600 strong and a battalion of infantry, strength 1,037. The former is commanded by Daoud Khan, and the latter by Natha Singh. The men are mainly Rajputs of the State, with a few Muhammadans. The horses of the cavalry are nearly all stud bred—small, sturdy little animals, with good limbs and capable of any amount of work. The troops have always earned good reports from the Inspecting Officers and the Inspector General, and for several years were the most efficient Corps among the Imperial Service Forces. The cost to the State for the year 1895-96 was—

Udaipur

Lancers	1,13,937
Infantry	1,84,391

The Jeypur Transport Corps consists of 1,000 ponies, 400 carts, with an establishment of 640 under the Command of Superintendent of Raj Bahadur Dhanpal Rai, an official of the Government Commissariat Department, whose services have been lent to the State. The men who are enlisted, and armed with swords, are partly Jeypuri, Rajputs and Muhammadans, and partly Punjabis. The ponies are purchased at the various fairs in Rajputana and elsewhere. The Corps is very completely equipped—the carts, which are made in the State, being of the latest approved pattern and extremely efficient, so that they are "the best of their kind in the world." The work done in the Central Expedition proved the truth of Lord Roberts' remarks. The cost for 1895-96 was Rs. 1,41,510.

The Bikaner Camel Corps has been fully described as unique. It is 500 strong, and is organised as an Infantry regiment armed with short sticks, each man maintaining a camel, in the front seat of the saddle of which he sits when mounted and dismounts the camel; in the hinder seat another soldier can be carried, so that the corps is able to transport a force equal to its own strength over a considerable distance in a short space of time. No led camels accompany the corps for short expeditions, say of 4 or 5 days' duration.

The Vahl a considerable river runs for some distance through the territories of Parangah and Ra'utana, but neither berries nor seeds in Ra'utana. In the tributary to this part is the Son which flows first east and then southward through Mewa. These rivers carry off the drainage of the southern corner of Ra'utana into the Gulf of Cutch and Cambay.

Rajmangla has no natural fresh-water lakes the only ones to be had being the well known ones like a Samudra. There are some artificial lakes in Mewar State the largest are those near Dehra and Bakhra 1 of which the former is a noble sheet of water about 2 or 30 m. in circumference, constructed in 1873 by Raja Jas Singh and named from him the Jasrang. There are a few artificial lakes on the Eastern States about Benar and Kotal and in the British District of Ajmere Merwar.

The other hills are peaks of Ra putana, whose hills numerous are comparatively insignificant. The towns of Alwa and Jaipur lie among groups of hills now or less connected. In Bhawar State is a range of some local importance the highest peak being Alwar 2,157 feet above sea level. South of these are the hills of whose greatest height is where it reaches 1,400 feet above sea level. In the eastern States, a low but well-defined range runs transversely south-west and north-east. This range presents a barrier to about 2,000 miles on a south-eastward and gives very few openings for roads. A series of steep hills runs along the northern or left bank of the Chambhar river as a continuation of the Bar hills, through the hills to Delhi. The Malabar range runs across the south-western part of of Kotah State from the Chambhar beyond Jhaba Panna. This range has a curious double formation of two separate ranges, running parallel and some of more than a mile the interval being filled with dense jungle, and in some parts with cultivated lands.

Terrain.—Although the woodlands are extensive upon the southern-western Arava, and throughout the almost level plains, there are no forests of large timber in Ka putana. Upon Abu Iswél wooded from base to summit, and possesses several valuable kinds of timber, and from Abu north-westward to western slopes of the range are several clothed with trees and bushes up to the neighboring hood of Mirwa. Below the hills on the western side rises a hill jun, c son c mcs spreading out along the steep beds for some distance in the plain. All vegetation however rapidly decreases in the direction of the Loni river and beyond the Ve Starwa Bkane and Jasmer have scarcely any trees at all except a few palm and aloe trees or towns.

In Sindh and a large portion of the south-western part of Mewar the woodlands stretch for many miles on the high wheat-bearing hills and the valleys which cross the Indian plain. The forest is a timberless wood with a well if the forest were not protected by the British and other half-savage dwellers on the hills. In the eastern States the woodlands are a considerable area. So the hills of the Deccan and a long part of the Cham at a distance of some miles covered for the most part with many trees; and near the capital and a number of the principal towns the woodlands were used for game or for defence, which deep hills were seen with a view of some distance. The southernmost State of British India, and the largest one perhaps the best woodlands in proportion to the area of the land, the hills are covered with a well if the forest were not protected by the British and other half-savage dwellers on the hills. In the eastern States the woodlands are a considerable area. So the hills of the Deccan and a long part of the Cham at a distance of some miles covered for the most part with many trees; and near the capital and a number of the principal towns the woodlands were used for game or for defence, which deep hills were seen with a view of some distance. The march of Mahmud's victorious army across the Rajput though it temporarily overcame the Solankhyas, left no permanent on the east. The state was however seriously weakened by the conflicts between the Soankhyas and the Chauhan and between the latter and the Rakhos of Kanauj which gave an opportunity to the traders of the late part of the 12th century. Nevertheless when Shahab-ud-din began his invasion the Chauhan fought hard before they were driven out of Ameer and Dehli in 1201 and Kanauj was not taken till the following year. Kutub-ud-din gained Ameer and Anhilwara and the Mussalmans appear gradually to have encroached if they did not even reduce the open country. They secured the natural passes of Rajasthan toward Gujarat on the south-west and towards the valleys of the Jumnas on the north-east and the effect was probably to press back the limits of the open country where a more difficult and less fertile country afforded a secure line of defence against the foreigner—a use which they have been successful in up to the present day.

Indeed securing as it did the present the two Jats of Bhatpur and Dholpur and the Muhammadan Principality of Tonk. Rajasthan may be described as the region in which the pre-bounded Rajput clans have maintained a sort of independence under their own chieftains and have kept to their primitive mode of existence in the principal dynasties in Northern India were crushed down and swept away by the Muhammadan invasions. And the existing empire of the modern Sates and the positions of which the early chieftains retained. Thus one clan (the Bhat) had at an early period founded Jaipur in the extreme north-west having been driven across the Sutlej by the Ghaznavide conquerors. The Rakhos secured down among the sands of Marwar or Jodhpur. The second was pushed inward from north-east and south-west concentrated on the Mewar plateau behind the support of the Aravallis while the Jadwas were pressed by the Hindus and ravaged the plain of the Chambas.

Everywhere the southern Province of Malwa was attacked by the Mussalmans in the Delhi Empire and at the beginning of the 14th century Ala-ud-din Khilji finally exterminated the Rajput dynasties in the Gujara which has so become an empire of the Poonas. When at length within the decline of the Tughlak dynasty independent Muhammadan kingdoms were established in Malwa and Gujarat the empire was poised for the formation of the Rajput empire which had been; and throughout the 15th century there was war between them and the Hindus.

For a short time at the beginning of the 16th century came a brilliant reign of Rajput chieftains. The last Afghan dynasty of Delhi was breaking up and Malwa and Gujara were at war with each other when here arose the famous Rana Sanga of Malwa chief of the Sisodia clan. The ancient vaour of the chief once more obtained for his race something like pre-eminence in Central India. Aided by Meda Rao chief of Chanderi he fought with distinguished success against both Malwa and Gujrat. In 1590 he captured the Musaman King of Malwa and in 1595 in alliance with Gujrat he totally subdued the Malwa State and annexed to his own dominion all the fine eastern Provinces of that kingdom and recovered the strong places of the Eastern Malhes. This was the time when the power of the Rajputs was at its zenith for Rana Sangh was now not merely the chief of a clan but the king of a country. The Rajputs revivd was however as short-lived as it was brilliant. A month before the capture of the capital of Malwa, Babar with his Mughals, had taken Delhi and in 1527 Rana Sangh at the head of all the chivalry of the clans encountered the invader at Fatepur Sikri when his army was utterly defeated after a desperate fight and the Rajput power hopelessly shattered. Next year Meda Rao with the flower of his clan fell in the defence of Chanderi which was sacked by Babar. The hegemony of the Rajputs which passed to Maldeo Rao the Rahtor chief of Jodhpur was no longer that of a victorious empire. The clans harassed first by the attacks of the Musaman King of Gujrat then by the Afghan Sher Shah of Delhi were finally either conquered or subdued or conciliated by the genius of the great Akbar—all but the distant Sesodia clan which however submitted to Jehangir in 1606.

Akbar took to wife the daughters of two great Rajput houses. He gave the chiefs or their heirs high rank in his armies sent them with their contingents to command on distant frontiers and succeeded in attaching the Rajputs generally. Under the early Mughal Emperors the chiefs constantly entered the imperial service as governors or generals there were at one time 47 Rajput contingents—and the leading charges of the cavalry became famous in the wars of the empire. Jahan and Shah Jahan were sons of Rajput mothers and Shah Jahan's eldest was protected at Udaipur up to the time of his accession. Thus whereas up to the time of Akbar the Rajput clans had to a certain extent maintained their political isolation though within limits that were always changing from the end of the 15th century their chiefs became founders of the Empire—which is their natural and honourable relation to the paramount power in India.

In the family wars which resulted in the accession of Aurangzeb the Rajputs were generally found on the side of the unfortunate khusman Dara. Still even Aurangzeb employed them in distant wars and the contingents did duty at his capital. He was however, too bigoted to retain and diminish the hold on them acquired by Akbar. Though one Rajput chief governed Kahol for him, while another commanded his armies in the Deccan he is said to have had them both poisoned. Towards the end of his reign he made bitter though unsuccessful war upon the Sesodias and deposed parts of Rajputana but he was very roughly handled by the united Rahtors and Sesodias and he had thoroughly alienated the clans before he died.

If Aurangzeb's impotent revulsion be excepted, it may be affirmed that, from Akbar's settlement of Rajputana up to the middle of the 18th century, the Rajput clans did all their seasons warfare under the imperial banner in foreign wars, or in the battles, between competitors for the throne of Delhi. When Aurangzeb died, the clans took sides as usual; and Shah Alam, the son of a Rajput mother, was largely indebted for his success to the swords of his kinsman. The obligations of allegiance, tribute, and military service to the Emperor, were undoubtedly recognised as defining the political status of the chiefs so long as an Emperor existed who could exact them. After the death of Aurangzeb, the Rajputs vainly attempted the formation of an independent league for their own defence, in the shape of a triple alliance between the three leading clans—the Sesodias, the Rahtor, and the Kachwaha, and this compact was renewed when Nadir Shah threw all Northern India into confusion. But the treaty contained a stipulation, that in the succession to the Rahtor and Kachwaha chiefships, the sons born of a wife from the Sesodias should have preference over all others; and this invidious preference was the fruitful source of disputes which soon split up the federation.

About 1755, the Marathas got possession of Ajmere, being called in by one of the Rahtor factions, and from this time Rajputana became involved in the general disorganisation of India. The primitive constitution of the clans rendered them quite unfit to resist the professional armies of Marathas and Pathans; and the Rajput States very nearly went down with the sinking Empire. The utter weakness of some of the chiefs, and the general disorder following the disappearance of a paramount authority in India, dislocated the tribal sovereignties, and encouraged the building of strongholds against predatory bands, the rallying of parties round petty leaders, and all the general symptoms of civil confusion. From dismemberment among rival adventurers, the States were rescued by the appearance of the English on the political stage of Northern India.

In 1803, all Rajputana, except the remote States of the north-west, had been virtually brought under the Maharras, who exacted tribute, held cities to ransom, annexed territory, and extorted subsidies. Scindhia and Holkar were deliberately exhausting the country, lacerating it by carages, or bleeding it scientifically by relentless tax-gatherers; while the fields had been desolated by thirty years' incessant war. Under this treatment, the whole group of ancient chieftainships was verging towards collapse, when Lord Wellesley struck in for the English interest. The victories of Generals Wellesley and Lake and the consequence was that the great predatory leaders plundered at their ease the States thus abandoned to them, and became arrogant and aggressive towards the British power. This lasted for about ten years and Rajputana was desolated during the interval. The roving bands increased and multiplied all over the country into Pindari hordes until in 1814 Amir Khan was living at free quarters in the heart of the Rajput States, with an army estimated at 30,000 horse and foot and a strong force of artillery. The two principal Rajput chieftainships of Jodhpur and Jajpur had brought themselves to the brink of extinction by the famous feud between the two rulers for the hand of a princess of Udaipur while the plundering Marathas and Pathanas encouraged and strenuously aided the two chiefs to ruin each other, until dispute was compromised upon the basis of poison by the girl.

In 1817 Sir Charles Metcalfe Resident at Delhi reported that the minor chiefs urgently pressed for British intervention, on the ground that they had a right to the protection of the paramount power, whose obvious business it was to maintain a order. At length in 1817 the Marquis of Hastings was at last able to carry into effect his plan for breaking up the Pindari empire, extinguishing the predatory system and making political arrangements that should effectually prevent its revival. Lawless banditti were to be put down, the general scramble for territory was to be ended by recognising lawful governments once for all, and settling the repossessions and by according to each recognised State British protection and territorial guarantee upon condition of acknowledging our right of arbitration and general supremacy in external disputes and political relations. Accordingly the Pindaris were put down, Amir Khan submitting and signing a treaty which constituted him the first ruler of the existing State of Tonk. By the end of 1818 all the Rajput States except Bharatpur, had executed treaties with the paramount power. There was a great restoration of plundered districts and re-creation of boundaries. Sindhia gave up the Provinces of Ajmere to the British and the pressure of the great Maratha powers upon Rajputana was permanently withdrawn.

Since then the political history of Rajputana has been comparatively uneventful. The greatest one of the motives of 1857, though dangerous while it lasted was short. The capture of the town of Kutah which had been held by the mutineers of that State, in March 1858 marked the extinction of armed rebellion in the Province. The only serious disorders in Rajputana had been caused by mutinous mercenaries in the service either of the British Government or of the chiefs. There was no question of internal treason, or of plots for the subversion of chiefs or dynasties; and the country at large probably suffered little.

Caste.—The geographical distribution of the Rajput clans is broadly as follows:—The Rajputs are probably the most numerous of all; they greatly predominate in the north-west, in the country of Marwar, Bikaner, and Jaisalmer State of Kishangarh, and all about the central portion of Ajmere. In the Bhattis rule. In the north-east States is the Kachwaha clan very strong in Alwar and in Jaipur; some districts in the north of Jaipur belong altogether in the hands of the Shalkhawats sept of the Kachwahas. The Chauhans once famous in the history of the north-west of India are now most influential in the Eastern States where the Hara sept has been long dominant, and the Deoras another sept of the Chauhans still hold Sirohi while the Khichis also belong to the same stock. In the north-west the last trace of the ancient pre-eminence of the Chauhans at Delhi is to be found in the petty Chiefship of Nimona, held by Chauhans who claim descent from Prithvi Raj, and in the extreme north-west the Rao of Kusalwar in Banswara is the head of a Chauhan colony. All over Mewar and the north-western States of Rajputana below the Aravallis, the Sisodia clan predominates, the head being the Maharana of Udaipur the eldest family of the purest blood of the whole Rajput caste. Among other clans of high descent and historic celebrity which were once powerful but have now dwindled in numbers and lost their dominion may be named the Parbhar the Pramara and the Solankhya.

The clans are of course the aristocracy of the country and they hold the land to a very large extent either as receivers of rent or as cultivators. As unadulterated families of pure descent as a landed nobility and as the keepers of ruling chiefs they are also the aristocracy of India and their social prestige may be measured by observing that there is hardly a ruling family (as distinguished from a caste) in all India which does not claim descent from an irregular connection with one of these Rajput stocks. The Rajput proper is very proud of his well-earned reputation and most punctilious on points of etiquette. The tradition of common ancestry has preserved among them the feeling which permits a poor Rajput yeoman to hold himself as good a gentleman as the most powerful landlord. Primogeniture exists. But the custom of equal division of inheritance is more or less in force among the Rakhors of the Malabar country, among the Shalkhawats sept of the Kachwahas and a certain number of others. The marriage customs are strictly exogamous, a marriage within the clan being regarded as incestuous, thus each clan depends on the other clans for its wives for of course no Rajput can take a wife elsewhere than from Rajputs.

ULWAR

In 1567 A. D. Uday Karan Chief of the Kachwaha tribe of Rajput took his seat in the saddle of the terror now known as Jyore. His eldest son Bar Singh was the ancestor of the present ruling family of Ulwar, who are of the Naruka branch.

Partap Singh was the first Chief of Ulwar and was styled Maharao, he having cast off his allegiance to Jyore about the year 1770 A. D., is after the famous battle of Pinda.

Paigarh was the first fort of Impotanea built and possessed by Partap Singh and his independence may be said to have commenced when he entered Uwar in 1775 A.D. and took over possession of the fort from the Dhuripore Jats. He died in 1792 A.D.

Partap Singh originally only owned a few villages, and was known as Chief of Macher, a small town in the south of the Uwar State. He was however a man of extraordinary ability and raised himself to a very high place in Jeypoor where he was held to be equal in rank with Chaudhury, the premier noble of that State. The following are the Chiefs who have ruled Uwar:—

First Chief Partap Singh succeeded by Maharao Bukhtawar Singh (adopted)

Second Bukhtawar Singh succeeded by Maharao Bano Singh (adopted)

Third Bano Singh succeeded by Maharao Sheodan Singh

Fourth Sheodan Singh succeeded by Maharaja Mangal Singh (adopted)

Fifth „ Mangal Singh who was the first Maharaja, died in May 1898, and was succeeded by his son Maharaja Jey Singh the present and sixth Chief and the second Maharaja.

Jey Singh was 14 years old on the 9th of July this year and is now a student at the Mayo College, Ajmer. While his minority is a minor the administration of the State is carried on by a Council of Regency, styled 'The State Council' composed of four members acting under the general supervision of the Political Agent and aided by his advice.

During the Mutiny much loyal assistance was rendered to the British Government by Maharao Bano Singh who arrested all fugitive mutineers that sought refuge in his territory and handed them over to British authority.

The present territory of Uwar is a little over 3,000 sq. miles in area and according to the census of 1891 contains a population of about three-fourths of a million, which

The Rajputana Malwa Railway runs through the centre of the State north to south, passing through the capital, Uwar.

The State is bounded on the north-west by Patiala, on the north by Nabha and Gurgaon, on the east by Phartport and on the south and west by Jypore.

Descriptive Tracts

The five tracts into which the State is divided are detailed as follows —

1 Raht on the north-west border which is the country of the Chauhan Rajputs. The present Chief of this family claims to be the representative of the celebrated Prithi Raj King of Delhi, who was killed by Mahommadan invaders.

2 Waj on the western border and inhabited chiefly by Rajputs of the Sheikhwat clan, the most important one in Jypore.

3 Rajawat on the south-west which used to be the territory of the powerful Rajawat Rajputs of Jypore.

4 Barukhand on the south-east.

5 Mewat the largest and most important tract situated in the centre of the State in which is the capital city Ulwar.

Ridges of hills generally parallel, and usually running from south to north are met with throughout the State but the general run of the hills is from south-west to north-east.

Physical Hills

The highest peaks vary from 1,700 to 2,400 feet above sea level and the highest part of the State is the middle and west and the south-west portion. The northern portion of the State is the most open.

The chief rivers and streams are the Sabi, the Ruparri, the Chauhar-Sahi and the Abgarh. The former forming part of the southern western boundary of Ulwar is the largest in Ulwar but its banks are high and its bed too sandy for cultivation.

The city is admirably situated in the centre of the State in the Mewat tract.

Ulwar City

According to local legends the fort and city are said to have been built by the Nalumba Rajputs many many centuries ago but the date is not known.

The first mention of Mewat by Mahommadan historians is found in Tarikh-i-Feroz Shah where it is described as belonging to Emperor Shams-ud-din Altamash who died in 1225 A.D. but it is mentioned by Hindu historians as far back as the eighth century. The first mention of Ulwar is found in Farshta, who talks of Ulwar Rajputs fighting against Ajmer Rajputs in 1195 A.D.

This dome is conspicuous and quite a unique specimen.

Batch Jang was probably a Khatri, and his Hindu origin would seem to be established by the inscription on the stone being a Vedic character and the date given in both Samvat (1104) and Hijra (Mahomedan date).

Also the college at the Kotwal Tehsil High School Dispensary, Jail, and the various other institutions which are the work of Rajput nobles and Thakurs are very good.

Nine miles or more west of the city is the famous Sissah Lake which has done so much for Uwar. It is formed by a masonry dam about 45 feet high and is fed by the river which is an affluent of the Ravi river by Maharaja Ran Singh in 1815. When Maharaja Man Singh added some six feet to its height.

Two aqueducts bring its waters to Uwar to which is due the fertility and beauty of the gardens and orchards. The lake when full is some one and a half miles long and its breadth of a mile wide at the broadest point and abounds in fish. It is a beautiful place to the neighbourhood. A quaint palace with a beautiful view of the lake.

The site of the famous battle field of Laswari where Lord Lake defeated the Maharajas in 1803 is 20 miles east of Uwar city.

The State is divided into two chief Tehsil's namely Thara and Behror to the north and south of them come Lodhinda, Ramgarh, Uwar, and Bansur and on the southern border are Kachhar, Luchmangarh, Rajgarh, and Thara Ghari.

Tribes (Hindus).

There are no pastoral people without settled homes in the State.

Of the inhabitants about 1,50,000 are Hindus, of whom more than one-third are cultivators.

About 1,50,000 are Mussalmans, of whom about two-thirds are cultivators.

The Hindus consist of Brahmīns, Rājputs, Jāt, Ahīrs, Gōjars, Dhakars, Banias, Wlōss, tradesmen, and other Hindus of various castes

The Rājputs, or Thākurs of Ujwar, although not forming one twentieth part of the population, are the ruling class, and those amongst them who possess jagirs are considered the aristocracy

Chauhāns are in the north,

Shekhawats to west;

Rājwats to the south west and Narukās chiefly elsewhere

About half the Brahmīns are agriculturists

The Mīnas are of two classes, Zemindars (cultivators) and Chowkidars (watchmen)

The latter are a criminal class and are those who elsewhere give work to the Thug and Vagabond Department. They are kept under strict surveillance according to the rules in force, and so well are they managed that they now give the State little trouble

Of the Mussalmāns, the Meos are the most important; in fact they are the most numerous race in the State, forming as

Tribes (Mussulmans) they do about one-eighth of the entire population, and the agricultural portion of them is far greater than that of any other class

Their clan Rājput origin. They are all Mussulmans in name but their village duties are the same as those of their Hindu neighbours, and they keep Hindu as well as Mahommadaan festivals

About one-seventh of the Rājputs or Thākurs are Mussulmans

Amongst the other Mussulmans are the Khwāzadas, the old rulers of Mewar. They are numerically small, but are the best cultivators in the State next to the Meos. They are socially above the Meos and are better Mussulmans

There are, however, no great feudatories or powerful nobles within the State. The one feudatory is Nimrān, on the north-west border

Feudatories and great nobles.

Previous to 1863 the relations between Ujwar and Nimrān caused much trouble to the British Government, as Ujwar declared Nimrān to be a mere jagirdar, and the latter claimed complete independence. Eventually it was decided in 1863 and agreed to by both parties, that the Rājā of Nimrān Marathas at a yearly rental of about 5,000 rupees, and on the acquisition of the country by the British they produced annually from 400-500 tons of lead. The Ajmere military magazine was the chief customer and on its ceasing to take the metal in 1846, the mines were closed.

Tradition refers the foundation of Ajmere city to Raja Aja, a Chauhan Rajput, about the year 145 A.D. Aja at first attempted to build his stronghold on the Nigrah pahar or "serpent hill," about 3 miles west of the present town, but as his evil genius destroyed each night the walls erected during the day time, he transferred his fortress to the neighbouring hill of Taragarh. Here he constructed a fort, which he called "Gash Bitt," and to the valley below founded a city which he called after his own name Ajmere. He retired as a hermit towards the close of his life to the mountains about 10 miles from the capital, where the temple of Ajapai still commemorates his death place.

Authentic history at Ajmere begins with the advent of the Mahomedan conquerors. In A.D. 635 the Chauhan ruler joined the Hindu alliance to resist the first efforts of Muhammadan aggression, but was defeated and slain by the invaders. Mahmud of Ghazni took the route, via Ajmere in his famous expedition against the temple of Somnath in the year 1025. He sacked the city, but had no leisure to reduce the Fort of Taragarh which gave shelter to the towns people. Prithi Raja, the last of the Chauhan dynasty, was adopted by the King of Delhi and thus became ruler of Delhi and Ajmere. This marks the culminating point in the independent history of the district, which in 1193 A.D. was submerged under the tide of invasion, and became dependent on the Ghaznevi dynasty, installed as Emperors of Delhi.

Under the Mogul dynasty, Akbar included the territory in a "subahat" which took its name from the town of Ajmere and included the whole of Rajasthan. It formed an integral part of the Mogul Empire for 191 years, from the reign of Akbar himself to that of Mahomed Shah. Akbar built himself a fortified palace just outside the city. Jehangir and Shahjahan often honoured it with their presence, and Sir Thomas Roe, the Ambassador of James I, presented his credentials to the former Emperor at the Ajmere Court on the 3rd December 1615. This envoy also visited a "house of pleasure of the kings" behind the Taragarh hill "a place of much melancholy delight and security" post as he called himself, walked from Jerusalem to Ajmere and spent only £2-10s-0d on the road. He dated his book at Ajmere, "Thomas Coryat, traveller for the English Wits greeting. From the court of the great Mogul at Ajmere (London 1616)." A vivid account of the court at Ajmere, of the city and neighbourhood, is preserved in Sir Thomas Roe's Journal, 1615-1616.

During the first stages of decline in the Mogul Empire, the Marwar chieft obtained possession of Ajmere, but in 1750 it passed to the Marathas, who held

Oodeypore (Meywar)

The Oodeypore family now representing the Sisodia clan of Rajputs, is the highest in rank and dignity of the royal races of Rajputs in India

History of the Oodeypore State

They belong to the elder branch of the Suryabans, or children of the sun, and claim descent from the great Rama who reigned at Ayodhya (Oudh) at the time when Yudhishtira of the Lunar Race reigned at Indraprastha (Delhi). His descendant Koushika (about A. D. 1450) emigrated from Oudh to Ujjain, where the Suryabans resided till their Capital Balahrish near the present city of Bhavnagar was destroyed by an invasion of foreigners from the north (probably Persians).

The Queen of the Ruling Prince was absent on a pilgrimage near Mount Abu, and so escaped the general slaughter. She took refuge in a cave, and after giving birth to a son, sacrificed herself on a funeral pyre. The boy called Keshardis, or more commonly known as Goha (cave-born) originated the Gohilot or Gehilot clan of Rajputs, was brought up in the family of a Brahman priest, and in course of time received the mark of chiefship from a Bhil who with blood from his own finger, impressed the Tika on Goha's head. This practice was maintained for many generations at the succession ceremonies of the Chief of Meywar.

It seems that Goha afterwards reigned at Idar, which for eight generations, was held by his descendants until the Bhils rose and killed the ruler, whose infant son, Bapa, was saved and removed to Naglodra, about 10 miles north of Oodeypore.

The family now termed themselves Aharyas instead of Gehlots—the name was derived from Ahar, a village near to Oodeypore, where stand the cenotaphs of the Royal families of Oodeypore.

Eventually Bapa sought refuge with the Mori chief of Chitor, then the ruling lord of Malwa. Later on he led the Chitor forces against the Mahomedans from Sind, defeated them, and ultimately made himself master of Chitor, and about A. D. 783 founded the kingdom of Meywar.

The following reigns of Rana, Bikramjit, and Odey Sing were remarkable for severe struggles with Bahadur Shah, king of Gujarat, and the Emperor Akbar, who captured Chitor 1568 A.D. Odey Sing the chief, then led to the Anava'll Hillia and founded the present city of Oodeypore, 1568-1572. His son Pustab was a brave warrior, but without resources. He first desolated the plains of Meywar to impede Mahomedan invasion, but later on, through the patriotic help of his Minister Bheem Shah, obtained resources, reconquered the country, and recovered Chitor. His life was in one of his battles saved by the chief of Sadil, who raised the royal insignia over his own head, and sacrificed himself for his sovereign. To this day the descendants of the Sadil house are privileged to use the royal insignia.

During the succeeding reign his son Amra in 1615 gave allegiance to the Emperor Jchaogir and Mahomedan supremacy lasted for nearly a century,

In 1700 an alliance was formed with Jodhpore and Jaipur for mutual defence against aggression. It was stipulated that sons of Oodeypore Princes should succeed to the throne in preference to elder sons by other mothers. This led to constant quarrel and to a ruinous war between Marwar and Jaipur, whose chiefs both aspired to the hand of the Princess Krishna Kuarl of Oodeypore. To preserve peace poison was given by her father to the ill-fated Princess, and as does that time for her generations the ruling chiefs have all been childless, the Rajputs consider that the taking of so innocent life has been avenged.

Owing to internal dissensions the Marhattas were called in as arbiters an evil day for Meywar, as the country was harried by Scindia and Holkar, and afterwards by Amikshah, the Pindaris, to such a degree that British protection was preferred and obtained.

In 1817 a treaty was concluded with Maharana Bheem Singh

In 1833 the District of Merwara, which had previously been managed by a Triple Government (Mutch, Meywar and Marwar) was taken under British Administration, and the Merwara Battalion was raised.

was called on to pay a share of its maintenance, which it does to the present day.

In 1833 the present Meywar Bhil Corps located at Kherwara was raised, as it was found necessary to have constant expedition to preserve peace with the wild and restless Bhils and Grassseas, who, while owing a nominal allegiance to Oodeypore, hold landed rights over which the Maharana has no power. The Meywar Durbar contributes largely towards its support.

Meywar Bhil Corps.

During the time of the Indian Mutiny, 1857-58, Maharana Saroop Sing was conspicuous for his loyal assistance, and the protection afforded to the European refugees from Neemuch.

war cry (kiki) which resounding along the hill tops, summons swarms of their people armed with bows and arrows all ready for the fray.

The city is very picturesquely situated about 2,000 feet above sea level, on a ridge above the Pichola lake, so called from Oodeypore City and the old village on whose site the palaces now stand. It is surrounded by a wall with six gates, and contains a population of about 30,000 Hindus and 8,000 Mahomedans.

There is no trade peculiar to the city, it is supported by the expenditure of the court, and its nobles, most of whom have residences in the place.

On the lake are the island palaces of Jug Mandar and Jug Newas, constructed by the Alhasans Jagat Singh, about 1630 and 1733 A. D. The former gave shelter to the Emperor Shah Jehan, and later on to many European families who fled from Neemuch during the mutiny of 1857. Just across the lake is the Khas Odi, a shooting box, much frequented by the Maharaja, where hundreds of wild pig are daily fed.

About four miles across the lake on hills, about 3,500 feet high, stands conspicuous the Fort of Sajjagarh, well worth a visit for the extensive view of the Oodeypore valley and the surrounding Hilly Tracts.

In the city and its suburbs are the palaces of the Shambu Newas and Bari Mahal, the temple of Jagan Nath dedicated to Vishnu, and the Vrata Hall, erected in honour of the Jubilee of Her Majesty the Queen Empress. In front of the building is placed a marble statue of Her Gracious Majesty which was unveiled by His Royal Highness the late Duke of Clarence when he visited India in 1890. The Goolab Bagh (State Gardens), superintended by Mr. Storey, are tastefully arranged and well kept up. It contains a good cricket ground, a small deer park, and a good collection of wild animals, including some fine tigers and panthers.

East of the garden is the State Jail, containing about 800 prisoners, and close by on the other side the Walter Hospital for females, under the superintendence of a lady doctor—the foundation stone was laid by Lady Dufferin in 1893.

Further on in the city are the State High School and the Lansdowne Charitable Hospital, inaugurated by Lord Lansdowne when visiting Oodeypore in 1890. It is largely attended, and is under the supervision of the Residency Surgeon.

There is also a hospital maintained by the Presbyterian Mission, which is under the care of Revd. J. Shepherd who, for nearly 30 years, has been connected with the Meywar State.

About two miles from the city on the way to Chitor is the village of Ahar, where are ruins of an ancient city, and the crematory and cenotaphs of all the Ranas of Meywar since Oodeypore became the capital.

It meets another range on the east. The city fills up the angle between the two ridges and a small pass at the point of junction leads into a valley which is situated Amber the old capital.

Jeypore is lighted with gas and supplied with water which is pumped up from a river two miles distant.

The principal public institutions in the city are —

(1) The School of Industrial Art (2) The English and Sanskrit Colleges (3) The Public Library (4) The Mint (5) A large number of temples. There is a fine collection of fountains at the end of the street facing the Tripolia or central gate of the palace. The palace occupies a seventh of the city. It contains besides the private residence of the Chief the public offices the old astronomical observatory of Sava Jey Singh the library and the stables in the grounds of which animal combats are sometimes exhibited. In the Ram Nivas Public gardens to the south of the town there are (1) a large Zoological collection (2) The Mayo Hospital and (3) the Albert Hall.

The foundation of the hospital was laid by the Earl of Mayo in 1875 and his statue stands before it. In the year 1895—96 646 in-patients and 63,335 out-patients were treated and 830 major and 303 minor operations were performed. The city is a Vaccination Department with 46 operators who vaccinated 61,901 children last year. In the same period in all the 25 Medical Institutions of the State 85,742 patients (of whom 37,331 were women) obtained medical relief.

The Albert Hall (which was founded in 1876 by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales) was opened in 1877. It contains a public hall and an Economic Educational and Industrial Art Museum which attracts about a quarter of a million visitors annually. Outside the town is a Meteorological Observatory of the first class which is furnished with automatic instruments. The above mentioned institutions have been under the present Residency Surgeon for 16 years past.

In the School of Industrial Art which was established in 1866 technical education is afforded to boys of the artisan class. The Mahajana College teaches up to the M.A. standard and affords an excellent education to more than 1,200 boys.

The city is also a Sanskrit College which attracts pupils from distant parts of India.

The Public Works Department is a very important one in Jeypore. It has been for 29 years under Colonel D. S. Jacob C. I. S.

It is impossible to do more than enumerate the most important works which have been carried out under his superintendence at a cost of about 153 lakhs of Rao Bikaji was killed in a skirmish close to the City of Bikaner in A. D. 1504. He left seven widows and ten sons. The widows became suttee.

The present Maharaja Ganga Singh is the 22nd ruler of Bikaner. He was born on the 3rd of October 1880, and succeeded his brother Maharaja Dungar Singh on the 31st August 1887.

In addition to the Chiefs of Jodhpur and Bikaner, the rulers of the following States are descended from Rao Jodhaji and are known as Rathor Rajputs, viz., Idar, Kislangarh, Jhabna, Rutam, Salana and Samtan.

The 6th ruler Rao Singh was given the title of Raja by the Emperor Akbar. The date of this grant is not given but it was probably about A. D. 1580.

The 9th ruler Karan Singh was born in A. D. 1606 and came to the throne in 1631. He was the most famous soldier of them all. He and his sons Padam Singh and Kesri Singh distinguished themselves greatly by fighting for the Emperor Aurangzeb. On one occasion the Emperor summoned the Rajputana chieftains to Attock. They began to have suspicions that he intended to interfere with the religion and determined to return home. They elected Raja Karan Singh as their leader and saluted him with the cry "Jai Jangadhar Badshah" which means "Victory to the King of the desert." This is now the motto of the family.

The State still holds three villages in the Deccan which were granted to Raja Karan Singh by the Emperor Aurangzeb.

The 10th ruler Anup Singh received the title of Maharajah from the Emperor for his services in the conquest of Golconda. He died in A. D. 1638 at the age of 40.

For 350 years the Chiefs of Bikaner were perpetually fighting. On eight occasions Bikaner has been invaded by Jodhpur armies and on three occasions Bikaner armies have captured Jodhpur.

The origin of the word Rathor by which this clan of Rajputs is known is as follows—

Maharaj, an ancestor of Rao Sajjan, used to worship Rameshri Devi. He was anxious that a son should be born to him and his wishes being fulfilled, he called him Rathbar or born of the blessings of Rameshri and so the descendants of Rathbar are called Rathors.

The Bikaner State covers an area of 22,310 square miles. According to the census of 1891 the population was 831,943.

Extent of the State. Its population and revenue.

The revenue fluctuates considerably as the crops entirely depend on the rainfall.

The ordinary revenue last year was Rs. 19,77,377. This may be considered as above the average.

numerous members of the money lending class, who bring home the gains they have made in almost every city of India and build themselves lordly abodes in the native place. Unfortunately these mansions have not been erected on any plan but wherever the owner could get a piece of land to build on.

It is small and is now chiefly occupied by the principal temple that of Lakshmi Narayanji which was built by Rao Lunkaran the grandfather of A. D. Singh. The Maharaja of Bikaner is styled the Dewan of Lakshmi Narayanji.

JODHPUR (MARWAR).

The State of Marwar is bounded on the north by Bikaner and the Shalkha wall district of Jodhpur on the north east by Jeypore and Kishenghar on the east by Ajmere Merwara on the south east by Meywar, on the south by Sirohi Palanpur and Runa of Kuch on south west by Tiar Pothohar district of Sind and on the west and north-west by Jaisalmer.

It lies between Lat $24^{\circ} 26'$ and $27^{\circ} 41'$ N and between Long $70^{\circ} 6'$ and $75^{\circ} 44'$ E. Its greatest north-south-east and south-west extent is about 30 miles and its maximum breadth is about 100 miles. It contains an area of 34,963 square miles.

The configuration of the country may be briefly described as a vast sandy plain with in the south-east third of the district or to the south of the Luni River various isolated hills of the same description as the Aravalli range but none of the hills are sufficiently elevated or extensive to deserve the name of mountains.

The most prominent of these formations as we recede from the Aravallis are—the Sunda hills in Jaisalpur, the Rojaulis in Jalore. The Chhappan ka Pahar in Sawai.

The geological characteristics of the country are somewhat complex and vary considerably as the district is traversed from the east to the west. The south-eastern boundary was Marwara and the Aravalli range part of which towards the south is within the frontier of Marwar consists principally of metamorphic rocks which rise precipitously from the Marwar plains to some heights attaining an elevation of 3,000 ft.

Passing from the Aravalli towards the west the surface is found to be sandy with conically shaped rocks rising here and there as far as the Luni. After crossing the Luni such hills are less numerous and sandstone appears.

abandoned the cause of Ram Singh, and made terms with his opponent on the basis of the cession of Ajmere, which had been almost continuously held by the Rathores since Ajit Singh's time.

Maharaja Bakht Singh—(A. D. 1732) who ousted his nephew Ram Singh, was the last Rathore chief of great personal prowess as a fighting man, and his character and exploits have made a great impression on his tribe. He is said to have tried to atone for his patrie by governing justly. "Bakht Shahi naa" or Bakht Singh a justice is still a household word. Indeed Bakht Singh is regarded as the type of a brave, justice-loving Rajput Prince, and his example in the present day influences gallant Rathores.

Maharaja Brij Singh—(A. D. 1772). During his time the battle of Tonga took place in which the Maharattas under De Bologne were utterly routed and Scindia compelled to abandon not only the field but all his conquests for a time. Brij Singh recovered Ajmere temporarily. He is looked upon as a model administrator. The expression for the millennium in Jodhpur is Brij-Sara. When some forty-six years ago, the Paramount Power first interposed to check an amano-mant in Marwar, Brij Singh's code of raja were, with modifications, made the basis of the administration. Brij Singh forbade under severe penalties the sale and consumption of wine and the use of an mal food.

Maharaja Bibi Singh—(A. D. 1792) grandson of Brij Singh is chiefly notable for having put to death all possible competitors to the throne. During the twelve years of his reign no famine or scarcity affected the country.

Maharaja Man Singh—(A. D. 1801). His rule lasted through nearly 40 years of discord and confusion. He was once defeated and besieged in Jodhpur in A. D. 1738, by the Jeypore and other Rajwara levies, but managed to bribe their leader into retreating. He was the chief who first entered into permanent relations with the British Government by a treaty in 1817. The lamentable disorder in the administration necessitated the march of a British force to Jodhpur of which it held military occupation for five months until order was restored.

Maharaja Takht Singh—(A. D. 1831). He was adopted from the Edar family, an offshoot of that of Jodhpur descended from Maharaja Ajit Singh. Owing to constant disputes between the Barbar and the Thakars, the affairs of Marwar remained in an unsatisfactory state during his reign, but he was loyal and did good service during the mutiny. He saved the life of many Europeans by giving them a safe refuge at Jodhpur.

Maharaja Jawant Singh—(A. D. 1833). During his father's time, he was placed in charge of the country at the foot of the Aravallis. There he displayed much activity in checking the very troublesome tribe of the Minas. His reign was one of steady progress and success. Under his rule, ry a x The history of the Baroda State stretches over a comparatively short period, for though the Alakhia invasions of History

Gaekwar established himself at Songad in 1719, it is not till after the fall of the capital of Gujarat in 1733 that this Mahratta State can be said to have really sprung into existence, out of the ruins of the Mughal Empire.

* There seem to be three distinct stages by which the State has reached its present rank among the Sovereign Powers in India.

3 First we find Gujarat invaded on several sides by bands of marauders under certain enterprising Mahratta chiefs among whom the most distinguished is the Senapati Dabhade, intent as yet only on acquiring from the Moghals the right to levy tribute, at the outset on y an occasional tribute but eventually specific cesses.

4 The second stage is that in which the Senapati or Commander-in-Chief of the Mahratta army and his chief adherent Damaji Gackwar, effect a lodgment in Gujarat and exercise a contested sway over a portion of the great plain, from their fastnesses in the hills, unassisted in their struggle with the Nughals, except by the more turbulent Hindu classes subject to the Empire and by the hill tribes. Their allegiance is to the Satara Raja alone, and the growth of their power is dangerous to the Peshwa and the chiefs who ally with him. Defeated by the Peshwa, forced to acknowledge his supremacy and to cede to him half his dominions, the Gackwar, who had now supplanted the first Senapati's heir obtains the assistance of the Poona Court in driving the Mohammedans out of Gujarat, thereby achieving a task which he could not have brought to a successful issue alone or in opposition to other Mahratta rivals.

5 The third stage is marked by the rapid rise of the Gakhwar family, as well as an object of a version to the Peshwa, to a family dissensions and internal mutual disorganize the State. Then at a terrible crisis, the minister of a semi-imbecile prince throws himself on the protection of the British, and at the price of a territorial cession obtains from them the assistance of their arms and money. The subsequent history of the State may from this point be divided into two periods, (1) that form the beginning of the present century up to 1819, during which time the Bombay Government exercised a certain

6. To relate in detail the early history of Baroda would be simply to describe how a portion of the ancient Illoda Kingdom of Ashilawada, now and of the misdeeds and ruled alone. But this reservation was less complete than might have been because for a variety of reasons the inference of the British Government varied in intensity from time to time according to the exigencies of the moment and the character of the ruling prince.

10. The name by which the rulers of the Baroda State are generally known is that of Gaekwar. The name The Gaekwar Family means the desman and doubtless owes its origin to the pastoral calling of the early ascendants of the house.

11. The family was a Mahatta one first rose out of obscurity in 1720-21 when at the battle of Rapar Dattaji Gaekwar so distinguished himself that Khand Rao Dhabade, who held the rank of Senapati or Commander-in-Chief of the Mahatta army, strongly recommended him to Raja Shahu of Satara and procured his appointment as second-in-command with the title of Shams-e-Bahador or the Valiant Sword. Dattaji, dying soon after was succeeded in his office by his nephew Paji Rao Gaekwar, who continued to be the Lieutenant of Trimbak Rao Dhabade the son and successor of the Senapati and the two together commenced their career of marauding and conquest of Gwalior. But in 1733 the Peshwa Baji Rao ordered him and his son and Khan the Morar Govenor of Czeret a cession of half his outposts to the revenue and he demanded that provision should be made for the maintenance of the grant engaged to prevent Mahatta rebellion. Dattaji was not willing to do this and he demanded to be put in possession of the grant. The cause was specially argued at Paji Gaekwar's request by the Senapati and himself in possession of the stronghold of Satara and by commanding the principal route from the Deccan into Gwalior and commanding influence over the Bhils and Kols of the region. In some years he had contributed to the expenses of his annual campaigns.

12. As a result Trimbak Rao Dhabade and Paji Gaekwar banded together and effected a Mahatta chieftain to oppose the Peshwa at a little distance near Baroda on the 1st of April 1733 the confederates were defeated and Trimbak Rao Dhabade was killed. His infant son Jaswant Rao was however, appointed to the office of Senapati while Paji Gaekwar was confirmed in his former rank of Lieutenant or Munshi with the additional title of 'Sena Khas Khe', while being interpreted means 'Chief of the special or private troops'. It was further agreed that Jaswant should have the entire management in charge a paying half the contributions to the Peshwa and accounting for a fourth of the countries not mentioned in the deed of cession given by Saibuland Khan to the Peshwa. This deed however had been in the meantime disavowed by the Emperor of Delhi. Saibuland Khan was removed from office and superseded by Ali Singh, Raja of Jodhpore. On this Paji declared open war against the Emperor's

16 The death of Damaji in 1718 was the signal for family dissensions which eventually brought the State into representation with the British Government. Damaji had three lawful wives and male issue by each. His first wife had one son Govind Rao but the eldest son Sayaj Rao as well as Fatch Singh were born of his second wife. Govind Rao was at Poona at the time of his father's death and on paying a large nazar to the Peshwa Malhar Rao and agreeing to the arrangement concluded with Damaji three years before he procured his recognition as successor to his father's office of Sena Khishket. But Fatch Singh's energy and talent placed his brother on the throne at Basoh and he himself met the regency. He then proceeded to persevere to procure a reversal of the Peshwa's decision in favor of Govind Rao. Madhu Rao Peshwa whose object was to divide the family and thereby reduce the Gaekwar's power eventually admitted Sayaj's right and thus the half brothers Govind Rao and Fatch Singh were made implacable enemies. To strengthen his position Fatch Singh made overtures for an alliance with the British Government in 1772 but his proposal was at that time rejected. Colonel Keellogh and Raghoba a campaign in Gzerat was followed by a rupture between the court of Poona and the British Government and this occasioned an offensive and defensive treaty with Fatch Singh concluded by General Goddard on the 20th January 1780. The treaty was virtually annulled on the conclusion of peace with the Poona Government two years later.

17 Fatch Singh Gaekwar died on the 23rd December 1789. Manaji the younger son by a third wife of Damaji assumed charge of the government for his brother Sayaj and was recognised by the Peshwa on payment of a large nazar. At his death in 1793, he was succeeded by Govind Rao to whom the Peshwa leased his share of the revenue of the Ahmedabad Districts. In September 1800 Govind Rao died and his eldest son Anand Rao was acknowledged as his successor. He was of weak intellect and the power of the State was usurped by his legitimate half brother Kanoy Rao. The Mowat of Anand Rao made overtures to the British Government to subdue the rebellious sepoys of Kanoy were reduced and if Anand Rao were saved from the domination of his Arab mercenaries whose demands for payment of arrears had become most menacing while the fidelity was more than doubtful. The requisite assistance was given, Kanoy was removed to Madras, the Arabs crushed and the money advanced or borrowed on British guarantee for payment of the troops whose numbers were reduced.

18 In 1815 in consequence of the murder of an envoy from Baroda the well known and adhar Shastri the connection between the Gaekwar and the Peshwa the head of the Mahratta confederacy was broken off by the British Government. The latter had to renounce all future rights against the Gaekwar and to accept an annual tribute of 4 lakhs of rupees in lieu of all claims but the Gaekwar was released from the payment of even this small tribute, on the overthrow of the Peshwa.

33 The population is composed as under:—

Jains	50,732
Mahomedians	188,740
Parsees	8,05
Christians	6,66

34 The Amreli Division includes the districts Okhamandal and Amreli, in both of which British officers are located as Assistants to the Agent to the Governor General at Baroda.

Okhamandal is in the extreme west of Kattywar and is inhabited mainly by a lawless tribe known as Wagheers, a blend of Mahomedan and Hindoo strains. They used to be notorious pirates so much so that the British Government were compelled to take possession of Okhamandal in 1816 but handed it over to the Gaekwar in full sovereignty in 1817. The Wagheers frequently resisted the Gaekwar's authority and in 1839 entered into open rebellion which necessitated the employment of British troops to subdue them. Since then a British officer has been stationed at Dwarka the headquarters of the District. He is an Assistant to the Agent to the Governor General, and has full criminal jurisdiction over the Wagheers and other cognate tribes; he is also Commandant of the Okhamandal Battalion which is maintained by the Gaekwar.

35 Amreli.—This is the headquarters of the Gaekwar's possessions in Kattywar. The troubles which led to the appointment of a British officer to supervise the District of Okhamandal also made it necessary to appoint a similar Assistant at Amreli, to form a medium of communication between officers of the Kattywar Agency and the Gaekwar's local officials. A regiment of the Gaekwar's troops is stationed at Dhar near the Ghil Jungles which are the resort of the lawless characters of Kattywar, and is under the superintendence of a European officer of the Gaekwar's service who is answerable to the Assistant to the Agent to the Governor General, at Amreli.

36 The revenue of the State for the past financial year amounted to one-half crores, Baroda currency. Of this amount about eight lakhs consists of tribute from the Gaekwar's tributaries in Kathiawar, Rewa Kantha, Mahi Kantha, and Palanpur.

37 The troops maintained by the Gaekwar are as follows:—

5 1391 Branch to Vitawgam in the Ahmedabad District

Full jurisdiction ceded

The construction of several of her small branches is now in view

Besides these His Highness the Gaekwar has liberally supported the Ahmedabad Prant and Tapli Valley (or Surat Nandohar) lines now under construction by private companies

39 The Lakshmi Pata Palace is on the outskirts of the city on the south side. The word Vilas is a Sanskrit word meaning pleasure or "abode of pleasure. Lakshmi Vasa is the abode of pleasure of Lakshmi the Goddess of Wealth. It was built by the Gaekwar the original architect was Nao Mamtai. The design was made in 1870 and designed by Mr R. Chisholm. The style is known as the Hindu Saracenic. The cost was about 30 lakhs.

40 The Matsya Palace is situated about four miles south of Baroda near the village of Makarpura from which it takes its name. It was built by Khandi Rao Gaekwar who designed it and designed to live in it. He was a keen sportsman and built the palace in which to accommodate a hunt to his favourite deer preserve where he used constantly to go and hunt black bucks with his Cheetahs.

41 The Nazar Bagh Palace in the heart of the city was built by Maharao Gaekwar both of Khandi Rao. The latter hated his brother-in-law the mighty and for the simple reason that Khandi Rao had built the lofty Makarpura Palace and made two silver guns. He built a tall lotus tower. Nazar Bagh Palace and made two gold guns. Unfortunately his jealousy and vindictiveness prompted him to demolish Makarpura and pull down the out-houses and the Residence of Har Highness Jannabai Rao his brother's widow and as an illustration he cared nothing for hunting he suffered the garden and palace to fall in ruins. The present Chief however has spent a good deal of money in restoring it and laying out the grounds and it is now in perfect order. When in Baroda the Maharaja divides his time between Lakshmi Vilas and Makarpura which is connected with Baroda by telegraph and telephone.

42 The State Jewels are kept in the Nazar Bagh Palace. They were valued recently by a commission of experts at over three crores of rupees. The diamond necklace worn by the Gaekwar on State occasions is also valued at 40 lakhs the biggest stone being assessed at 9 lakhs. This is the Brazilian diamond known as the Star of the South and was discovered in 1953 in the mines of Minas Geraes in Brazil. His Highness Khandi Rao paid £80,000 for it. Another costly item is a cloth embroidered with precious stones and seed pearls which was intended by Khandi Rao for a covering to the Prophet's tomb at Mecca. A strange gift indeed from a Hindu Prince to a Mahomedan saint but Khandi Rao Maharaja was always very favourable to Islam.

the top was a great cup of stone, and another at each corner. Opposite each cup was the figure of a sugar loaf. Dutch drinking parties used to frequent this tomb, brewing their punch in the large stone basins, remembering, says Orington (1650) their departed companion so much that they sometimes forgot themselves. In 1847 no trace of this tomb was left.

Surat is chiefly indebted for this institution to the munificence of Bai Dayaker, widow of Morarbhau Vrijbhukhandas.

Morarbhau Vrijbhukhandas. The foundation stone of the present edifice was laid on 5th November 1894 by His Excellency Lord Harris. It came into use on 31st July 1895. The Medical Officer in charge, Dr. Rokhmabai, is one of the best educated native ladies on this side of India, and will long be remembered for the gallant fight she made in the law courts some years ago in an endeavour to establish the right of Hindu women to repudiate marriages made in their childhood without their consent.

Protective works have just been completed at a cost of Rs. 31,600 to protect Ghastipura protective works a low lying quarter of the town called Ghastipura from being flooded by the river Tapi.

Water works to supply the city with fresh water are under construction.

The estimated cost is 10½ lakhs of rupees. The first pipe was laid on 6th November 1894 by Lord Harris, and it is hoped that water will be brought into the city by the end of 1897. The water will be brought from wells sunk in the bed of the river Tapi at Nana Varacha, a village 3 miles from Surat. The well water will be pumped into high level reservoirs at Nana Varacha and will be brought thence by pipes to Surat.

Regent Tusa Bai perished and he who had Rajam had been fed under British power. When the negotiations were proceeding war broke out between the British and the Peshwa and a host of fighting was immediately assumed by the Holkar. The British was seized and murdered by the mutinous army and the Peshwa Chiefs who headed the military faction broke off the negotiations. Subsequently Holkar's army was completely defeated at Mehgaon—and the British was followed by the army of Mandeswar which deprived him of much of his property and led him to the possession of a feudal principality. The elements of his army were in the hands of the British Government which he saw.

The finances of the State were a very low ebb and Maharao's Minister Tantaji Joghseth made a loan of one lakh from Amangtad's property which presented themselves were without any interest and secured by an mortgage named Kshama Kuswa and secured by the Rajaholkar. One of the Maharao's Ministers who were killed, Kshama Kuswa was seized at Kotah and brought to Indore where he was imprisoned for some time. The Rajaholkar's hope of success of his enterprise was being hindered and he was at last forced to yield to the British. He was dethroned by Tantaji Joghseth by whose aid he was kept under confinement.

Maharao died in 1833 and was succeeded by an adopted son Marand Rao Holkar. This adoption was objected to by the people who were in favour of the succession of Hari Rao Holkar who for the past fourteen years had been imprisoned at Maheswar—The Rajaholkar was finally released by the British and was proclaimed head of the house of Holkar. The Maharao's abandonment of his hope of being able to support the cause of Marand Rao made a bad thing worse to the Rajaholkar who was as a result of Indore without the slightest opposition. His imprisonment had unfitted him for government and he eventually passed a period of a year and a half in the hospital. The unpopular measure adopted by the Minister Reraj Rao in whose hands the management of affairs was finally revived the hopes of Marand Rao's party and in September 1835 an attack was made on the palace for the purpose of assassinating the Rajaholkar and his family. This attempt was utterly unsuccessful and led to the death of the Rajaholkar and ended him more harm than ever as useful of the people by whom he was surrounded.

In 1834 the Maharao's adopted son's successor Khend Rao a boy of ten years related to the royal family Hari Rao died in 1837 and the British Government took immediate measures to place Khend Rao as he was known as successor to the throne. Khend Rao died in 1841 and as there was no lineage and no person with the right to adopt he nominated an adopted son was decided to establish a dynasty with the British Government. The mother of Hari Rao Holkar pleaded the claims of Marand Rao but Government refused to acknowledge them and inaugurated the reign of nominal regent.

The city stands on an elevated and healthy site, 1,785 feet above sea level. Of late many improvements have been introduced; roads have been metalled, drains built, the water supply cared for, and the principal streets lighted.

Among the chief objects of interest are the Maharaja's Palaces, the Lal Bagh, or garden, the Miot, College, High School, Market place and Cotton Mills.

The Cotton Mills were built in March 1873, and were extended in March 1883. There are 26,036 spindles in work which employ daily eight hundred persons. The output for the year 1895 was —

The Residency, which was built by Mr Gerard Wellesley, a cousin of the Duke of Wellington, in 1819-20, lies to the north-east of the city. An area of about 3 square miles was assigned for the purposes of the Residency in 1818 and within these limits are the bazaar, containing about 9,000 inhabitants, the houses and offices of the Residency staff and other Government servants, the post and telegraph offices, the barracks of the European and Native troops and the Duly College.

The Agent to the Governor General is Opium Agent for the States of Central India and the central weighing office is in Indore. Much of the best land in Malwa is taken up for opium cultivation, and while the price of the drug remained high, from 1855 to, as much as Rs 30 to Rs 40 per acre was paid on opium growing land. Prices have of late years fallen, and with them the rents of the land.

In 1835 an agreement was made with Holkar and other States securing to the British Government the exclusive right to purchase opium grown in Malwa, but as this arrangement was unsatisfactory, the monopoly was abandoned in 1837 and an export duty was levied instead upon opium sent through British territories to Bombay for shipment to China. The export of opium from Malwa is liable to fluctuations from various causes. The largest number of chests on which duty was paid at Indore was 48,618 in 1876-77, realising Rs 3 12 11,700. During the year ending 31st March 1896 the exports amounted to 20,378 chests, and the duty realized was Rs 2 5 35,800.

A chest of opium contains 140 lbs of the pure drug. The price of Malwa opium at Indore varies from Rs 30 to Rs 50 per dahi or lbs.

The Indore Charitable Hospital is also within Residency limits. It was built and is maintained by voluntary subscriptions from Native Chief. It

8 — Purchaser from guardian—Per GARTH CJ—Previously to the passing of Act XL of 1858 where a suit was brought by a minor on coming of age to recover property sold by his guardian during his minority it was generally incumbent upon the purchaser to prove that he acted in good faith that he made proper enquiries as to the necessity for the sale and had honestly satisfied himself of the existence of that necessity. Now under s 18 of that Act the Civil Court not only has the power but is bound to enquire into the circumstances of each case and to determine whether as a matter of law and prudence it is right that any proposed sale or mortgage of the minor's property should take place and if the Court upon the materials and information brought before it by the guardian makes an order for sale a purchaser under such an order is not bound to make the enquiry which the Judge has made and to determine for himself whether the Judge has done his duty properly and come to a right conclusion. Where a plaintiff alleges fraud or illegality as a ground for setting aside a sale made under s 18 the onus lies upon him to make out a prima facie case of fraud or illegality and to show that the debt which formed the consideration for the sale in such case was one for which the minor was not responsible. Per PRINCEP J—A stranger purchasing from a guardian acting under the authority granted under s 18 of Act XL of 1858 will be entitled to every protection from the Courts so long as it is not shown that he acted in a fraudulent or collusive manner known to the debts for the liquidation of which the purchase money would be applied were not debts lawfully binding on the minor. The burden of proof in such a case would lie heavily on the person seeking to set aside the alienation. But where the purchaser is himself the creditor and therefore uses the means of satisfying a Court as to the origin and nature of the debts and how they are binding on the minor the burden of proof is shifted on the purchaser when the plaintiff has established a prima facie case. SEKHAN CHUND v. without the sanction of the Judge by a guardian of a minor appointed under Act XL of 1858 is absolutely void and a decree obtained upon a mortgage so executed cannot be enforced against the property of the minor. BICHRAJ RAM v. RAM KISHEN 91 OR [1 C L R. 345]

LALA HUBRO PRASAD v. BASARUTH ALI

10 — Guardian and minor—Mortgage by certificated guardian without sanction of District Court—Mortgage money applied partly to benefit of minor's estate—Suit by minor to set aside the mortgage—Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 65—S 18 of the Bengal Minors Act (XL of 1858) does not imply that a sale or mortgage or a lease for more than five years executed by a certificated guardian without sanction of the Civil Court is illegal and void ab initio; but the proviso means that in the absence of such sanction the certificated guardian who (otherwise would have all the powers which the minor would have if he were of age shall be relegated to the position which he would occupy if he had been granted no certificate at all. If any one chooses to take a mortgage or a lease for a term exceeding five years under these circumstances the transaction is on the basis of no certificate having been granted. In a suit brought by the guardian of a Mahomedan minor for a declaration that mortgage deed executed by the minor's mother was null and void to the extent of the minor's share and for partition and possession of such share it was found that a considerable proportion of the moneys received by the mortgagee had been applied for the benefit of the minor's estate by discharging incumbrances imposed on it by his deceased father. It appeared that at the time of the mortgage the mother held a certificate of guardianship under the Bengal Minors Act and that she had not obtained from the Civil Court any order sanctioning the mortgage under s 18 of that Act. Held that the omission to obtain such sanction did not make the mortgage illegal or void ab initio but relegated the parties to the position in which they would have been if no certificate had been granted i.e. that of a transaction by a Mahomedan mother affecting to mortgage the property of her minor son with whose estate she had no power to interfere. Held that this fell within the class of cases in which it has been decided that if a person sells or mortgages another's property having no legal or equitable right to do so and that other benefits by the transaction the latter cannot have it set aside without making restitution to the person whose money has been applied for the benefit of the estate. Held that even if mortgages executed by a certificated guardian without the sanction required by s 18 of the Bengal Minors Act were void the section did not make them illegal and with reference to s 65 of the Contract Act the plaintiff could not obtain a decree for a declaration that the mortgage was inoperative as against his share except on condition of his making restitution to the extent of any moneys advanced by the defendant under the mortgage-deed which had gone to the

1. — Object of Act X of 1859—Rights existing prior to Act—The object of Act X of 1859 was to re-enact the provisions of existing laws relative to the rights of rayats and not in any way to destroy those rights. If therefore the plaintiff had a garaband tenure existing before the enactment of Act X (and it had been found that the plaintiff's garaband tenure had been recognized in a long series of decisions commencing from the year 1816) the enactment of that Act in no wise deprived him of his rights in that tenure. LEELANAND SINGH v. — s 5—Manager of estate under attachment.—Sale for arrears of revenue.—Portion of estate.—Act VI of 1859 is to a great extent a remedial Act passed for the benefit of the subject and in order to relax the stringency of former Statutes whereby the Crown was empowered to sell estates for non payment of revenue s 5 of the said Act applies to estates which are under attachment issued under Act VIII of 1859 and which are in the hands of a manager appointed on the application of the judgment debt r for the purpose of liquidating the debts. Such attachments are not superseded by the appointment of such manager. The words arrears of estates under attachment apply to cases where a portion only of an estate is under attachment as well as to cases in which the whole estate has been attached. BUNWARI LALL SANG & MOHABIR PERSAD SINGH

— ss 5 and 6—Notification of sale specification of—Estate Meaning of—Under s 6 of Act VI of 1859 it is not necessary that a notification should specify the owners of an estate or the owners of shares in the estate. Secretary of State v Rashbehary Mookerjee 1 L R 9 Cal 591 followed. All that is necessary under that section is that the notification should specify the estate or shares in the estate to be sold and in selling a share in an estate it is unnecessary to specify the shares or mouzabs of which that share is composed. The word estate as there used ordinarily means mehal but the term also applies to a portion of a mehal with regard to which a separate account has been opened but not to an undivided portion of a mehal as to which separate accounts are not kept. RAM NARAIN KOER & MAHABIR PERSHAD SINGH

16 Contract to supply labourers—A contract in consideration of an advance of money to supply labourers to do certain work on an estate falls within the scope of Act VIII of 1859 and the fact that such contract contains covenants to pay penalties in default of supplying the labourers and to repay the advance if necessary by personal labour for five years does not take the contract out of the operation of the Act so as to make illegal an order directing the contractor to be imprisoned for failure to comply with an order to repay the advance RAMASAMI v KANDASAMI

[I L R. 8 Mad. 379]

17 Contract to work until repayment of advance made—Defendant in consideration of an advance of money received from complainant bound himself to work for complainant until the repayment of the sum advanced. For breach of this contract the complainant proceeded against the defendant under Act VIII of 1859 Held that the contract was not within the Act. ANONYMOUS 7 Mad. Ap 31

18 Money advanced on account of work to be performed—Loan on condition that the workman should enter into a contract of service—A workman agreed in writing to work for the proprietors of an estate for four years and one month from 1st March 1890 to 31st March 1903 for an initial advance of one rupee which was not to be repaid till after the expiration of the agreement. The same person subsequently obtained an advance of Rs 10 to be reimbursed by a monthly deduction of one rupee from his wages. He worked from 1st March 1890 till 18th September 1890 when he ceased to work leaving in all a sum of Rs 5 to be accounted for in the adjustment of the total advance. He was subsequently charged and convicted under s. 2 of the Criminal Breach of Contract Act VIII of 1859—Held that the initial advance of one rupee was not money advanced on account of work to be performed but rather a loan made without interest on the condition that the workman would enter into a contract of service for the duration of the loan and that the Criminal Breach of Contract Act 1859 was inapplicable to this case that with reference to the ten rupees to be repaid out of wages the Act applied and an order should be made directing the workman to work until the expiration of the term of the contract on account of which this sum had been advanced. TANU JOOHI v HALL I L R. 23 Mad. 203

19 Loan—Deduction from wages—Having agreed to work for wages in a tannery and received Rs 10 from M his employer T promised to work off the advance by allowing M to deduct 8 annas a week from his weekly wages Held that the provisions of Act VIII of 1859 were applicable to this contract QUEEN v TALUKANAM [I L R. 7 Mad. 131]

make the article contracted for is an advance of money within the meaning of the section. ANONIMORS 6 Mad. Ap. 24

21 ——— Criminal breach of contract—Labourer—Carrier by boat—An advance was made under a contract by which the party who received the advance undertook to convey salt by boat but did not bind himself to render personal labour. The party who received the advance broke the contract. Held the parties to the contract were not an employer of labour and a labourer respectively and consequently the contract did not fall within the provisions of Act XIII of 1859. CALCUTTA 13 Mad. 351

22 ——— Advance of grain and money—Order to repay value of work not performed—An advance of money and grain having been made to a labourer for work to be done the labourer failed to complete the work and an order was passed by a Magistrate under s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859 directing repayment of the balance of the advance not worked off by the labourer. Held that as it was not proved that the labourer was offered and accepted the grain in lieu of money to be advanced the order was illegal. KONDADU 8 Mad. 204

23 ——— Working off previous debts—Breach of contract of service—Labourer—A labourer agreed to serve in consideration of money due from him on account of previous debts. He served for three months only and then quitted service in violation of the agreement. He was prosecuted and convicted of breach of contract of service under Act XIII of 1859. Held that he was not liable to be dealt with criminally because there was no fraudulent breach of contract within the meaning of Act XIII of 1859 and because further no money in advance was received the consideration for the agreement to serve being an old debt. PANJAB 9 Bom. 171

24 ——— Jurisdiction of Magistrates to interfere in cases of wilful and fraudulent breach of contract—Meaning of the expression Advance of money on account of work—Act XIII of 1859 (an Act to provide for the punishment of breaches of contract by artificers workmen and labourers in certain cases) applies only where there has been an advance of money on account of any work which words do not include mere loans or old debts. The interference of the Magistrate under the Act is limited to cases where the neglect or refusal to perform is wilful and without lawful and reasonable excuse. As a rule a mere breach of contract ought not to be an offence but only to be the subject of a civil action and a man cannot be treated as a criminal for not performing a contract which could not be enforced against him by civil process. QUEEN EXPRESS 16 Mad. 388

25 ——— s. 2—Limitation of civil claim—Order by the Magistrate for repayment of advances—In a prosecution for breach of contract under Act XIII of 1859 it appeared that the complainant had advanced certain sums of money to the

accused but that a suit to recover the same was barred by limitation and the Magistrate thereupon dismissed the charge. Held that there was no reason why the Magistrate should not have ordered repayment to be made by the accused under s. 2. QUEEN EXPRESS 16 Mad. 347

26 ——— Advance in consideration of exclusive services until repayment—Masters and workmen—Breach of contract on the part of workmen—Station—An employer of workmen residing and carrying on business in the city of Mirzapur alleging that he had advanced money to certain workmen on the understanding that they would work for him and no one else until they had repaid such money and that they had broken such contract by leaving his employment made a complaint against such workmen under Act XIII of 1859 which had been extended to the station of Mirzapur by the Local Government. It appeared that such money was advanced by way of loan and with out any reference to the wages of such workmen or the payment for the work performed by them and that no deduction on account of such advance was ever made from their wages or the payments made to them. Held that the contract between the parties was something quite different from any contract contemplated by Act XIII of 1859 and that Act was therefore not applicable. Held also that it was doubtful whether that Act applied locally as it was not shown that the city of Mirzapur was comprised within the station of Mirzapur. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF RAM PRASAD 3 All. 744

27 ——— Enquiry under Act—Breach of contract by art floor—The enquiry to be made under s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859 is not an enquiry into an offence which may be tried summarily. PANJAB 4 Mad. 234

28 ——— Imprisonment—Criminal breach of contract—Procedure—Imprisonment—Where an order has been made by a Magistrate under Act XIII of 1859 s. 2 for the fulfilment of a labour contract a sentence of imprisonment for disobeying such order without complaint made and without taking statements from the accused is illegal although the accused before the order was made may have stated their inability to perform the work stipulated for. SHINIVASA 5 Mad. 376

29 ——— Order of Magistrate for imprisonment for breach of contract—Right of civil suit—The imprisonment of a defendant by order of the Magistrate under Act XIII of 1859 does not preclude the plaintiff from proceeding by civil suit for recovery of money advanced to the defendant for the performance of work. VERVEDE 2 Mad. 427

30 ——— Former conviction—Breach of contract of service—Statute 4 Geo. IV Cap. 34 s. 3—Autrefois convict—A conviction for breach of contract of service under s. 2 of Act XIII of 1859 is a bar to any subsequent conviction on the

1. — Suit for declaration of trusts of a temple.—In bringing a suit under Act XX of 1863 it is not necessary to show that the temple was in which was formerly under control of the Board of Revenue. The Act applies to property in Calcutta. GANES SINGH v. LANGFORD SINGH 5 B L R. Ap 55

2. — Suit to establish right to share in management of temple.—The suits referred to in Act XX of 1863 as predominate the authority of the Court for their jurisdiction are solely suits charging trustees managers or committees with misfeasance, malversation of the temple property or neglect of duty. There is nothing in the Act to oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts over suits to establish a right to share in the management. AGRI SARMA EMBRANDRI v. VISTYU EMBRANDRI JAVADHANA EMBRANDRI v. PALA BUL HASAVA EMBRANDRI 3 Mad., 199

3. — Right of person interested to sue for misfeasance by managers etc.—Public endowment.—In the case of a public endowment transferred to trustees managers or superintendents of such lands under Act XX of 1863 any person or persons interested (and the interest need not be a pecuniary one) in the religious establishment in its worship or service or in its trusts has a right of suit after leave obtained from a Civil Court against such trustees etc. for misfeasance or breach of trust or neglect of duty. KUTREZ FATIMA v. SAHEBA JAY 8 W R 313

4. — Suit for removal of mohunt and appointment of another.—A suit for the removal of the present mohunt of a religious endowment and for the appointment of the petitioner in his place is not of such a nature as is contemplated by Act XX of 1863. KISHORE BOY MOHUNT v. KALEZ CHURN GIRSE 23 W R 34

5. — Suit to compel heir of manager to make good deficiency.—Leave of Court.—Act XX of 1863 does not apply to a suit brought by the dharmakarta of a temple and one of its worshippers to compel the defendant as heir of the late manager to make good out of the property inherited by him the deficiency in the devasthanam funds caused by breach of trust and misappropriation by the late manager. The leave of the Civil Court for the institution of such a suit is not necessary and the suit is maintainable. The right of instituting such suits is not a privilege accorded by Act XX of 1863 but a pre-existing right. JETANGARU KAVARU v. DURMA DOSSJI 4 Mad 2

6. — Suit to eject Dharmakarta or agents from temple.—Right of Government to invest itself of power of interfering with appointment.—Mad Reg VII of 1817.—Plaintiffs members of the committee appointed under Act XX of 1863 sued to eject defendants (the dharmakarta and his agents) from the possession and management of the temple dedicated to Sri Viraragava Swami at Travellers and to establish their (plaintiffs') right to the possession and control of the said temple. Defendants denied the right of the plaintiffs to exercise any control whatever over the temple. This right depended upon whether at the period of the passing of Act XX of 1863 the nomination vested in was exercised by or was subject to the confirmation of the Government or any public officer. It was admitted that in 1812 the Board of Revenue did so far as it could divest itself of all right to interfere with the appointment of a dharmakarta but it was contended for the plaintiffs that it was not in the power of the Board of Revenue so to divest itself of the duties imposed upon it by Regulation VII of 1817. 2.—Right to sue for removal of trustees.—Religious endowment—S. 14 of Act XX of 1863 is sufficiently general in its terms to empower any person interested in any temple mosque or religious endowment or in the performance of the trusts relating thereto to sue the trustee manager or superintendent or the member of a committee appointed under the Act for misfeasance and also to empower the Court to order the removal of a trustee etc. The tomb of a reputed saint became a place of pilgrimage and an endowment was made for the maintenance of the shrine and for the performances of certain religious ceremonies. There was a practice on the part of the proprietors and the managers of the institution to divide among themselves the residue of the income and to dispose of it by way of sale or mortgage of the share enjoyed by them. Held that this was a religious institution within the meaning of Act XX of 1863. An order under s 14 Act XX of 1863 should be mandatory and not prohibitory. Where a sacred book was kept at a temple and was an object of veneration to the members of the sect entitled to worship there—Held that a suit would lie under s 14 of Act XX of 1863 by some of the persons interested in the temple to restrain the superintendent from removing the book to another place and that he should be directed to retain it as a part of the furniture of the temple. DHURRUM SINGH & KISHAY SINGH (I L R 7 Cal. 767 9 C L R 410

5 ———— Trustee of Temple qualifications of—Duty of Committee—Misfeasance—Act XX of 1863 does not require that a person appointed by a committee to be a trustee of a temple should be of any particular sect and although it may be desirable that the trustee of a temple should be of the sect to which the temple belongs the appointment of a Sivaite to be trustee of a Vishnavite temple does not amount to an act of misfeasance neglect or breach of trust on the part of the committee within the meaning of s 14 of the Act. GANDAYATHARA AYYANGAR & DEYANAYAGA MUDALI I L R 7 Mad. 222

7 ———— Suit to recover land on behalf of temple—The provisions of s 14 of Act XX of 1863 (Peligious Endowments Act) do not oust the jurisdiction of the ordinary Courts except in the cases specified therein. A suit for recovery of immovable property on behalf of a temple alleging by way of misfeasance and breach of trust that the defendants (the managers of the temple) had forged documents and usurped temple property without any prayer for the removal of the managers or for damages or for a decree for specific performance of any act by the managers is not a suit for which a special jurisdiction is provided by the Act. MAHALINGA Iyer & VENCOBA GHOSAMI I L R 4 Mad 157

8 ———— Suit by persons interested for breach of trust and neglect of duty—Refusal of trustee without adequate reason to accept and utilise offerings for celebration of festivals—Misfeasance and breach of trust in s 14 explained—In a suit against the trustee of a religious institution under Act XX of 1863 for alleged breaches of trust and neglect of duty by reason of the non-performance of ceremonies it is not necessary in order to give jurisdiction to Civil Courts for the plaintiffs to show that there are any special funds constituting an endowment of the institution. If it be proved that the ceremonies in question have been conducted as a custom for a series of years and that the defendant trustee was not absolutely unable owing to lack of funds to carry on these ceremonial observances in the customary manner he must be held to have been guilty of neglect of duty rendering him liable to a suit under s 14 of the Act. Where it has been usual for the trustee to celebrate festivals with the aid of voluntary contributions it is a breach of duty on the part of the trustee to refuse to celebrate them with adequate means if funds are available and the trustee ought not contrary to usage to refuse to receive such offerings and perform the ceremonies for which they are tendered. Per SUBRAHMANYA AYYAR J.—Having regard to the fact that funds voluntarily given to public religious institutions not only enrich the institutions but promote the interests of public worship it must be regarded as part of the proper functions of the trustee to utilise such income for the purposes of the institution whenever it is available. It is his duty to accept the money and apply it for the specified purpose unless there are proper grounds for its rejection. Though a trustee may exercise a discretion and cannot be charged with misconduct if he acts with an absence of indirect motive with honesty of intention and a fair consideration of the subject he may be proceeded against if from corrupt or improper motives he refuses to allow voluntary contributions to be offered for purposes not inconsistent with the principles rules or usages of the institution to be applied to those purposes. The Courts are bound to restrain a trustee from injuring the interests of the institution under his charge by corruptly arbitrarily or wantonly departing from the ordinary course of procedure in regard to essential or important matters connected with the institution. The ground upon which the Courts exercise such jurisdiction over him is that such departure on his part amounts to a breach of legal duty incumbent on him. Though the Courts cannot be called upon to decide questions of ritual and worship unconnected with civil rights it is perfectly competent for them to adjudicate upon such questions also when the adjudication is necessary for the determination of civil rights. *Amin Sahib v. 12 ———— Religious trustees—Suspension from trusteeship and right of appeal—Maintenance in office on trial—Suit by certain dikshadars or hereditary trustees of the Chintamani temple against others of the dikshadars praying for their removal from office and for a writ of decree alleging that they had been justly guilty of misconduct in respect of temple property in their custody and had obstructed the repair of certain shrines. The District Judge passed a decree suspending some of the defendants from the office of trustee and the right of puja for a period which was not defined. He also passed a decree with mesne claimed—Held that the operation of Act XX of 1863 was not excluded by the admission that the trusteeship was hereditary in certain families and that the District Judge had jurisdiction under Act XX of 1863 to deprive the defendants of the right of puja. Held

16 ———— Endowment—Endowment for benefit of family idol—Suit to remove shrines from office—Arbitration Reference to Bengal Regulation XIX of 1810—Act XX of 1863 does not apply to an endowment which is not a public one but which is made for the benefit of an ancestral family idol. Two plaintiffs members of a

Hindu family applied for an order (in the presence of the defendants) obtained leave to institute a suit against the defendants, who were the shikhs of a certain idol for the purpose of having them removed from their office on the ground of misconduct. In their plaint they alleged that the endowment was a public one all Hindus having a common right of worshipping the idol. This was denied by the defendants. After issues had been framed the Court of first instance made an order under s. 16 of the Act referring certain of them to arbitrators although the defendants contended that as the endowment was not a public one the Act had no application and objected to the reference. The arbitrators made an award finding inter alia that the idol was the ancestral family idol of the parties to the suit and that the endowment was not made for the benefit of the public. They further in the award laid down certain definite rules according to which the shikhs ought to be conducted and repaired the temple made. The Court of first instance passed a decree on that award declaring that the idol was the ancestral idol of both parties and directing that the defendants should perform the worship in a certain manner and should execute certain repairs to the temple within six months and declaring that if the parties did not act as directed any member of the family should be able to bring a suit for the appointment of a manager. Against that decree the defendants appealed and contended that the Act did not apply to the case on the finding of facts as to the endowment not being a public one that the compulsory reference to arbitration was illegal and void and that the decree was not one authorised by the terms of s. 14 of the Act. Held that on the facts as found by the arbitrators Act XX of 1863 did not apply to the case and that the compulsory reference to arbitration and the decree made thereon were illegal and void. Held further that the decree itself was bad on the ground that it was not one coming within the scope of s. 14 of the Act. 1801AR CHANDRA MISSEY v. BROJOVATH MISSEY

17 ——— Suspension and dismissal of trustee of a temple—Powers of temple committee—The plaintiff was appointed to the office of trustee of a Hindu temple under Religious Endowments Act 1863 s. 3 by the temple committee constituted under that Act. Subsequently the committee having received certain complaints against him suspended him from office pending inquiry with out calling on him for an explanation. They alleged as the grounds of his suspension that he had caused loss of property and money to the temple and that he had conducted things in the temple contrary to custom so as to cause a disturbance of the peace. The trustee refused to acquiesce in the order of suspension and to give up certain records etc. which he was by that order required to deliver and denied the authority of the committee as asserted by them. Shortly afterwards the committee dismissed him. The plaintiff denying that his suspension and dismissal were legal brought two suits against the members of the committee the first for damages for the

suspension and the second for an injunction to restrain the defendants from interfering with the discharge of his duties as trustee. Both of these suits were dismissed and the plaintiff preferred appeals to the High Court. In the appeal relating to the claim for an injunction it was found that no misconduct had been proved against the plaintiff previous to the order of suspension. Held by SHEPHERD and DAVIES JJ. that a trustee in the position of the plaintiff cannot be dismissed from office except for good cause shown and that his conduct subsequent to the order of suspension did not amount to such good cause. In the appeal relating to damages—Held by SHEPHERD J. that the order of suspension was illegal and that under the circumstances the plaintiff was entitled to substantial damages. Held by DAVIES J. (finding that the committee had proceeded in the bona fide belief that they were acting for the good of the temple in suspending the plaintiff pending inquiry) that the order of suspension was not illegal and that the suit was rightly dismissed. Owing to the difference of opinion between the two Judges the last mentioned appeal was referred to the Chief Justice under Civil Procedure Code s. 275 and was heard by him sitting with the two other Judges—Held by COLLINS C.J. and SHEPHERD J. (DAVIES J. dissenting) that the order of suspension was illegal and the plaintiff was entitled to substantial damages. Per COLLINS C.J.—The power of suspension by the committee is in my judgment the same as the power of dismissal. The committee having made due inquiry and having called on the trustee for an explanation may suspend for good and sufficient cause but not otherwise. SHESHADRI AYYANGAR v. NATARAJA AYYAR I L R. 21 Mad, 179

1 ——— s. 18—Leave to sue—Public and private endowments—Reg. XX of 1910—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—Suit to remove mutawalli—A Mahomedan lady executed a wakf nama purporting to dedicate the whole of her property to an imambara in her house for the purpose of perpetuating various Shiah ceremonies. By the wakf nama she constituted herself joint mutawalli with no B and caused the names of herself and Has mutawalli to be substituted in the Collector's register for her own name as owner. On the death of B A acted as the sole mutawalli. The wakf nama was publicly registered. But though the property was styled wakf and A the mutawalli thereof in all documents connected with the estate A all along continued to deal with it as absolute proprietor and the dedication though made in 1850 was never under the control of the Board of Revenue or of local agents. In a suit which the plaintiffs obtained leave to institute under s. 18 of Act XX of 1863 to remove A from the *mutawalli*ship on the ground of misfeasance—Held the wakf nama did not constitute a public religious establishment within the meaning of Act XX of 1863 and that therefore the Judge below had no authority to give the plaintiffs under s. 18 leave to sue and that his decision was consequently ultra vires s. 18 of Act XX of 1863 applies only to such religious establishments as were under the control or superintendence

2. Right of beneficiaries under deed of endowment—Act XX of 1863 while it empowers persons to sue whose right to sue independently of the Act may be doubtful does not deprive persons claiming to be beneficiaries under a deed of endowment of the right to sue which they have independently of the Act nor does it impose on them the necessity of obtaining the sanction to institute the suit required by s 18 of the Act.

3. Suit to have trusts of endowment carried out—An appropriator who sues on the ground that the trust created so far as it related to the appointment of mutwallis had never been acted upon and that the original rights of the appropriator remain as at liberty to bring such a suit without leave of the Court under s 18 of Act XX of 1863 HIDAYATUNNISA v ATZUL HOSSEIN

[2 N W, 420]

4. Sanction to suit—suit brought different from the suit sanctioned—Rejection of plaint—A and B being worshippers at a Hindu temple obtained sanction under s 18 of the Religious Endowments Act to sue for the removal of the managers of the temple on the ground of breach of trust and for damages. A and B sued to remove the managers but claimed no damages in their plaints. Held that as the suit instituted differed from the one for which sanction was given the plaint was properly rejected. SRINIVASA v VENKATA

5. Order of Civil Court as to title Effect of—Semble—That an order of the Civil Court under s 18 of Act XX of 1863 refusing leave to institute a suit and deciding that the temple was governed by a hereditary dharmakarts and therefore within s 3 of the Act was not conclusive upon the question of title between the parties. VENKATASA NAIKAR v SRINIVASSA CHARIYAR, SRINIVASSA CHARIYAR v VENKATASA NAIKAR

Criminal Procedure Code (Act VI of 1861) s 404—Distribution of fine—Possession of opium Upon the conviction of certain persons under s 20 Act VIII of 1867 for illicit possession of opium the Magistrate sentenced them to payment of a fine and directed that up to the realisation thereof one half should be paid to the Inspector of Police who had apprehended the prisoners but refused to pay the other half in accordance with s 30 (for reasons set forth in his order) to the person who gave the information. On a reference by the Sessions Judge to the High Court—Held the High Court could not interfere under s 404 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. The distribution of the fine under s 30 Act VIII of 1867 formed no part of the Magistrate's judgment. QUEEN v RAMDYAL SINGH 8 B L R., Ap 7 [18 W R. Cr 85]

1. — Seizure of Raj of Tanjore—

Jurisdiction of Municipal Courts—Independent States—The transactions of Independent States between each other are governed by other laws than those which Municipal Courts administer. The seizure by the British Government acting as a sovereign power through its delegate the East India Company of the Raj of Tanjore with the property belonging thereto was with its consequences an act of State over which a Municipal Court has no jurisdiction. *THE EAST INDIA COMPANY v. 2. — Arrest under Beng Reg III of 1818—Jurisdiction of Municipal Courts—A Mahomedan subject of the Crown was arrested in Calcutta taken into the m fusul and there detained in jail under a warrant of the Governor General in Council in the form prescribed by Reg III of 1818. Held that such arrest and detainer were not acts of State but matters cognizable by a Municipal Court. IN RE AMER KHAN 8 B L R 392

3. — Resumption of Jagir by East

India Company—Regulation law—Where lands were held by a jagirdar under the sovereign of an independent State on a zaidat tenure i.e. on a grant of land together with the public revenues thereof on the condition of keeping up a body of troops to be employed when called on in the service of the sovereign and on the conquest of the State by the East India Company the jagirdar remained in the same position to the Company—Held that the resumption of the lands by the Company and the seizure of the arms and stores appertaining to the tenure on the death of the jagirdar was not an act of State and therefore the Municipal Courts had jurisdiction to entertain a suit by the representatives of the jagirdar against the Government for the possession of the lands and for the value of the arms and stores. This was so although at the time of the resumption the Regulation law was not introduced into the territories in which the jagir was comprised. FORRESTER v. SECRETARY OF STATE

4. — Confiscation of territories of

King of Delhi—Act of State—The status of the King of Delhi was that of a King recognized by the British Government and the confiscation of his territories in 1857 was an act of State, and not an act done under color of any legal right of which a Municipal Court could take cognizance. His tenure of the territories assigned him by the Government was a tenure merely durante regno and no power was conferred upon him of creating incumbrances which would survive his deposition. The word confiscation does not necessarily import that the appropriation is to be made as a penalty for a crime nor when used in that sense does it necessarily imply that the forfeiture has accrued upon conviction but it may also be properly used as applicable to appropriations of property by Government as an act of State. *SALIGRAM v. 5. — Confiscation by Governor of Foreign State—Title to timber—The plaintiff brought a suit at Tonghoo in British Burma to recover possession of certain timber which he alleged the defendants had wrongfully and in collusion with the Burmese Governor of Ninghan taken out of his possession in foreign territory and removed to Tonghoo. The defendants stated that they had acquired the timber from the Governor of Ninghan in terms of an agreement between them and the Burmese Government. It appeared that the Governor of Ninghan had confiscated the plaintiff's timber in contravention of a royal mandate. After the institution of the suit the defendants removed the timber from Tonghoo to Rangoon. Held that a British Municipal Court might enquire into the character of the act of the Governor of Ninghan and was not bound to accept it as an act of State. *BOMBAY BORNEO TRADING CORPORATION v. Act of State—Jurisdiction of Civil Court—By the treaty of the 31st July 1801 between the then Nawab of the Carnatic and the Governor in Council at Madras the sovereign rights of the Nawab in the Carnatic were vested in the East India Company. Held that a resumption by the Madras Government of a jagir granted by former Nawabs as Altanah i.e. before the date of the treaty and a regrant by Madras Government to another for a life estate only was such an act of sovereign power by the East India Company as precluded the Supreme Court at Madras from taking cognizance of a suit by the heirs of the original grantee in respect of such resumption. *EAST INDIA COMPANY v. In a suit instituted by the representatives of the original grantee for possession of the village and payment of the arrears of revenue so sequestered it was held by the Judicial Committee affirming the decree of the Provincial and costs made payable by the lower Court's decree to half On appeal by the defendant to the High Court held reversing the decree of the Lower Appellate Court that the plaintiff's claim should be dismissed The attachment placed by Government on the death of K M in December 1872 was limited to an exemption from assessment and the resumption and re grant to the plaintiff did not give the plaintiff any title to the lands in question The proceedings of Government in 1873 and 1876 by which the plaintiff was recognised as the representative of the Waikar family were not acts of State The status of the Waikars and other persons with whom the agreements of 1820 were entered into was not that of an independent sovereign They (the Waikars) were merely powerful aramam durs subordinate to the Raja of Satara and after the annexation of the territory of the Raja in 1843 they held their lands under the East India Company *Secretary of State for India v. ACTION IN REM

1. ———— Owner indirectly impleaded—Towage contract—Flee idm rally—The M S a steam tug was hired to tow the barque N down the Hooghly and in consequence of the negligence of the master of the tug whilst an employed and of his wilful disobedience to the order of the pilot on board the N the latter ran foul of a sailing vessel the S F considerable damage being done to both sailing vessels The S F took proceedings against the N for the damage sustained and an action in rem was brought (pending the proceedings taken by the S F) by the N against the tug to recover damages including any damages that the N might have to pay to the owners of the S F The defence set up by the tug was protection under its towage contract which was to the effect that the proprietors of the tug should not be responsible under any circumstances for any loss or damage to any vessel whilst in tow of the tug whether the same should have happened through the default of the master or other sailors etc. of the tug or through the incompetence or want of skill of the pilot in charge The Court below held that the accident was due to the wilful disobedience of the master of the tug in not obeying the pilot on board the N and that such misconduct was a default within the meaning of the clause in the towage contract but inasmuch as the action was one in rem and not against the proprietors the clause was no answer to the suit Held on appeal that the clause was a sufficient answer for that although in every case of a proceeding in rem the suit is directly against the ship itself still the owner of the ship must always be considered as indirectly impleaded THE MARY STUART v. 2. ——— Suit for share of estate of deceased—Recorder Power of—Where one son of a deceased party sued in the Recorder's Court another son who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 for his share of the deceased's estate it was held that the Recorder had no power to transform the suit into a general administration suit ON KING TEE & ANKINPEE 10 W R. 88

3. ——— Heirs at law under Mahomedan law opposing grant of probate—Right to bring administration suit pending probate proceedings—Probate and Administration Act (I of 1881), s 34—The plaintiffs as heirs at law had entered caveat in an application by the executor for the probate of an alleged will of the deceased. The application was set down as a contentious cause and the executor appointed administrator pendente lite. As heirs under Mahomedan law the plaintiffs were entitled to two thirds share in the property left by the deceased even if the Will was not established. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain a suit for administration by the Court against the administrator pendente lite even though the probate proceedings have not been determined KURATIL AIN BAHADUR & BROUGHTON 1 C W N 336

4. ——— Suit by creditor—Misjoinder—Multifariousness—Practice—The principle of the rules that the creditor of a deceased person suing for administration is in the same situation with regard to all other persons as if he were bringing an action at law against the administrator and that a debtor to the estate of a deceased person can only be made an available as such debtor by the representative of the deceased's estate is to be adhered to in this country where there is a different procedure. Therefore where to a suit brought against the Administrator General as administrator of the estate of one W. B. by a creditor of the deceased other persons who also had a claim against the estate were made defendants on the allegation that they had realized and were in possession of a acts of the estate of the deceased—Held that there being nothing to show that such persons were in the position of an executor or administrator de son tort or that they had been partners with the deceased or that they could not be sued if necessary by the legal representative himself and there being no other circumstances which would make it equitable that they should be sued jointly with the legal representative they were wrongly made parties and the suit ought to be dismissed as against them for want of due diligence. Even assuming the facts were such that the plaintiff was entitled to sue them as legal representatives of the estate he should not mix his own claim with that which the Administrator General might have against them. DUTCHMAN & BROUGHTON 15 B L R 298

5 ——— Claims in administration suit containing complaint of dealings by executors as acts of misadministration—Separate causes of action—Where the suit is one to administer the assets of a deceased person and in the claim various dealings by the executors of the estate are complained of as acts of misadministration and sought to be redressed, such dealings do not constitute separate causes of action and such a suit is not multifarious. NISTARINI DASSI & NUNDO LALL BOSE I L R 26 Calc 691 [3 C W N 670]

6 ——— Suit by creditor on behalf of all other creditors—Legal personal representative—Receiver—Suit by—Persons interested in the estate of a testator not being the legal personal representatives of the testator will not be allowed to sue persons possessed of assets belonging to the testator unless it is satisfactorily made out that there exist assets which might be recovered and which but for such suit would probably be lost to the estate. Such a suit may be supported where the relations between the legal personal representative and the debtor to the estate present a substantial impediment to the prosecution by the legal personal representative of a suit against the debtor to recover the assets of the testator and where there is a strong probability of the loss of such assets unless such a suit be allowed. But where there is an administration suit already pending the proper course to pursue is to obtain an order in the administration suit directing either a suit to be brought in the name of the legal personal representative or appointing a Receiver to sue and in this country the Courts might have the power to direct such Receiver to sue in his own name. ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION & GOSWAMI LALL SEAL [I L R 10 Calc 713]

It was also declared in such suit that a certain sum of money should be set apart for the performance of certain religious ceremonies and paid into Court. A and B died without having satisfied their debt. In a suit supplemental to the former suit the descendants of the sons of N amongst whom were the descendants of A and B claimed to be entitled to their share in the interest on the funds in the hands of the Court and sought for a division of such accumulation of interest. Held that notwithstanding that the debt due from A and B to the estate was barred the descendants of A and B could not be allowed to share in the accumulations of interest in the hands of the Court without first satisfying the debt due by their ancestors to the estate. LOKANATH MULLICK & ODOOR CHITRY MULLICK I L R 7 Calc 644

1 ——— Petition for administration
summons—Plaint—A petition for an administration summons may be ordered to be taken as a plaint and as the foundation of an administration suit IN THE MATTER OF THE ESTATE OF PENN MACKINTOSH & WILKINSON 3 B L R. Ap, 32 ——— Suit for share of estate of deceased—Recorder Power of—Where one son of a deceased party sued in the Recorder's Court another son who had obtained a certificate under Act XXVII of 1860 for his share of the deceased's estate it was held that the Recorder had no power to transform the suit into a general administration suit On LING TEE & ANKINTEE 10 W R 883 ——— Heirs at law under Mahomedan law opposing grant of probate—Right to bring administration suit pending probate proceedings—Probate and Administration Act (F of 1881) s 34—The plaintiffs as heirs at law had entered caveat in an application by the executor for the probate of an alleged will of the deceased. The application was set down as a contentious cause and the executor appointed administrator pendente lite. As heirs under Mahomedan law the plaintiffs were entitled to two thirds share in the property left by the deceased even if the Will was not established. Held that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain a suit for administration by the Court against the administrator pendente lite even though the probate proceedings have not been determined KURATI LAIN BAHADUR & BROUGHTON 1 C W N 3384. ——— Suit by creditor—Mayinder—Multi-assetness—Practice—The principle of the rules that the creditor of a deceased person suing for administration is in the same situation with regard to all other persons as if he were bringing an action at law against the administrator and that a debtor to the estate of a deceased person can only be made amenable as such debtor by the representative of the deceased's estate is to be adhered to in this country where there is a different procedure. Therefore where to a suit brought against the Administrator General as administrator of the estate of one W B by a creditor of the deceased other persons who also had a claim against the estate were made defendants on the allegation that they had realized and were in possession of a sets of the estate of the deceased—Held that there being nothing to show that such persons were in the position of an executor or administrator le son tort or that they had been partners with the deceased or that they could not be sued if necessary by the legal representative himself and there being no other circumstances which would make it equitable that they should be sued jointly with the legal representative they were wrongly made parties and the suit ought to be dismissed against them for misjoinder. Even assuming the facts were such that the plaintiff was entitled to sue them as legal representatives of the estate he should not mix his own claim with that which the Administrator General might have against them. DUTTA & BROUGHTON 15 B L R 298

5 — Claims in administration suit containing complaint of dealings by executors as acts of maladministration—Separate causes of act on—Where the suit is one to administer the assets of a deceased person and in the claim various dealings by the executors of the estate are complained of as acts of maladministration and sought to be redressed such dealings do not constitute separate causes of action and such a suit is not multifarious. NISTANIN DASSI & NUNDO LALL BOSE I L R 28 Cal 891 [3 C W N 670]

6 — Suit by creditor on behalf of all other creditors—Legal personal representative—Receiver—Suit by—Persons interested in the estate of a testator not being the legal personal representatives of the testator will not be allowed to sue persons possessed of assets belonging to the testator unless it is satisfactorily made out that there exist assets which might be recovered and which but for such suit would probably be lost to the estate. Such a suit may be supported where the relations between the legal personal representative and the debtor to the estate present a substantial impediment to the prosecution by the legal personal representative of a suit against the debtor to recover the assets of the testator and where there is a strong probability of the loss of such assets unless such a suit be allowed. But where there is an administration suit already pending the proper course to pursue is to obtain an order in the administration suit directing either a suit to be brought in the name of the legal personal representative or appointing a Receiver to sue and in this country the Courts might have the power to direct such Receiver to sue in his own name. ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION & GORNIWELL SEAL [I L R 10 Cal 713]

10 — Supplemental suit—Due by appointed managing members under the will of the testator—Lim it on—A and B two of the sons of one A had been declared in a suit brought to administer A's estate to be indebted to the estate. It was also declared in such suit that a certain sum of money should be set apart for the performance of certain religious ceremonies and paid into Court. A and B died without having satisfied their debt. In a suit supplemental to the former suit the descendants of the sons of A amongst whom were the descendants of A and B claimed to be entitled to their share in the interest on the funds in the hands of the Court and sought for a division of such accumulation of interest. Held that notwithstanding that the debt due from A and B to the estate was barred the descendants of A and B could not be allowed to share in the accumulations of interest in the hands of the Court without first satisfying the debt due by their ancestors to the estate. FOXWORTH MULLICK & ODGY CHURN MULLICK I L R. 7 Cal. 644

On the 5th November 1881 P C died and on the 18th December 1886 R L applied to attach certain properties belonging to the estate of his judgment debtor which properties were actually attached on the 8th and 12th January 1887. On the 21st December 1886 one S filed a suit to administer the estate of the deceased and on the 20th January 1887 obtained the usual administration decree. On the 5th May 1887 S applied for an order staying all proceedings taken by R L against the estate of P C and directing him to come in should he think fit so to do and prove his claim in the administration suit. Held that the attachment did not create any interest in or charge upon the properties in favour of the attaching creditor as against other creditors and that the order asked for ought to be granted. IN THE MATTER OF THE APPLICATION OF SOOBUL CHUNDER LAW SOOBUL CHUNDER LAW v. 14. — Succession Act (X of 1865) s 202—Estate of intestate Native Christian—Suit for partition of estate by purchaser of widow's share before completion of administration—Dismissal of suit—Only remedy by way of administration suit—A person to whom the Indian Succession Act 1865 applied having died intestate in April 1884 his widow and son were in September of the same year granted letters of administration which were cancelled for want of stamp duty a fresh grant being made on 19th January 1885. Plaintiff alleging that the said widow had executed a promissory note in her favour in September 1884 filed a suit against her on 6th January 1885 and there being no appearance of the defendant obtained an ex parte decree. In execution of the decree so obtained plaintiff attached portions of the estate of the deceased and brought them to sale becoming herself the purchaser of the one third share of the widow in cash lot sold. In March 1885 the son was appointed sole administrator. In January 1888 he died and the letters of administration were revoked in consequence and the son of the District Court was appointed administrator of the estate until October 1884 when the son's widow was so appointed to his stead. Plaintiff now sued for partition of the property comprised in the estate of the deceased in order that she might obtain delivery of the portions of it which she had purchased in execution of the decree against the widow previously obtained as above said. The estate of the deceased had never been administered or distributed. The defence was that the said previous decree had been obtained by fraud. Held that under s 44 of the Indian Evidence Act the defendants were entitled to set up this defence and that the property of the deceased having become vested in his administrator under the Indian Succession Act it remained so vested until the administrator had distributed the estate and that in consequence the widow had no saleable interest in any part of the estate until in the course of the administration thereof her share had been determined and allotted to her. Until such allotment (which had not yet taken place) the only process by which plaintiff could legally claim the widow's interest in the estate was by a suit for the administration of the estate to which suit the widow if alive would be a necessary party. If not alive letters of administration to her estate would be necessary the administrator being made a party. Held also that the suit could not be treated as an administration suit. SUBRAMANIAM v. 2. — Liability of administrator for loss to estate—Compromise of claim by administrator—Subsequent suit by a creditor of estate to set aside the compromise and for damages for negligence of administrator—Succession Act (V of 1860) ss. 280 and 329 Administrator's liability for neglect to get in any part of the deceased's property— One P mortgaged certain property to H for Rs. 60. H sued P to recover the mortgage debt. Pending the suit P died in 1878. Thereupon A the son of P took out letters of administration to the deceased's estate and contested H's claim. H obtained a decree in the Court of first instance for the sale of the mortgaged property and in execution of this decree the property was sold for Rs. 10 and purchased by H. The decree was afterwards reversed on 2nd August 1883 reversed on appeal by the Assistant Judge. Thereupon H entered into a compromise with A by which it was arranged that A should give up his claim under the appellate decree of the Assistant Judge to be repaid by H the sum of Rs. 10 which he had realized by the sale of the mortgaged property and that H should pay to A Rs. 40 on account of his costs incurred in the suit and in taking out letters of administration. This compromise was effected on 16th November 1883. In the meantime on 14th September 1883 the plaintiff had purchased from one B an old decree which was outstanding against the estate of the deceased P. On 10th September 1883 the plaintiff sought to execute this decree against the mortgaged property. Having failed in this attempt the plaintiff filed a suit against A for a declaration that the compromise of the 16th November 1883 had been fraudulently effected with the object of defrauding (the plaintiff's) claim and to recover Rs. 1000 as damages from the defendant on account of his fraudulent and negligent conduct as administrator of his deceased father's estate. This suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts on the ground that as there were other creditors who had claims against the estate the plaintiff's proper remedy was an administration suit which would enable the Court to assess the claims of all the creditors. Held (reversing the lower Courts' decrees) that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. By the compromise of the 16th November 1883 the defendant had given up his right under the Appellate Court's decree of the 2nd August 1883 to be repaid by H the sum of Rs. 10 and had thereby occasioned a loss to the estate of that amount. He was, therefore, liable to the plaintiff to make good the amount under s. 328 of the Succession Act (V of 1860) subject however to a deduction under s. 280 of that Act of the expenses incurred by him in obtaining letters of administration and the costs of any judicial proceeding that might be necessary for administrative purposes. KHUSSENBHAI NARAYANJI & HORNASHA I. legal representative of his deceased father. Previously to the date of the decree (on 4th March 1898) an order had been made by the High Court under ss 17 and 18 of the Administrator General's Act (II of 1874) authorizing the Administrator General to collect the assets of the deceased and ordering him if necessary to take out letters of administration to his estate. On the 29th April 1898 the plaintiff under s 203 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) attached certain money in the hands of a third party due to the deceased's estate. On the 2nd July 1898 letters of administration were granted to the Administrator General. Held that as against the Administrator General the attachment was void ab initio. At the date of the decree obtained by the plaintiff the Administrator General was entitled by virtue of the High Court's order to take possession of the estate of the deceased as soon as that order was made, his right to possession became paramount and excluded that of the defendant (the son of the deceased) who was then no longer entitled to recover payment of debts due to his father. A decree therefore subsequently obtained against the defendant could not be against the Administrator General. Confer any rights on the decree holder who could not stand in a better position than the defendant his judgment debtor. Under s 208 and 210 of the Civil Procedure Code the Administrator General had the right to have the attachment removed because he was exclusively entitled at first by reason of the order under s 18 of Act II of 1874 and subsequently by his letters of administration to recover the debt and was not subject to any decree which affected his title. LALLCHAND HANMAYAL v GUMTIDAI 3 Bom 140 distinguished BRINJI v BRINJI v ADMINISTRATOR GENERAL OF BOMBAY

Held (on appeal) by the Privy Council that the right of executors to devolve the property of their testator with all powers and duties relating to its administration upon the Administrator General conferred by s 31 of Act II of 1874 is not confined to any particular class of executors or of estates The right is given to any executor in whom estate of the deceased has been vested by virtue of the probate upon the one condition that the Administrator General shall consent It is not required that in a consolidating statute each enactment when traced to its source must be construed according to the state of things

The admission of assets for the payment of a debt is also an admission of assets for the purposes of the suit and extends to costs if the Court thinks fit to give them. There is nothing in s 35 of the Administrator General's Act (II of 1874) which qualifies or restricts or otherwise interferes with the right of a creditor to demand immediate payment of his claim in full when the realizable assets in the hands of the Administrator General are sufficient for the immediate payment of all claims in full. The ratable payment referred to in the above section as well as in s 282 of the Succession Act (X of 1865) and in s 104 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) is ratable payment out of the assets it is nowhere provided that it shall be made out of the net income of the estate or any other specific part of the assets. The language (shall be liable to pay the costs) used in cl 1 of s 35 of the Administrator General's Act (II of 1874) shows that it was intended not to impose upon a creditor to the admissions were contained in statements filed in a Court of Justice in her name does not necessarily prove that they were made by her. ASHMUTOOLISSA BEBEZ v ATTA HATIZ 8 W R. 468

7 ——— In a former suit by A against B in regard to an account of the collections of a certain share in land B intervened and was made a party. In that suit the Court declared A to be the zamindar and as such entitled to the rents and to an account. Held that that finding was binding against B in a subsequent suit against him by A for recovery of the same share. Similarly an admission made by B in the former suit is evidence against him quantum valet in the subsequent suit. SARLO SURY SINGH v PAM KULLAWAN SINGH [14 W R. 165]

10 ——— Acceptance in evidence of map as correct in former suit—Where the defendants in a boundary suit accepted in a former suit a particular map as correct their acceptance is legal though not conclusive evidence against them in the boundary suit and is tantamount to an admission and stands upon a very different footing from the decree in the first suit. GORDON STEVART AND CO v BEEJOY GOBIND CHOWDHRY [8 W R. 291]

11 ——— Deposition—A copy of a defendant's deposition in a former suit having been put in by plaintiff at a late stage of the case when defendant had no means of explaining away any supposed admission therein—Held that the first Court was wrong in accepting the same as an admission binding on defendant and that the Lower Appellate Court was right in sending for the defendant and examining him on the subject. KOMARMOUDLEY v MOYTE MUDALE 16 W R. 220

13 ——— Plaintiff sued in the I revenue Court for the recovery of rents fraudulently misappropriated by defendant and upon defendant's allegation that plaintiff was etimandar or gomastha and not mardar the Deputy Collector dismissed plaintiff's suit for want of jurisdiction. Plaintiff then sued in the Civil Court the defendant again raising the plea of non jurisdiction. Held that any

He now sued for the recovery of the property under an ekaramam which did not stipulate for payment of interest. Held that the case put forward by plaintiff in the former suit did not amount to an admission that there was an agreement to pay 12 per cent and that he was entitled to restoration of the property on payment of the principal alone. ISROOVY COOMAR MOOKERJEE, BULDEO NARAIN SINGH

53. — Admission by judgment debtor—Purchaser—A purchaser in execution of a decree of a Civil or Pecuniary Court is not bound by any admission made by his execution debtor nor ordinarily by a decree against such person. RUNGO MOYER DEBIA & RAJ COOMAR BEBER 6 W R 197 11 BHIT KOOR & LALLA DEBEE PERSHAD SINGH [18 W R, 200]

54. — Admission by mortgagor—Suit by purchaser for cancellation of mokurari lease—Said by a purchaser from a mortgagor against a darmokurandar for the cancellation of his mokurari lease granted without authority by the mortgagor. In a former suit brought by the mortgagee for possession the mortgagor admitted the mortgage. Held that although that admission was conclusive as between the mortgagor and the mortgagee the colluding parties yet that in the present case brought to avoid the defendant's title on the strength of an alleged collusive mortgage it was quite competent to him to contest its bona fide nature. DEVUJAY DEY & DWARKANATH SINGH 6 W R, 250

55. — Admission by lumberdar—Signature in putwar's diary as lumberdar—Held that the plaintiff being an immediate reversioner might maintain his suit and that his contributing his share of profit and putting his signature in the putwar's diary as lumberdar were not an admission of defendant's title as purchaser. ABD KISHORE & NUTHOO RAY 1 Agra 223

56. — Admission by heirs—Admission as to relinquishment of title—In a suit by the grandchildren of the deceased daughter of a member of a joint Hindu family who though not entitled to his property as his heirs had been long in possession the surviving daughter in whom according to Hindu law her father's interest would now be legally vested, admitted by a petition filed in this suit that by her gift or relinquishment plaintiff had a title to her father's share. Held that the misrepresentation as to his separate ownership made by R in the security bond given to the Collector could not be regarded in the present suit as more than an admission inconsistent with the title now asserted by the plaintiff the defendant not having purchased on the faith of such misrepresentation. BOONDI SINGH DUDHORIA v. GUNTER CHANDER SEN 12 B L R P C 317 19 W R 358

70. — False statement by defendant—A plaintiff cannot take advantage of a statement made by a defendant which at most amounts to a piece of evidence and not to an admission but which is found to be untrue unless it be shown that the status of the plaintiff had been affected or that he had been misled by such statement. GRISH CHUNDER GHOSH v. ISSAR CHUNDER MOOKERJEE [3 B L R A C 337 12 W R 228]

71. — Mitigation of effect of admission—Showing nature of transaction when made—Where a defendant seeks to make use of statements which have been put in evidence and to treat them as admissions by the plaintiff who put them in it is competent for the plaintiff to show the real nature of the transaction to which they relate and to get rid of the effect of the apparent admissions. LUTEEPOONISSA v. GOOR BURLI DAS PHOOL BEEB v. GOOR STRUY DASS 18 W R 465

The evidence of marriage between D and P consisted of their statements that they were married to each other and of a statement by K that P was D's wife. K was convicted on the charge of adultery. Held that such evidence having regard not only to s 50 of the Evidence Act 1872 but to the principle that strict proof should be required in all criminal cases was not sufficient to establish the vital incident to the charge of adultery namely the marital relation of D and P. EMPRESS v PITAMBER SINGH I L P

s 497—Where a prisoner accused of adultery sets up in defence a natra contracted with the woman with whom he is alleged to have committed adultery in accordance with the custom of his caste the question the Court has to determine is whether or not the accused honestly believed at the time of contracting the natra that the woman was the wife of another man. 1 RO. 8 Sagar marriages—Custom of caste—Sagar wives & widows married in accordance with the custom of Sagar prevailing amongst the Kooris and other low castes of Behar are so far the legal wives of their husbands as to justify the punishment of persons committing adultery with them. BISSUEAM KOHRE v EMPRESS
[3 C L R. 410]

9 Proof of adultery—Sexual intercourse—Presumption of knowledge that woman is married—In a case of adultery sexual intercourse must be proved the sexual intercourse required for adultery being the same identical thing as the sexual intercourse required for rape. The difference lies in the mode of proof in rape no presumption of sexual intercourse can be made in adultery it can be from evidence pointing strongly to an inference of guilt. It is not necessary therefore that there should be direct evidence of an act of adultery nor that the adulterer should know whose wife the woman is provided he knew she was a married woman. QUEEN v MADHUB CHANDRE GIRI 21 W R. 10 Condonation of adultery—Penal Code s 497—The Appellate Court will not uphold a conviction for adultery when the husband has shown that he has condoned the offence. QUEEN v SMITH

11 Enticing away woman—Penal Code ss 497 498—Form of conviction—A prisoner need not be convicted both of adultery and enticing away the woman the former (if there were any enticing away) would include it. QUEEN v POCHY CHUNO 2 W R. Cr 35

12 Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) ss 497 498—Condonation—The complainant alleged that his father in law had detained his wife and that with his help the accused married his wife and since then had kept her in his house. The accused was convicted under s 498 Penal Code. The Sessions Judge made a reference under s 438 Criminal Procedure Code to the effect that the conviction under s 498 Penal Code was bad inasmuch as there was no evidence whatever to show that the petitioner enticed away the complainant's wife from her husband's or her father's house with intent to have illicit intercourse with her and that there could not be any conviction under s 497 Penal Code as the circumstances of the case warranted the conclusion that the offence if any had been condoned by the husband by his omission to take any steps since the last six or seven years against the accused. The High Court agreed with the view of the Sessions Judge. JASIMADDER SHERIFF v IGNOOR MISTRY

ss. 17 18 21, 36 37—Reference to the High Court by the Chief Commissioner of Ajmere and Malwara—Reference to Chief Commissioner by Commissioner of Ajmere—Appeal from Commissioner's decision in accordance with Ch. Comm. s. 17—On an appeal from a decision in a civil suit of the Assistant Commissioner of Ajmere to the Commissioner of Ajmere the latter feeling doubtful on a question of the nature specified in s 17 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation of 1877 referred such question, under s 36 of that Regulation to the Chief Commissioner of Ajmere and Malwara. The Chief Commissioner dealt with the case as prescribed in s. 37 of the Regulation and returned it to the

AJMERE COURTS REGULATION (I of 1877)—concluded

Commissioner who dismissed the suit in accordance with the Chief Commissioner's judgment. The plaintiff preferred an appeal to the Chief Commissioner from the Commissioner's decision. The Chief Commissioner did not make any order on the memorandum of appeal admitting it or directing that it should be registered or that the respondent should be summoned or that the appellant should appear on a certain day under s 551 of Act X of 1877 but issued a notice to the appellant's counsel to appear on a certain day. The appellant's counsel appeared on that day and the Chief Commissioner intimated that he was acting under s 551 of Act X of 1877. The appellant's counsel then proceeded to address the Chief Commissioner and was heard for some time and then stopped in consequence of the Chief Commissioner resolving to refer to the High Court the question whether the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay to him or to Her Majesty in Council. The Chief Commissioner subsequently referred such question to the High Court. Held by the Full Bench (SPARKIE J. dissenting) on a reference by the Division Bench before which the Chief Commissioner's reference came that such question arose in the trial of an appeal within the meaning of s 21 of the Ajmere Courts Regulation I of 1877 and was properly referred to the High Court. Held by the Division Bench (SPARKIE J. and STRAIGHT J.) that the appeal from the Commissioner's decision lay in this particular case not to the Chief Commissioner but to Her Majesty in Council. THAKUR OF MASUDA v. AMEEN—continued

5. — Power of Mufti Sudder Ameen to set aside attachment issued by himself—A Mufti Sudder Ameen may set aside an attachment in a suit issued from his Court and no longer properly in force in the suit although no express statutory power to do so exists. But on a petition to set aside such an attachment he cannot also make a declaration as to the right to the property attached and claimed to have been acquired subsequently and direct that possession should be transferred to the petitioner. EX PARTE CHELLAP PERUMAL PILLAI 1 Mad. 135

6. — Evidence taken by Ameen, —Irregular order—Where a Principal Sudder Ameen had deputed a Civil Ameen to enquire into the fact of possession instead of hearing the evidence on the point himself—Held that even if the Principal Sudder Ameen's order was improper the deputation of the Ameen was legal and the evidence taken by the Ameen was legal evidence to be considered on its own merits. RAM CHURN MANTOON v SUBUBAIR MANTOON 9 W R. 484

7. — Power to examine witnesses—Duties and functions of Ameen—An Ameen should be appointed to hold a local investigation only when it is necessary to inspect the land which is the subject of dispute to take maps of localities to obtain information with regard to the physical features of the place to identify the land in maps with parcels which are the subject of the suit and to identify the maps with one another with the aid of objects to be found in the land and for these and similar purposes an Ameen may examine witnesses when the evidence which they have to give is of such a nature that it ought to be taken by him on the spot. Where however any fact can be proved by evidence taken otherwise than on the spot that evidence ought to be taken by the Court itself in a regular manner and not by an Ameen. Quære—Whether where an Ameen has in fact been though improperly deputed and has examined witnesses that evidence ought to be totally rejected. HINDABUT CHUNDER SIRCAR CHOWDARY v NOBIN CHUNDER BISWAS [17 W R. 282]

8. — Evidence taken by Ameen—It is not admissible. CHAND RAM v BHOJO GOBIND DOSS 10 W R. 14

9. — It was not the intention of the Legislature to allow witnesses to be examined out of Court by Ameens except with reference to points for the determination of which local inspection is required. SHADHOO SINGH v PAM A GOORAH LALL 9 W R. 83

10. — The report of an Ameen as to a local enquiry upon a matter which no personal inspection on his part could decide and in regard to which the depositions of parties acquainted with the place could afford proper information was held to be in no way irregular simply by reason of his having examined witnesses on the spot. SHRO NARAIN BRUGGETT v BIRCH SINGH 11 W R. 423

11. — Local investigation—Local investigation on—Suits for enhancement of rent—Act VIII of 1859

s. 150 — In suits for enhancement of rent it is a proper course of procedure to appoint an Ameen to make a local investigation in order to enquire as to the description of the land and as to the rates paid in the neighbourhood for similar land and the Ameen has power under s. 150 Act VIII of 1859, to examine witnesses in the matter. GAUN CHANDRA ROY v RASDHANANI DUTT

12. — An Ameen appointed to hold a local investigation has power to examine witnesses relative to the matter he has to enquire into but the Munsif has no power to direct the Ameen to try the whole case when this course was adopted the High Court expressed their disapproval of such a practice and remanded the case to the Munsif for re-trial. RAHUL NATH SHAW v RAJAKRISHNA DEB

13. — Direction to enquire into mesne profits. An Ameen when directed to make an enquiry as to mesne profits ought not in the execution of a suit to enter into enquiries as to dates of dispossession which must be taken to have been determined by the decree. BIJOY GOSWAMI NAIR v HALL PROSSOVO NAIR

18 W R, 294

14. — Enquiry by Ameen as to existence and value of moveable property — Time for making enquiry — In a suit in which the Court considers it necessary to order an enquiry by a Civil Ameen into the existence and value of moveable property such enquiry cannot be left to be made after decree but must be made before the final decree is drawn up. ROHINI DEBIA v DIOAMBUR CHATTERJEE

23 W R, 422

15. — Deputation of second Ameen to make enquiry before first Ameen's proceedings are annulled. — When an enquiry has been made by a Commissioner under the Code of Civil Procedure the Court to which it is reported ought not unless it annuls the proceedings of the first enquiry to order another on the same matter. AZIM ALI KHAN BANADUR v SURESHCHANDRA DEBIA

23 W R, 93

16. — Objections to Ameen's report. — Where clear instructions as to a local enquiry ordered by the Court are given to an Ameen in the presence of both parties, and no objection is made to them by either party then and there they have no ground of complaint after the Ameen has carried out his instructions. If the Court acts upon his report. DISSESSER LOY v KANCHAN LOY

11 W R, 155

17. — Objections to the Ameen's report should be enquired into if taken within a reasonable time from the return of the report, even where the case has been struck off the file. ISACRA CHANDER AMINEE v SYAM KHAN CHOWDHURY

11 W R, 85

18. — Notice of time fixed for hearing objections to the report. I AM NARAIN SING v MOHAMED LALL CHOWDHURY

2 — — — Proceedings instituted prior to change in procedure—Appeal from order under s 312 Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852)—Act VII of 1888 ss 50 56—It is a general principle of law that an appeal newly given by law is made applicable to proceedings instituted before that change in procedure is made. Held accordingly that an appeal from an order under the second paragraph of s 312 of the Civil Procedure Code although made before Act VII of 1888 came into force, would, upon the operation of that Act lie to the Court to which an appeal would lie from the decree in the suit

 the first time in May 1878 to have the case reopened. This application was refused and an appeal was thereupon preferred against the order of refusal.
 Held that no appeal would lie under Act X of 1877 and that as there was at the time of that Act coming into operation no proceeding on foot on the part of the appellant which could be saved by the operation of s 6 of Act I of 1868 there was

On the 13th November 1877 the decree holder applied to the High Court for the admission of a second appeal from the order of the lower Appellate Court on the ground that the decree had been misconstrued. Held that an appeal was admissible under the repealed Act VIII of 1869 under the provisions of s 6 of Act I of 1868. Held also that the order of the lower Appellate Court was also appealable under Act X of 1877. THAKUR PRASAD v. 52. — s 43—*Civil Procedure Code (1852) ss 492 503—Order purporting to be passed under appealable section—Appeal entered tained though Judge had no power to pass orders under the section as he purported to do—By s 43 (4) of the Guardian and Wards Act 1890 in case of disobedience to an order passed under sub ss (1) and (2) of that section in relation to the conduct or proceedings of guardians the order may be enforced in the same manner as an injunction granted under s 492 or s 493 of the Code of Civil Procedure. On a petition being presented to a District Court asking that the guardians of certain minors who had been appointed by the Court under the Guardian and Wards Act might be removed the Judge passed an order in which he purported to issue an injunction under s 492 of the Code of Civil Procedure for the attachment of the estate of the minors and to appoint a receiver to manage the estate. On an appeal being preferred against the said orders it was contended that the Judge must be taken to have acted under the Guardian and Wards Act 1890 and that inasmuch as no appeal was provided by that Act in respect of such an order no appeal lay—Held that though both orders were passed without jurisdiction the Judge purporting to have acted under s 492 of the Code of Civil Procedure as regards the issue of an injunction and under s 503 as regards the appointment of a receiver inasmuch as orders under either of these sections were appealable the fact that the Judge had no power in this case to pass orders under them did not bar the High Court from treating the orders as having been passed thereunder for the purpose of entertaining an appeal against the orders since there was no provision of law under which the Judge could pass orders attaching property or appointing a receiver without such orders being subject to appeal Hurrah Chander Choudhry v Kala Sundari Debia L R 10 I A 4 I L R 9 Calc 482 referred to ABDUL FATHIMAN v GANAPATHI BHATTIA L L R 23 Mad 517*

57. — Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870) s 15—District Judge's order on reference by the Collector—Questions of conflicting claims to title—Persons claiming interest in the compensation—Apportionment construction of the term—A Collector having acquired land under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870) and a question having arisen as to the right to the compensation—each of two rival claimants claiming exclusive title to the whole of the compensation awarded—the Collector referred the question to the decision of the District Judge under s 15 of the Act. The District Judge having decided the question in favour of one of the claimants the other appealed to the High Court. In appeal it was contended that as the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act apply to cases in which there was a dispute as to the apportionment of compensation and not to cases in which there was no question as to apportionment and in which each of the claimants laid claim to the entire amount of the compensation the order passed by the District Judge was not appealable under the provisions of the Act as there was no question of apportionment to be determined—Held that looking to the language of s 15 of the Land Acquisition Act (X of 1870) which clearly contemplates the reference of such a dispute being provided for in the subsequent part of the Act and as there is no other provision in the Act made for it the term apportionment in Part IV should be given a liberal construction, as including the case where the Court has to decide between rival claimants to the entire compensation.

The Munsif then gave his judgment in which he went into the evidence and overruling the objection of the plaintiffs gave a decision on the merits which decision was in accordance with the award. Held that such judgment though in accordance with the award was not final under s 30 of Act VIII of 1859 and was open to appeal. In order to make it final it should appear that all the proceedings have been regular and the directions of Act VIII of 1859 complied with.

84 ————— In a suit in the Munsif's Court seven issues were fixed for determination and the suit was then referred by agreement to three arbitrators. In coming to an award the arbitrators took up specifically some of the issues framed in the Munsif's Court and declined to enter into others. They determined the matter in issue between the parties and the award was signed by the three arbitrators. Two of the arbitrators subjoined to the award a suggestion which if acted on would prevent the necessity of carrying out the award. The Munsif dealt with this suggestion as surplusage and gave the plaintiff a decree in accordance with the award signed by the three arbitrators. In appeal it was contended that the award was not a legal one and it was sought to set the decree of the Munsif aside but the Judge found that the decree was in accordance with the award and that he was precluded by s 325 from disturbing the decision of the Munsif. On special appeal it was contended that the award was incomplete as all the issues were not decided and that the decree was not in accordance with the award as it did not embody the suggestion of the two of the three arbitrators. Held that the decree was in accordance with the award and was therefore final under s 35. gave an award in his favour. The Munsif refused to uphold the award on the ground that the arbitrators had been guilty of misconduct in giving an award contrary to the evidence. The Judge reversed their decision on the ground that the Munsif had no jurisdiction to refer to the evidence taken before the arbitrators in order to determine whether they were guilty of misconduct or not. He gave judgment in accordance with the award. Held that his decision was not final under s 320 Act VIII of 1859 the provisions of that section refer only to the Court by which the case is referred to arbitration. The plaintiffs then applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the award filed in Court under the provisions of s 525 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendants came in and objected to the award on the following amongst other grounds—(1) That the value of the property in suit was Rs 100 only and therefore that the application should have been made in the Munsif's Court and not in that of the Subordinate Judge. (2) That the agreement of submission was vague and indefinite and did not clearly set out the matters in dispute. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. The defendants contended that no appeal lay and that if it did it lay to the District Judge and not to the High Court. Held that

The arbitrators being unable to agree upon the matters referred the Court on the application of one of them appointed an umpire and directed that the award should be submitted on a particular date. An award was made by the umpire and one arbitrator without the concurrence of the other arbitrator and submitted to the Court which passed a decree in accordance with its terms. On appeal by the defendants in the case the District Judge reversed the decree. Held that an appeal would lie to the Judge from the decree of the first Court where there had been no legal award such as the law contemplated. *Lachman Das v. the award to that extent under s 118 of the Civil Procedure Code. On appeal the District Judge while allowing the power of the arbitrators to direct payment by instalments reduced the number of instalments which had been fixed. The plaintiff objected to the award not on any of the grounds mentioned in ss 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code but on the ground that the procedure of the arbitrator had been illegal. The Court disallowed this objection and gave a judgment and decree in accordance with the award. Held by STRAIGHT J that such decree being in accordance with the award was not appealable. Held by STUART C J that the award not being open to objection on any of the grounds mentioned in ss 520 and 521 of the Civil Procedure Code and the decree being in accordance with the award the decree was not appealable. Held by OLDFIELD J that the procedure adopted by the arbitrator being illegal not being sanctioned by the Oaths Act and there being in reality no award within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code the decree therefore as appealable. Per STUART C J that the procedure of the arbitrator did not require to be warranted by the Oaths Act as he was entitled by virtue of his office to proceed as he did. BHAGIRATH & PAM GHULAM

191 — Appeal as to costs—Discretion of Judge Jurisdiction of—Procedure—The plaintiff sued for possession of certain land in the Court of a Subordinate Judge of the second class. The Subordinate Judge returned the plaintiff for want of jurisdiction and ordered the plaintiff to pay a separate set of costs to each of the defendants. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge on the grounds first that the Subordinate Judge had jurisdiction to entertain the plaintiff; and secondly that the order as to costs was improper. At the hearing of the appeal the plaintiff's pleader abandoned the point of jurisdiction. Thereupon the District Judge held that the appeal would not lie simply on the question of costs. He therefore confirmed the Subordinate Judge's order. Held that the District Judge had jurisdiction to hear the appeal on the question of costs. ASUDEY RAMCHANDRA & BHAVAN JIVRAJ [I. L. Code Act of 1877 ss 369 372—Limitation Act (XV of 1877) sch II art 171b—In a suit for the recovery of land against a sole defendant the latter died before the hearing. Sixty three days after the death of the defendant the plaintiff applied to the Court to enter in the record the legal representative of the deceased defendant. On the 2nd of November 1880 the Court rejected the application under the provisions of Act XV of 1877 sch II art 171b and ordered the suit to abate. On the same day the plaintiff applied to the Court to set aside the order directing the suit to abate but this application was also rejected on the 20th of September 1881. On appeal to the High Court—Held that no appeal lay against the order of the 20th of September 1881. BENODE MOHINI CHOWDHURI v. SHARAT CHANDER DEB CHOWDHURI

In view of the fact that such application had not been made within the time limit set by law and passed an order that the suit should abate. Held that the order of the Appellate Court passed under the first paragraph of section 6 of Act No. 115 is not such an application under section 18, as that Act does not carry a decree within the terms of section 2 from which a second appeal would lie was not applicable. The Court of first instance held that such land was not included in the defendants' garden and they were not the owners of it but that they could not be ejected from it as they were in possession under the lease which had not expired and that the question whether such land was included in the defendants' garden and they were the owners of it was not res judicata. It made a decree dismissing the suit in these terms:

Ordered that the plaintiff's claim as it stands at present be dismissed. Held (STUART J. dissenting) that the defendants were entitled, under a 540 of Act X of 1877 to appeal from such decree. LACHMAN SINGH v MOHAN I L R. 2 All. 497

The Government Surveyor subsequently gave his certificate as to the cost of the unused portion of the said wall but stated that on the evidence before him he was unable to decide as to the ownership of the foundation etc. of the wall. The case came on again before STUART J. who decided to take evidence on the points left undetermined by the Government Surveyor. Witnesses were accordingly examined and on 11th December 1883 the Court disallowed the defendant's claim of set off and gave judgment for the plaintiff for half the sum certified by the Government Surveyor as the cost of the disputed part of the wall. The defendants appealed. Held that the decree of the 11th December 1882 was not a decree creating or directing accounts to be taken, within the meaning of s 2 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1877) and that the defendants although they had not filed an appeal against it within the period allowed by the Limitation Act were entitled to appeal against it when appealing against the decree of 11th December 1883. COVERSTON LTD v MOHARAJ PRINJA I L R. 9 Bom. 183

In a plaintiff's claim in the Court of a Subordinate Judge the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of a house together with some grain which was stored in it. 9 DECREES—continued

The Subordinate Judge refused leave and returned the plaintiff with directions that the plaintiff should institute two suits for recovery of the house and the grain respectively in the Court of the Munsif. Held that the Subordinate Judge's order was substantially an order rejecting the plaintiff on the ground that the plaintiff had joined a cause of action with a suit for recovery of immovable property, that although this might have been a misapplication of s 44 rule (a) of the Code its effect was to reject the plaintiff that such an order was a decree with reference to the defendant in s 2 and was appealable as such to the District Judge and that therefore a second appeal lay in the case to the High Court and that Court was not competent to interfere in revision under s 62. BANDHAN SINGH v SOLHU

238 ----- Order declaring the rights of parties to a partition suit in certain specific shares—Civil Procedure Code (1942) ss 2 and 591—In a suit for partition the Court of first instance (the Munsif) on the 28th of February 1893 passed the following order — Plaintiff is entitled to a moiety of the lands described in the plaint and to a decree thereto. The lands set out in the plaint will therefore be divided into two equal shares by a Civil Court Amn and when that is done one of these shares will be decreed to plaintiff with costs of this suit. On the 30th June 1893 the Munsif decreed the suit in accordance with the report of the Amn. On the 11th August 1893 the defendants filed an appeal from the final decree to the District Judge and questioned the legality of the order of the 28th February 1893;—Held that the order of the 28th February 1893 declaring the rights of parties to a partition in certain specific shares was a decree within the meaning of s 2 of the Civil Procedure Code and therefore appealable. Dulhan Golab Aker

240 ————— Order directing accounts to be taken—*Civil Procedure Code (1882) ss 2 and 521—Suit for dissolution of partnership and an account—Omission to appeal from preliminary order—Limitation—The right of appeal given by Act VII of 18,9 in making an order directing accounts to be taken within the definition of a decree and thus giving an appeal in a preliminary stage of a suit for dissolution of a partnership did not alter the existing law which allowed an appeal against such an order on the termination of the trial that is in the final decree. In a suit for dissolution of partnership and an account the Munsif on the 26th April 1893 passed an order declaring the shares of the partners and directing them to render accounts stating that this must be done within fifteen days from this date after which the final order will be passed and referred the case to a Commissioner to take the accounts. On the 31st May 1893 the Munsif decreed the suit and made defendants Nos 1 and 2 liable to pay certain sums of money in accordance with the report of the Commissioner. On the 14th July 1893 defendant No 1 filed an appeal to the District Judge in which he questioned the correctness of the preliminary order of the Munsif making him liable as a partner. Held that the order of the District Judge allowing the plea of defendant No 1 and finding that he was not a partner was right though no appeal against the preliminary order had been filed within the period of limitation. Subsequently another application was made to the Original Court to refer the case to arbitration and on the 10th May the record was sent to the arbitrator with directions to submit his award within seven days. On the 12th September as the award had not been sent in the Original Court passed an order recalling the record and subsequently the award of the arbitrator dated the 12th September was filed. 232. — Order dismissing suit for non-appearance of plaintiff specially ordered to appear—Civil Procedure Code ss 66 103 104 51 508 (8)—Effect on of application to set aside dismissal—A plaintiff who had been ordered under s. 66 of the Civil Procedure Code to appear in person in Court upon a day specified failed to appear and under s. 102 read with s. 10. his suit was dismissed. He then applied to the Court under s. 103 for an order to set the dismissal aside but his application was rejected. He thereupon preferred an appeal from the decree dismissing the suit under the provisions of s. 540. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to appeal from the decree dismissing the suit and that his only remedy was by way of an appeal under s. 53 (9) of the Code from the order rejecting the application to set the dismissal aside. Lal Singh Kunjan I L R. & All 27 referred to. The pleader applied to the Court for an adjournment on the ground that he had not time to fully prepare himself in the case. The Court refused to grant any adjournment and dismissed the appeal for default. Held that the order of dismissal was bad. The mere fact that the appellant's pleader was not prepared to proceed with the case would not enable the Court to deal with the case as if there was no appearance at all for the appellant and to dismiss the appeal for default. Per Bradwood J.—An order dismissing an appeal for default is one falling within the definition of a "decree" contained in s. 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act VII of 1859) and is therefore

304 ——— Appearance of defendant under Civil Procedure Code s 101—Civil Procedure Code ss 64 100 108 157—The first hearing of a suit was fixed for the 12th December 1883 on which day the defendant did not appear and the case was adjourned to the 18th December and as the defendant did not then appear a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff. A vakalat nama had been previously filed on the defendant's part and he had also objected to an application filed by the plaintiff for attachment of the defendant's property before judgment. Held that these acts on the defendant's part did not constitute an appearance by him within the meaning of s 100 of the Civil Procedure Code which referred to an appearance in answer to a summons to appear and answer the claim on a day specified issued under s 64 that the decree was therefore ex parte within the meaning of ss 100 and 108 and an appeal consequently lay to the High Court under s 583 cl (9) from an order rejecting an application to set the decree aside. Za n ul abdin Khan v Ahmad Ra a Khan I L R 2 All 67 L R 51 A 233 distinguished. The Ainsurat General of Bengal v Dyarum Dass 6 B L R 685 Bhismacharya v Fakirappa 4 B M 206 and Indee Haloo v Atte 10 W R 51 referred to—Per MAHMOOD J—That the Court on the 18th December seemed to have acted under s 17 of the Civil Procedure Code and that was the first of the alternative courses allowed by that section and under Chapter VII of the Code and passed an ex parte decree under the

Evidence adduced by the plaintiff was taken and a decree passed in plaintiff's favour as prayed. Some of the defendants applied to the District Munsif for an order to set aside the ex parte decree which application was refused and the defendants then appealed against the original ex parte decree when the Subordinate Judge reversed the said decree and remanded the suit for retrial de novo on the ground that the defendants had not had a proper opportunity for being heard. A judgment debtor under a decree for foreclosure made an application to the Court two days after the expiry of time prescribed by the decree for payment of the amount due thereunder in which she alleged that by reason of the two previous days having been holidays she had been unable to pay the money before and asked to be allowed to deposit the same. Upon this application the Court passed the following order—Per mission granted. Applicant may deposit the money. The money was deposited accordingly. Held that the order was merely a ministerial act and nothing more than a direction from the Judge to his subordinate official to receive the money which as it did not fall within either s 244 or s 558 of the Civil Procedure Code was not appealable and that the proper remedy of the decree holder assuming the deposit to have not been made in time was to apply for an order absolute for foreclosure which order would be subject to any steps the parties affected by it might take by way of appeal or otherwise. HULAS RAI v. One of the partners in the firm objected to the attachment on the ground that such property was not the property of the firm but was his private property. The Court disallowed the objection whereupon such partner appealed from the order disallowing the objection. Held that such order was not one under a 211 (c) of Act X of 1857 but under a 281 and was therefore not appealable. 336 ——— Claim by legal representative to property as his own independently of decree judgment-debtor—Separate suit—Judicial—Civil Procedure Code s 204 244 278 and 283—Held by the Full Bench (TYRELL, J., dissenting) where a judgment-debtor dies after the passing of the decree and his legal representatives are brought on the record in execution proceedings to represent him in respect of the decree questions which they raise as to property which they say does not belong to his assets in their hands and as such is not capable of being taken in execution, are questions which under s. 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code must be determined in the execution department and not by separate suit. There is no distinction in this respect between the positions of legal representatives added to the suit before and those added after the decree. Under the last paragraph of s. 244 the Court executing the decree may try and determine the question whether property in the legal representative's hands formed part of the deceased judgment-debtor's estate and find this fact for the purpose of bringing the property to sale in execution, and giving the auction purchaser a good title under the sale and the Court's order is subject to appeal but not to a separate suit under s. 253. Seth Chaudh Mal v Durga Devi I L R. 12 All, 313

337 ——— Questions between execution-creditor and persons placed on the record as representative of deceased judgment-debtor—Civil Procedure Code (1907) ss 244 245 and 253—Certain decree-holders obtained damages the lifetime of their judgment-debtor attaching to the said judgment-debtor but on the decree holders seeking to bring the property to sale one S D came forward with an objection that the property was his, and was not liable to sale in execution of the decree in question. Pending the decision of the Court on this objection, the decree-holders applied to the Court to have the names of S D and the widow of the judgment-debtor (who died about the time the previous objection was filed) placed on the record as representatives of the judgment-debtor. S D filed a summary objection to this application also but both objections, being heard together on the 6th September 1897, were dismissed and S D was placed on the record as representative of the deceased judgment-debtor. On appeal by S D against "the order of the District Judge of Jaunpur of the 6th September 1897" it was held that the order making S D a party to the execution proceedings as representative of the judgment-debtor rendered any order as to his former objection superfluous, and that order was appealable under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Shankar Day Dutt v Harman

The Subordinate Judge feeling doubt as to what the actual value of the property or the value stated in the plaint should be regarded in fixing the security referred the case to the High Court. Held that the question as to the amount of the security was a question relating to execution as contemplated by s. 244 of the Code and therefore an order determining that question would be appealable under s. 2 of the Code ISHWARGAR v CHUDASAMA MANABHAI [I L R. 12 Bom. 30]

A question having subsequently arisen as to what had actually been the subject of the sale the auction purchaser applied to the Court and an order was made by which the sale certificate was amended. The judgment debtor appealed to the District Court joining the decree holder and the auction purchaser as respondents. The appeal was dismissed on the ground that no appeal lay. 353 ——— Purchaser objection by—Act XVIII of 1861 s 11—Civil Procedure Code 1882 s 243 217 364—Where the holder (G) of a simple money decree who is at the same time a mortgagee applies to a Civil Court to sell mortgagor's property in execution of said decree such property having previously been sold in execution of A's decree and purchased by N (G's claim upon it being at the same time notified) and in his (G's) application inserts the name of N and calls him a judgment-debtor in the room of the heir and representative of the deceased debtor and a purchaser comes in and denies that he is a judgment debtor or liable and asks for the release of the property and the Judge disallows his objection—Held that if the Judge's order was made after investigation then under s 216 of Act VIII of 1860 on appeal was barred if it was an order refusing to investigate the objection then the appeal was barred either by s 247 or by s 364 unless allowed by s 11, Act XVIII of 1861. Held also that the objector was not a party to the suit and that he was not entitled to appeal under s 11 s 223 Code of Civil Procedure can have no bearing on such a case. NARAIN ACHARJEY v MARGORY [8 W R, 304]

354 ——— Purchaser Substitution of for original party in record—Party to suit—A party who had sued, on the party of him self and of his minor brother to recover possession of ancestral property alleged to have been alienated sold his rights and interests in the suit to a third party whose name was accordingly substituted in the place of plaintiff. Held that the substitution of such party for the plaintiff in respect of part of the latter's share in the subject matter of the suit did not make that party a party to the suit and gave him no status which would enable him to appeal. SAHIB LOY v CHOONER SINGH [8 W R, 487]

355 ——— Intervenor—Act XVIII of 1861 s 11—Party to suit—The first Court gave a decree to the plaintiff for possession of land against A the original defendant in the suit but exempted land in the possession of B an intervenor whom the Court had made a co-defendant. The Appellate Court reversed so much of that decree as adjudicated upon the claim as between the plaintiff and B and confirmed its decree for possession against A but awarded costs against B. Held that B continued to be a defendant in the suit and had a right of appeal under s 11 Act XVIII of 1861 and that he was not as a person other than the defendant bound to come in under s 70 Act VIII of 1860. 1861 s. 11—Party to suit—A female plaintiff obtained a decree against certain defendants declaring certain ekrammalis, etc., void as against her husband and his representatives. After his death she proceeded to execute the decree as one for possession and obtained an order under s. 223 Act VIII of 1859 for delivery of possession of property in the possession of a third party as being a person claiming under a title created by the defendants and subsequently to the institution of the suit. The third party appealed from that order. Held that this was not a case in which an appeal lay under s. 11 Act XVIII of 1861 inasmuch as the questions raised by the appeal were not questions between the parties to the suit. AMEERGOO v KHATOON & ABE DOONLAL KHATOON 16 W. 357 — Representative of deceased debtor—Act XVIII of 1861 s. 11—Execution of decree—Limitation—A decree was obtained in 1819 and execution issued in 1862. Several subsequent applications for execution were made against one of which the objection was raised by some of the representatives of the judgment debtor that the decree was barred by lapse of time but it was overruled by the High Court in special appeal. A further application was made and was opposed by one of the representatives who had since attained his majority upon the ground that the suit was barred. The Master disallowed the objection. On appeal the Judge reversed his decision. Held in special appeal that the terms of s. 11 Act XVIII of 1861 did not prohibit an appeal by a representative of a deceased judgment-debtor against an order passed in execution of a decree against his ancestor. SHRI HIR NARAYAN BHANDOPADHYA & GANGA NARAYAN Biswas

The judgment debtors objected to the attachment and proposed sale on the ground that the house was their own private property and not the property of the debtor within the meaning of the decree having been validly transferred to them during the debtor's lifetime. The objection was disallowed by the Court of first instance. Held that s. 223 of the Civil Procedure Code had no application that the case fell within s. 244 and that an appeal would lie from the first Court's order. I am Ghalam v Masara Kuar I. 359 — *Civil Procedure Code (1859) s. 244—Representative of judgment debtor—Agreement for satisfaction of judgment debt—A money decree was passed against a zamindar by the High Court in 1853 and it was transferred to the District Court for execution. The decree holder attached and prepared to bring to sale certain villages of the judgment debtor. These villages were included in a mortgage subsequently executed by the judgment debtor in favour of third parties. Both before and after this mortgage the decree holder received from the zamindar certain sums in consideration of his agreeing to postpone payments of the sale also it was agreed between them at a date subsequent to the mortgage that interest should be computed at a higher rate than that provided by the decree. Subsequently the decree holder sought to bring the land to sale and in computing the amount then due gave credit for none of the sums so received and calculated interest at the enhanced rate. The mortgagee objected that the computation was erroneous in both these respects and the District Judge upheld his objection. The judgment debtor took no part in the contest. Held that the mortgagee was a representative of the judgment debtor within the meaning of the Civil Procedure Code s. 244 and that an appeal lay against the order of the District Judge. PARAMANANDA DAS & MAHABEER DOSSET [I. 374. ———— Act XVIII of 1861 s. 11—Attachment under s. 237 Act VIII of 1869—One of several decree holders who had obtained separate decrees against the same judgment debtor attached under s. 237 of Act VIII of 1869 a fund in the hands of the Collector belonging to the debtor being the surplus proceeds of a sale for arrears of Government revenue and the fund was subsequently attached by the other decree holders. The fund was not sufficient to satisfy all the decrees in full. The Principal Sudder Ameen by order of the Judge heard the various execution cases together but recorded separate orders in each case for the rateable distribution of the fund amongst the creditors. On appeal by the first attaching creditor who claimed to be entitled to be paid the amount of his decree in full to which appeal the rival decree holders as well as the judgment debtor were made parties.—Held (per PRINCEPS C.J. and SETON JAMES JACKSON and HOBHOUSE JJ.) that the several orders of the Principal Sudder Ameen were substantially only one order made up of one hearing in one case to which all the execution creditors in the several suits were parties that the rival decree holders were properly made respondents in the appeal and could not be struck out and that the question to be determined being one between the rival decree holders and not between the parties in each suit the case was not appealable under s. 11 Act XVIII of 1861. Held per MACPHERSON J. that though no appeal would lie as regards the rival decree-holders the appeal was maintainable as regards the judgment debtor alone. DEBN DIAL SAROO & RADHA MUDDY MONTU DOS HATTEE LALL BHUGGUT & RADHA MUDDY MONTU DOS I ANTA LALL PUNDIE & RADHA MUDDY MONTU DOS

377. ———— Assignee of interest in suit—Civil Procedure Code 1877 s. 244 and ss. 278 283—Representation—The holders of a taluk hypothecated certain other property belonging to them as security for the rent. A decree for rent was obtained against them. Prior to attachment the talukholders assigned their interest in eight annas of the hypothecated property to A and made a mautani lease of the remaining eight annas to him. The decree holder then obtained an order for summary sale for the rent due for 1870-71. She then attempted to sell the property hypothecated to her. An objection by A was allowed. A regular suit was then instituted by the decree holder against A and it was declared that she was after selling the taluk entitled to sell the hypothecated property. The decree holder again attempted to execute her rent decree by attaching and selling the hypothecated property and an objection by A was disallowed. Held that no appeal lay from the order disallowing the objection as A could not be considered to be a representative of the talukholders within the meaning of s. 244 cl. (c) of the Civil Procedure Code and was therefore debarred from appealing under ss. 278 and 283. RASHBEHARY MOOKHOPADHYA & SURNOVOYE

378. ———— Attachment—Objection to attachment by judgment debtor on behalf of others—Order against decree holder—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852) ss. 244 250 283—Where a judgment debtor claims property which is the subject matter of attachment either on his own account as his own property under whatever right or as the representative of third parties in which capacity he has been sued the question between him and the attaching creditor is properly one between the parties to the suit under s. 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure. But where the judgment debtor raises the claim or objection on behalf of third parties who are not represented before the Court the order passed thereon must be regarded as an order under s. 250 of the Code and the only mode in which that order can be contested is in a regular suit as provided by s. 283. In execution of a decree against a judgment debtor in his private capacity the judgment creditor attached certain property. Thereupon the judgment debtor objected that the property attached had been dedicated by him some time previously as walk under a registered wakfnamah and that he was only in possession as mutwah under the deed. The lower Court found that the document created a valid wakf and allowed the objection and released the property from attachment. The judgment-creditor appealed. At the hearing of the appeal it was contended that no appeal lay inasmuch as the order was one under s 250 of the Civil Procedure Code. On behalf of the judgment-creditor it was contended that the order was one under s 244 and was thus appealable. Held that the order was one under s 240 and that no appeal lay. 379 — Order on claim by trustees for release of trust property attached under personal decree against trustee—Civil Procedure Code (1859) ss 211, 218 to 253—Appeal from order—A decree holder having attached certain property in the suit in which the decree had been passed presented a petition praying that the property might be released from the attachment on the ground that it had been set apart for charitable purposes and that it was held by defendants as trustees. The Subordinate Judge upheld the trust and ordered the properties to be released from the attachment. Plaintiff then appealed to the High Court when objection was taken that no appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge. The Court referred to a Full Bench the question whether an appeal lies against an order passed with regard to a party to a suit against whom there is a personal decree in respect of a claim he may set up to hold property attached in execution of that decree as a trustee on behalf of third persons not parties to the suit. Held that such a claim falls under s 219 and not under s 244 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that no appeal lies against any order passed on it by the Court executing the decree. The claims of third parties whether put forward by themselves or by a party to the suit must be dealt with under ss 218 to 253 of the Code of Civil Procedure and not under s 244. *Roop Lall Dass v. 381 — Collector—Civil Procedure Code 1877 s 244—Refusing execution of order for costs—A Subordinate Judge admitted a plaintiff in forma pauperis but holding that he had no jurisdiction to try the suit returned the plaintiff to the plaintiff for its presentation in the proper Court and ordered each party to pay his own costs. After the presentation of the plaintiff in another Court and before the termination of the suit the Collector applied to the Subordinate Judge for execution of the order as to costs by seeking to recover the amount of the stamp duty from the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge refused to execute the order on the ground that the proper suit was still pending in another Court. His order was affirmed by the District Judge on appeal. On second appeal to the High Court—Held that there was no appeal and therefore no second appeal under s 244 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code (Act V of 1877) against the order of the Subordinate Judge refusing execution if the order was to costs inasmuch as the question was not between the parties to the suit. *COLLECTOR OF PATNAOIRI v. The Subordinate Judge decreed the claim. On appeal the District Judge rejected it. The plaintiff then preferred a second appeal to the High Court which finally decided in plaintiff's favour. To this second appeal A was not made a party. In execution of the High Court's decree A was dispossessed but was restored to possession by the Subordinate Judge under s 332 of the Code of Civil Procedure. This order was reversed on appeal by the District Judge. A thereupon applied to the High Court under s 622 of the Code of Civil Procedure to set aside the District Judge's order as ultra vires on the ground that s 211 of the Code was not applicable to the case. A not having been a party to the appeal in which the decree under execution was passed and that therefore no appeal lay to the District Judge from the Subordinate Judge's order. Held that A being a party to the suit though not to the appeal in which the final decree was passed the District Judge had

Under the provisions of s. 148 of Act XVIII of 1873 S was made a party to the suit. The Collector decided on appeal in the suit that S and not C was the tenant of such land and J was her subtenant and not C and had paid such rent to S. Held that there was no determination by the Collector of the title to such land but as incidental to the question who was entitled to receive the rent and consequently the decision of the Collector was not appealable to the District Judge. The Collector decided in favour of F. The plaintiff appealed to the District Judge making all three persons respondents. The District Judge reversed the decision of the Collector and ordered the whole costs to be paid by F who thereupon appealed to the High Court. Held that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal so far as the party brought in under s. 148 was concerned and that being so had no power to award costs against him. His right to receive rent was disputed by H a third person who was made a defendant under the provisions of s. 148 of Act XVIII of 1873. The suit was tried by an Assistant Collector of the second class who decided that K was entitled to the rent. H and B appealed to the Collector who decided that H was entitled to the rent. K thereupon appealed to the District Judge who affirmed the decision of the Collector. K then appealed to the High Court. Held that the Collector was not competent to entertain an appeal by H that as between K and B all that the Collector could decide was whether or not K was entitled to the amount of rent claimed that the District Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain K's appeal and that K's appeal to the High Court was not entertainable. with the rules which were to govern the partition and this proceeding was confirmed by the Collector under a 131. An Amra was ordered to carry out the partition and in taking steps to do so stated the principle upon which he proposed to distribute the common land. An objection was then for the first time raised by two of the co-sharers in the Court of the Assistant Collector to the inclusion of a particular piece of land in the partition on the ground that it appertained exclusively to their share. This objection was disallowed by the Assistant Collector and on appeal by the District Judge. Held that at the stage of the proceedings when objections were taken it was too late to determine questions of title under s 113 of the Act that accordingly the Assistant Collector could not be said to have done so that the objections could therefore only be regarded in the light of objections to the mode in which it was proposed to make the partition and that consequently there was no appeal from the order of the Assistant Collector to the District Judge or from the District Judge to the High Court. *1074 PAM v. The Munsif gave the plaintiff a decree. On appeal the Subordinate Judge reversed it. Against the order of the Subordinate Judge the plaintiff appealed to the High Court on the ground that the proceedings under s 331 were merely a continuation of the original suit under s 9 of the Specific Relief Act and no appeal lay against a decision passed under that section. No appeal lay to the Subordinate Judge. Held that proceedings under s 331 of the Code are in the nature of a fresh suit between the decree holder and a third party and therefore an appeal lay to the Subordinate Judge. Ravaji Tamaji v Dholapa Rao I L R. 4 Bom. 123 distinguished. Muttamall v Chinnappa Gowden I L R. 4 Mad. 220 and Kalima v Nannan Aidi I L R. 13 Mad. 520 referred to. Nasir Ali Fakir v Mener Ali [I L R. 22 Cal. 830]

The Court of first instance held that the deed was invalid but that the defendant was entitled to remain in possession of the property till her dowry debt was satisfied and the Court passed a decree which merely dismissed the suit without embodying the finding as to the deed. On appeal by the plaintiff to the District Judge the defendant filed objections under s 51 of the Civil Procedure Code in regard to the first Court's decision that the deed of endowment was invalid. The Judge dismissed the plaintiff's appeal affirming the finding as to the dowry and refusing to decide the question of the validity of the deed as being unnecessary for disposal of the claim. He allowed the defendant's objections. The defendant appealed to the High Court. such decree being the thing which by law is made appealable and nothing else that party has no right of appeal therefrom. If in the judgment of which such decree is the formal expression findings have been recorded upon some issues against that party and he desires to have formal effect given to them by the decree as to allow if his filing objections thereto under s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code or of appealing therefrom under s. 560 he must take steps under s. 206 to have the decree properly brought into conformity with the judgment so that there may be matter on the face of it to show that something has been decided against him but if he fails to take this course the decree though in general terms will stand good as finally decided, the issues raised by the pleadings upon which the ultimate determination of the cause and the decree itself rested. The findings in a judgment upon matters which subsequently turn out to be immaterial to the grounds upon which a suit is finally disposed of as to the plaintiff's right to any portion of the relief sought by him as declared by the decree amount to no more than obiter dicta and do not constitute a final decision of the kind contemplated by s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held also that in the present case the Judge was right in holding that the question as to the validity or otherwise of the deed of endowment was wholly immaterial. The judgment of STRAIGHT J in Lachman Singh v. Mohan I L R 4 All 447 approved and followed. Per OLD FIELD J contra that the decree to agree with the judgment and fulfil the requirements of s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code should contain the material points for determination arising out of the claim and material for the decision thereon that if this has not been done the defect is a good ground of appeal notwithstanding that the decree on its face may be altogether in favour of the appellant and notwithstanding that he may not have applied for amendment of the decree under s. 206 or for review of judgment and that in the present case the defect in the decree would afford a good ground of appeal. Per MAHMOOD J that inasmuch as the provisions of s. 13 of the Civil Procedure Code relate as well to the trial of issues as to the trial of suits and in the present case the validity or otherwise of the deed was a matter directly and substantially in issue between the parties, and was adjudicated upon the finding of the first Court upon that issue was not a mere obiter dictum but would be binding upon the defendant as res judicata notwithstanding the fact that the suit against her was dismissed on the ground that she held possession of the property in lieu of dower that whatever has the force of res judicata is necessarily appealable that the word frim as used in s. 560 or s. 584 and the expression "objection to the decree" in s. 561 refer not only to matters existing upon the face of the decree but also to those which should have existed, but do not exist there and that the defendant in the present case was aggrieved or injured by the omission in the decree of the first Court and was therefore entitled to file objections to it and for the same reason to appeal to the High Court from the decree of the lower

The lower Court thereupon made an order that the plaintiff should deposit the costs of the local investigation and on it failing to do so made by the plaintiff it dismissed the suit. The order of remand was found to be invalid as made without jurisdiction. Held that all proceedings taken by the Court of first instance after the remand and pending the hearing of the appeal against the remand order were null and void inasmuch as the jurisdiction of that Court to hear the case upon remand depended upon the validity of the remand order. Commissioner having taken the account and made his report an order was made on further directions varying it in certain respects. Subsequently a final decree was passed founded in part on the order on further directions. An appeal was filed against the final decree in which objection was taken to the order on further directions. It was contended that no appeal having been filed against the order on further directions as might have been done under s. 15 of the Letters Patent so much of the appeal as arose out of that order had been barred by lapse of time. Held that the order passed on further directions was not appealable under Chapter VI of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) and that it fell therefore under the concluding portion of s. 591 of the Civil Procedure Code and any error in it might subsequently be set forth as a ground of appeal against the final decree. Per JENKINS C J—Assuming that the order on further directions was a judgment within the meaning of s. 15 of the Letters Patent and as such appealable the contention of the respondent cannot prevail as that would not deprive the appellants of their right to appeal under the Code.

555 ——— Order made in the course of execution proceedings and not appealed against—Right to raise the question as to its propriety in the appeal against the final order—A decree having in 1891 been passed in favour of the plaintiff in a suit against a number of defendants for the recovery of land with mesne profits the amount of such mesne profits was ordered to be fixed in execution. In 1897 an order was passed declaring that all the defendants were liable jointly and severally for such mesne profits which order was not appealed against. Later in the same year a Commissioner was appointed to ascertain the amount of the said mesne profits and in due course a final order in execution was passed by the District Court. At the time when the last mentioned order was passed certain of the defendants desired to reopen the question of their joint liability but were not permitted to do so. Held that even assuming that the order declaring the defendants to be jointly and severally liable was one from which an appeal could have been preferred—as to which there might be some doubt—it was a determination of one of the questions which had to be determined before the particular application for execution could be finally disposed of and the question of the propriety of the order was one that need not be at once raised by appeal but could be raised in the appeal against the final order.

557 ——— Order in execution of decree of Privy Council—Civil Procedure Code s 610—Land was put up and purchased in execution of a decree and the sale was confirmed and the purchaser put into possession. On appeal against the order confirming the sale, the High Court set the sale aside. The purchaser preferred an appeal to the Privy Council pending which he had to give up possession of the land but security was furnished under an order of the Court by persons not parties to the suit for its re delivery to him and for payment of mortgage profits in case of his appeal being successful. On appeal the Privy Council reversed the order of the High Court. The purchaser was accordingly re placed in possession of the land and he applied for execution in respect of the mortgage profits against the respondents in the Privy Council and the sureties. The Court of first instance dismissed the application as against the sureties and limited the applicant's claim against the others to the net income of the land less the cost of management and allowed him no interest. Held the order must be taken to have been made under Civil Procedure Code s 610 and an appeal lay therefrom. AREVACHELLAM v AREVACHELLAM to them. The Court of first instance dismissed the suit on the ground that the fruit on such tree had not been removed but found incidentally that such tree belonged to the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed from the decree of the Court of first instance and the defendants objected to the decree contending that such tree belonged to them. Held that inasmuch as the Court of first instance did not in deciding that such tree belonged to the plaintiff decide a question substantially in issue it did not decide in this matter against the defendants within the meaning of s. 561 of the Civil Procedure Code and as the decree was limited to dismissing the suit the defendants as respondents were not qualified to take an objection which they could not have taken by way of appeal and therefore the Appellate Court was not warranted by law in entertaining the objection taken by the defendants. BALAK TEWARI v. [I. L. R. 4 All. 491]

647 ——— Objection by party improperly made respondent—Extent of respondent's right—A obtained a decree for possession of land against B and for costs against B, C, D and others defendants in the suit. C and other defendants appealed against this decree so far as it awarded costs against them making A and D respondents to the appeal. Under s. 561 D objected to that part of the decree which awarded possession of the land to A. Held on appeal that it was open to D although improperly made a party to the appeal by C against A to take objection to the rest of the decree. TIMMATA MADA v. [I. L. R. 7 Mad. 215]

648 ——— Objections on appeal as to costs—Procedure—Notice of objections—The Court of first instance found for the defendants on the merits and passed a decree in their favour with out costs. The defendants appealed against that part of the decree which disallowed them their costs. The plaintiff filed a notice of objections to the decree on the merits as required by s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). The lower Court of Appeal varied the decree by allowing the defendants their costs of suit and held that the plaintiff was not entitled to file any objections. Held that the Court of Appeal was in error in holding that the plaintiff's objections could not be entertained. S. 561 of the Code gives the respondent the power of taking any objection to the decree at the hearing of an appeal which he could have taken by way of appeal provided he has filed a notice of his objections not less than seven days before the date fixed for the hearing of the appeal and this power is independent of whether an appeal lies on a mere question of costs. KAMAT v. 651 ——— Civil Procedure Code 1859 s. 348—A respondent making a cross appeal can take objection to any part of the judgment of the first Court adverse to him to which the appellant can answer and which affects the appellant's interests only but the cross appeal of a respondent does not open up any question between himself and his co-respondents for they cannot be allowed to interplead. The law gives a respondent a right to raise objections at the hearing of the appeal but under s. 348 Civil Procedure Code reasonably construed the contest is between two parties equally interested and not with third parties. MAHEOOD ALI v. 652 ——— Civil Procedure Code 1859 s. 348—Plaintiff sued two tenants and his co-sharer for joint rents. His suit was dismissed and the damages produced by the tenant defendants were declared to be false. The latter appealed making the former and his co-sharer respondents. Plaintiff then appeared and made a cross appeal under s. 348 Act VIII of 1859. Held that plaintiff had no locus standi to entitle him to make a cross appeal against his co-sharer upon the appeal of the tenant defendants. ANANT DOSS SEIN v. 653 ——— Whether a respondent can prefer a cross objection against another respondent—Civil Procedure Code (1882) s. 561—In a suit for possession of land the Court of first instance decreed the plaintiff's suit in part against the defendants. Some of the defendants appealed to the High Court without making the other defendants party respondents. The plaintiffs preferred a cross objection under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The non appealing defendants were added as respondents by an order of the High Court to the effect that they might be made parties with out prejudice to any objection that might be urged on their behalf at the hearing of the appeal. The non appealing defendants at the hearing of the appeal contended that they were wrongly made parties and that the plaintiffs could not urge their cross objection as against them. Held that as a general rule the right of a respondent to urge cross objections should be limited to his urging them against the appellant and it is only by way of exception to this general rule that one respondent may urge a cross objection against another respondent the exception holding good among other cases in those in which the appeal of some of the parties opens out questions which cannot be disposed of completely without matters being allowed to be opened up as between co-respondents; but as there was nothing exceptional in this case the plaintiffs were not allowed to urge their cross objections against the

Appellate Court should not go beyond the subject matter of the appeal applies to an objection called a cross appeal under s 348 which enables the respondent to take any objection to the decision of the lower Court which he might have taken if he had preferred a separate appeal. The joint effect of this section and of Act VIII of 18 0 s 16 is to place the respondent in the position of a cross appellant in so far that he must before the hearing specify his matter of objection and must pay into Court the Court fee attaching thereto. An Appellate Court was held to have acted without authority and to have contravened the Court Fees Act in having voluntarily suggested what it thought to be an error of the Court below and allowed the respondent to take it as an objection giving effect to the objection subject to the payment of the Court fee stamp. first instance as an alternative. In a suit between the widows of two brothers deceased the plaintiff's title rested on this that her and the defendant's late husbands respectively having been the sons of the same father had therefore been sapindas to each other so that the plaintiff as the widow of the one would be the heir of the other expectant on the death of his widow. In this character she sued to have set aside an adoption made by the defendant. The Courts however found that the plaintiff's husband was an illegitimate son and not a sapinda and the suit was dismissed. The plaintiff now appellant on findings of fact that both the sons were illegitimate urged that though they could not inherit from their father they yet could sue and to the estate of the another. Held that this contention was so inconsistent with the case made below that it was now inadmissible. Srimati Devi v Lalaramani 28 L P P C 61 11 B P C 27 referred to and followed. Gajapati Radhika v Vasudeva Santa Sengaro [I L R. 16 Mad. 608 I L R. 18 I A 179]

Having been found guilty and sentenced to death he appealed to the High Court of Bombay. By the Aden Act II of 1864 s. 29 it is provided that no appeal shall lie from an order or sentence passed by the Resident in any criminal case. The High Court however admitted the appeal being doubtful as to whether the above provision applied to cases arising in the island of Perim. QUEEN EMRESS v. MANGAL TEKCHAND under the section that the appellant is heard or at least has the choice of appearing that the word appears refers to the personal appearance of the appellant and that an appeal which has been admitted cannot be disposed of unless the appellant is before the Appellate Court or can be heard within the meaning of s 423. Semble per MAHMOOD J but the High Court in appeal is competent to send for a criminal to appear before it to explain a difficulty in his case. QUEEN EMPRESS v POHRI I. 79 — Duty of Court to fix date of hearing—Criminal Procedure Code 1872 s 278—A general notice posted in a Sessions Court house that appeals will be heard for admission only on the first Court day after the date of presentation of the appeal is not a compliance with the requirement of s 278 of the Code of Criminal Procedure that a reasonable time shall be fixed within which the appellant's counsel or agent may appear and be heard in support of the appeal. MALAN v THE QUEEN I. L. R. 5 Mad. 11

80 — Rejection of appeal for non appearance—Criminal Procedure Code 1872 s 274—When a criminal appeal has been rejected without hearing the appellant's pleader and it is afterwards proved to the satisfaction of the Appellate Court that an adequate excuse has been made for the pleader's non appearance it is open to the Appellate Court to rehear the appeal on its merits. ANONIMOUS 7 Mad. 81 — Omission to fix time for hearing—Criminal Procedure Code 1872 s 278—When the Appellate Court did not fix a reasonable time for the appearance of the appellant or his counsel as required by s 278 Act X of 1872 the error was held to invalidate the proceedings. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF HURI PERSHAD [24 W. 82 — Power of Court on appeal—Slotten property—Criminal Procedure Code ss 517 520—An order passed under s 517 of the Code of Criminal Procedure may be revised by a Court of Appeal although no appeal has been preferred in the case in which such order was passed. QUEEN EMPRESS v AHMED I. L. R. 9 Mad. 448

83 — Powers of Appellate Court to alter finding of Court of first instance—Criminal Procedure Code s 423—Where the Court of Session had tried convicted and sentenced an accused person under s 409 of the Penal Code and the High Court was of opinion that the conviction was not sustainable under that section the Court refused to alter the finding under s 423 of the Criminal Procedure Code to a conviction for some other offence for which the accused had not been charged or tried. QUEEN EMPRESS v IMDAD KHAN [I. conviction for one offence it became apparent that although there was not sufficient evidence to support the conviction there was evidence which might have led to the conviction of the appellants for an essentially different offence with which they had not been charged. The Court declined to consider that evidence with a view to altering the conviction of the appellants. Queen Empress v Parbati Weekly Notes 1887 p 130 referred to QUEEN EMPRESS v YAKAT [I. L. 85 — Power of single Judge on Appellate Side—Rule 50 Jan 1 60—A Judge of the High Court sitting alone on the Appellate Side has the power to hear and dispose of appeals in criminal cases. QUEEN v CHANDRA JEGAI [9 B. L. R. 6 17 W. R. Cr. 47]

86 — Power to hear appeals—Criminal Procedure Code 1861 ss 14 and 412—Officer to hear criminal matters—Magistrate of District—Government may by proclamation declare and direct that an Assistant Collector in charge of the Collectorate during the absence of the Collector shall be during that period the officer in charge with the executive administration of the district in criminal matters and such officer being within the meaning of s. 14 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Magistrate of the district may hear appeals from subordinate Magistrates under s. 412 of the Code. 120 v BHAISSANEAR HANIBAM 3 Bom. Cr. 18

87 — Concurrent jurisdiction of Magistrate—Held that the power conferred upon the Magistrate F.P. at Broach to hear appeals did not exclude the jurisdiction which the Magistrate of the district had by law and that the proceedings in any case in which a prisoner has appealed from the decision of a subordinate Magistrate to the District Magistrate must be forwarded to the latter. 120 v UMTHA EUGENATH [5 Bom. 88 — Powers of Appellate Court in disposing of appeal—Appellant bound to show ground for interference—Criminal Procedure Code ss 421 423—A convicted person appealing is not in the same position before the Appellate Court as he is before the Court trying him. He must satisfy the Appellate Court that there is sufficient ground for interfering with the order of conviction and if no such ground is shown it is the duty of the Appellate Court not to interfere. EMPEROR v SAJI WAKILAL [I. L. R. 5 All. 386]

89 — Powers of Appellate Court in cases of trial by jury when there has been misdirection—Criminal Procedure Code (1882) ss 418 423 and 537—An accused in a trial by jury is entitled to the verdict of the jury on questions of fact and where a verdict is vitiated owing to misdirection by the Judge the Appellate Court has no option but to set aside the verdict and direct a re-trial. Were the Appellate Court to go into the facts in such a case it would be substituting the decision of the Judges of that Court for the verdict of the jury who have the opportunity of seeing the demeanour of the witnesses and weighing the evidence with the assistance which this affords whereas the Judges of the Appellate Court can only arrive at a decision on the basis of the evidence. Maken v Attorney General of New South Wales L. J. (1894) A. C. 57 referred to S. 537 of the Code of Criminal Procedure does not warrant an Appellate Court in a case where there has been misdirection in a charge to a jury going into the evidence with a view to decide whether there is sufficient evidence to justify a conviction. Under s. 418 an appeal in a case tried by a jury lies on matters of law only and the Appellate Court has no power to try the accused on matters of fact. The word "erroneous" in cl. (7) of s. 423 must not be read as wrong on the facts but must be read in connection with the words that follow as meaning that the verdict has been vitiated and rendered bad or defective by reason of a misdirection or a mis-understanding of the law. WAFARAH KHAN v QUEEN EMPRESS [I. 90 — Power of the Appellate Court to alter a finding of acquittal into one of conviction—Criminal Procedure Code (1892) s. 423—The Appellate Court can under the provisions of s. 423 of the Criminal Procedure Code in an appeal from a conviction alter the finding of the lower Court and find the appellant guilty of an offence of which he was acquitted by that Court. QUEEN EMPRESS v JABANTILLA [I. 91 — Powers of Appellate Court—Enhancement of sentence—Criminal Procedure Code (1892) s. 420 (b) (3)—Alteration from fine to imprisonment—Held that the alteration by an Appellate Court of a sentence of a fine of Rs 50 or in default two months simple imprisonment to a sentence of six months rigorous imprisonment was an enhancement of the sentence and as such prohibited by s. 423 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Queen Empress v Damsang Dada [I. It was contended that the power to order a new trial under s 423 cl (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code could only be exercised when the conviction and sentence were set aside for want of jurisdiction in the trying Magistrate. Both filed an appeal to the High Court. A died pending his appeal. On M's appeal the High Court passed an order acquitting him and reversing his conviction and sentence. Thereupon one of the relatives of the deceased A applied to the High Court to set aside the conviction and sentence passed in his case and order the fine to be refunded. and the sale set aside and an application by the auction purchaser for the cancelment of the order setting aside the sale was refused. Thereupon the purchaser applied by petition to the High Court praying that the order made on review might be reversed. In his petition he submitted that the sale ought to have been confirmed when the application of the judgment-debtor to have it set aside was first rejected, but the petition did not contain a formal prayer for confirmation of the sale. A rule however was granted, calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the order reversing the sale should not be set aside and the sale confirmed, which rule after argument was made absolute. The judgment-debtor having obtained leave to appeal to the Privy Council from the order making the rule absolute the purchaser objected that such order was not appealable under cl. 39 of the Letters Patent 1865 on the ground that it was not an order made on appeal. Held that as the purchaser had obtained a rule calling on the judgment-debtor to show cause why the sale should not be confirmed, and had allowed that rule to be made absolute he could not contend that the order making the rule absolute was not an order made on appeal. Scoble—Orders made by the High Court under s. 15 of 24 & 25 Vict. c 104 are subject to appeal to the Privy Council HUKDO NARAIN SART v GRIDHARI SINGH

15 ——— Civil Procedure Code 1877 s 595 (a)—Final decree—Certain persons interested in an award applied under a s 525 of the Civil Procedure Code to have it filed in Court. The Court made an order under s 526 that the claim of the plaintiffs be decreed. The defendants appealed to the High Court from this decree. The High Court held that the appeal would not lie and suggested that the plaintiffs to apply to the lower Court to give judgment according to the award and a decree to follow it. Thereupon the plaintiffs made an application to the lower Court of the nature suggested but styled it one for review of judgment. The lower Court granted the so called review of judgment. The defendants appealed from the order of the lower Court contending that the review of judgment had been improperly granted. On the 23rd June 1880 the High Court held that the order of the lower Court was not appealable not being one passed on review of judgment but on an application to give judgment and decree in accordance with an award which had been filed in Court. The defendants applied for leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from the order of the High Court of the 23rd June 1880. Held that such order was not a final decree within the meaning of s 595 (a) of the Civil Procedure Code and therefore it was not appealable to Her Majesty in Council. PANADIN MADON & GANESH I. On the ground that a decree for an account was not final within that section the High Court refused under s. 601 to grant the defendant a certificate. On his application for special leave to appeal to Her Majesty in Council not by way of an appeal from the local Court's refusal but asking for the exercise of the prerogative right to admit an appeal—Held that as leave could be granted on any other ground should any appear bond s. the ground that the Court had refused the certificate without good cause while leave could also be granted on the latter ground if established to make this application was perhaps more convenient than to appeal from the order of refusal. Held also that the real question in this suit having been the liability of the defendant to account to the plaintiff upon several claims the decree had decided this against the defendant in such a way that although the account had not been taken the decree was final within s. 493. RAMBHAYAS HARBHAYAS v TURNER I. The certificate of which the grant was part of the procedure in the admission of such an appeal was refused by the High Court on the ground that the proposed appeal was from an order remanding a suit under s. 662 Civil Procedure Code and that orders of remand under that section were by the practice of the Court treated as not final within s. 595, cl (a). That practice is probably correct but here the order only purported to be under s. 602 which was not applicable. The first Court had not disposed of the suit upon a preliminary point so as to have excluded evidence of facts appearing to the Appellate Court essential and s. 602 appeared to be applicable rather than s. 662. The petition was accordingly refused. Held that the petitioner had no right to amend the estimate made by the clerk of the Privy Council Department still less to amend it in the way he did and that the plea of oversight was not sufficient to excuse him for non-compliance with the rules of Court or to admit his application beyond the prescribed time. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF GOUD SUDH DASS [19 W. 61. — Closing of Court for vacation—Privy Council Rules—The High Court has no power to allow an appeal to Her Majesty in Council when the petition is not presented within six calendar months from the date of the decree complained of. When the six months expired during the Durga Pooja vacation and the petition of appeal was presented on the first day the Court resumed its sittings—Held that the petition was too late and leave could not be given to appeal. TAMVACO v. 63. — Time for appealing—*Civil Procedure Code s. 399—Limitation Act s. 12 sch. Held that the petition was barred by limitation. Per Curiam—It is not at all clear that the word ordinarily in s. 399 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not refer to the circumstances referred to in the second paragraph of that section viz. when the last day happens to be one on which the Court is closed. LAKSHMANAN v. Admiralty Rules—By rule 35 of the rules respecting appeals from the Vice Admiralty Courts abroad made and ordained by King William IV in Council in pursuance of the Statute 2 Will IV in c 51 all appeals from the decrees of Vice Admiralty Courts are to be asserted within fifteen days after the date of the decree. Held that the words after the date of the decree mean after the date when the decree is pronounced by the Admiralty or Vice Admiralty Court as the case may be not the date when the decree is reduced to writing and signed. On the 23rd July 1880 the High Court in its Appellate Jurisdiction modifying a decree of the High Court as a Court of Vice Admiralty in a cause of damage by collision referred it to the Registrar to assess the damages that had been incurred in reference to one of the ships both of which were held to be in fault. The parties went without protest before the Registrar for that purpose the impugnants also having taken out process to compel the appearance of the promotents before him and the damages were assessed with the consent of both parties at a certain amount. On the 2nd September 1880 a notice of appeal was given on behalf of the impugnants and was recorded as asserted pursuant to rule 35 above referred to. Held that the appeal was not within time more than fifteen days having elapsed after the decree before the appeal was asserted. According to the law laid down in the Vice Admiralty Courts the proceedings taken before the Registrar were themselves sufficient also to prevent an appeal as of right. THE OWNERS OF THE SHIP BARENDILDA v THE BRITISH INDIA STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY I. 86 ——— Deposit of costs of appeal —Act VI of 1874 ss 8 and 11 cl b—Limitation Act 1871 s 5—Closing of the Court—Deposit of money for expenses of appeal—Power of High Court to enlarge time—The petitioners had obtained a certificate on the 1st of September to appeal to Her Majesty in Council from a decision passed against them by the High Court on the 4th of May. Accordingly the period during which they were required to deposit the amount for the translation of the record under s 11 cl (f) of Act VI of 1874 expired on the 4th of November. The offices of the Court re-opened after the vacation on the 23rd October but the Benches did not begin to sit till the 18th November. On the last mentioned date the petitioners brought in the money and it was refused by the officer of the Court as being too late. Held that it was rightly refused and that the Court had no power to grant permission to deposit it after the prescribed time. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF JALLA GUNDE CHUND I. The Court granted a rule calling on the appellant to show cause why the proceedings on appeal should not be stayed and on his not appearing to show cause ordered that the appeal should be struck off the file. THAKOOR KAPILNATH SHAH v THE GOVERNMENT I. As however the defendant in the Court below who would have been respondent in the appeal had filed an appeal under the Letters Patent s 15 against the grant of the certificate the applicant contended that the six weeks would not begin to run until such appeal was finally disposed of. Held that there was no ground for this contention as the appeal did not operate as a stay of proceedings nor remove the record to any other Court. Held that the Court had no jurisdiction to enlarge the time specified in s 11. FUNZENDRO DES ROY KUT v JOZENDRO DES 23 W. In this case a satisfactory explanation having been given of delay in giving security until after the time limited by the above section had expired—Held that the Court had rightly exercised discretion in extending the time. In the matter of the petition

87 ——— Security against party in possession—Beng Reg XVI of 1797 s 4—Within six months after decree and prior to the admission of an appeal therefrom to England the Sudder Court on an ex parte application without notice issued an execution order putting the decree holder in possession. This was done without calling for security as provided by s 4 Bengal Regulation XVI of 1797. The appellant on the admission of the appeal applied to the Sudder Court for security from the party in possession pending the appeal but that Court held that as the decree holder was in possession under an execution order which could not be appealed from they had no power to interfere. On petition the Judicial Committee under the circumstances and on affidavit of waste made an order declaring that it was competent to the Sudder Court to require security to be given for protection of the property pending the appeal notwithstanding execution of the decree had issued and gave permission to the appellant to apply to the Sudder Court with an intimation of that opinion. JARUTOO BEROOT & HOSENBER BEROOT 10 Moore s I A. 188

4 EFFECT OF PRIVY COUNCIL DECREE OF ORDER

109 ——— Effect of order of Privy Council dismissing suit on power of High Court to make orders in suit—Petition for the amendment of an order in Council dismissing a suit—Receiver's liability to account—Rights as between the Administrator General and executors transferring estate to him and the petitioner interested in the estate—Act II of 1874 s. 31—A Court having appointed a receiver in a suit has authority incidental to its jurisdiction to order him to account although the suit may be no longer pending. The estate is in its hands and the receiver is its officer and the dismissal of the suit by an Appellate Court does not alter that state of things. The original Court in such a case may permit parties interested to intervene on questions as to the accounts and may deal with costs and other matters. In a suit by a plaintiff interested in the estate wholly based on the alleged illegality of its transfer by the executors named in the will of a Hindu to the Administrator General (Act II of 1874 s. 31) decrees were made by the High Court Original and Appellate in the plaintiff's favour. The Judicial Committee however held the transfer legal and the suit brought against the Administrator General and the executors as co-defendants was dismissed. Held on the plaintiff's petition for such modification of the order dismissing the suit as would maintain what had been ordered below relating to the accounts thereby enabling the High Court to bring matters in dispute to an end that there were no grounds for the amendment. Their Lordships' opinion was that the High Court would not be deprived of any jurisdiction in that respect by the dismissal of the suit. If it should be necessary to the carrying out of the transfer that the Administrator General should take proceedings he could do so. To make orders upon the Court's receiver was within its powers and either the receiver or the executors could be called to further account without the petitioner being met by the defence of prior adjudication of the matter (s. 13 of the Code of Civil Procedure). IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF PREM LALL MULLICK ADMINISTRATOR GENERAL OF BENCAL v PREM LALL MULLICK

113 ——— Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) s. 124A—The accused who was the editor proprietor and publisher of the Kesari newspaper was charged under s. 124A of the Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) with exciting and attempting to excite feelings of disaffection to Government by the publication of certain articles etc. in the Kesari in its issue of the 15th June 1897. At the close of the Judge's charge to the jury counsel for the first accused asked that the following points might be reserved for the decision of the Court under s. 434 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) viz—(1) Whether the order for the prosecution was sufficient under s. 196 of the Criminal Procedure Code. (2) Whether the High Court had power in the absence of a sufficient order to accept the commitment of the accused under s. 53 of the Criminal Procedure Code and to proceed with the trial. (3) Whether the meaning given to the term "disaffection" by the Judge in his charge to the jury was correct. The Judge declined to reserve the above points. The first accused having been convicted applied to a Full Bench under cl. 41 of the Letters Patent 1860 for a certificate that the case was a fit one for appeal to the Privy Council. The points upon which he desired to appeal were those which his counsel at the close of the trial asked the Judge to reserve as above stated. The Full Bench refused to grant the certificate. QUEEN EMRESS v RAL GANADHAR THAK

1 GENERAL DUTY OF APPELLATE COURTS

1. — High Court Practice of—Appeal on questions of fact—Credibility of witnesses—The High Court sitting in appeal on questions of fact was guided by the same rules as those of the Privy Council when they sat upon motions for a rule for new trials from the old Supreme Court. The High Court sitting in appeal will not disturb a judgment upon a question as to the credibility of witnesses unless it be manifestly clear from the probabilities attached to certain circumstances in the case that the Court was wrong in the conclusion drawn from such evidence. The High Court sitting in appeal will look upon the decree of a Judge as to facts in the same light as the verdict of a jury and though some of the reasons given for the conclusion arrived at be erroneous the High Court in appeal will not say that the decree is against the weight of evidence if sufficient reason for such decree still remain. HERZALL CHUCKERBUTTY v. MONESH CHUNDER GHOSAL 1 Hyde 105

2. — Privy Council Practice of—
Appeal on questions of fact—The rule of the Privy Council not to disturb a judgment of a Court in India upon a question of fact unless it is clear from the probabilities of the case that the judgment is wrong however necessary as regards a Court of Appeal far removed from India would hardly be extended as one equally necessary and applicable with the same strictness to a Court of Appeal in India. SARODA SOONDARY v. TINCOWRY AGROD [1 Hyde 223]

3. — Question of fact Ground for disturbing finding on.—Hell on examination of the evidence that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have disturbed the distinct finding of the lower Court as it had upon what appeared to be mere conjecture LAL MAHOMED BIPARI v. SHOLA BEWA 11 C L R. 104

4. — Jurisdiction where appeal is barred—When an appeal is barred by law an Appellate Court cannot interfere in any matter let its materially arising out of the case unless there is want of jurisdiction. KUTUB CHAND KOLEHAN v. HIRSH MOHUN GHU R 2 W R. Mis 45

5. — Presumption of correctness of judgment appealed from—Duty of Judge—A Judge of appeal is not in the position of an arbitrator who has to look at the evidence on both sides and determine which is preferable. He has to deal with the decision of a properly constituted Court which if not shown to be erroneous ought to be affirmed. SHETABDEE BISWAS v. MOHAMMED MUNDUL 25 W R. 30

6. — Presumption as to facts found by lower Court—Omission to file objections under Civil Procedure Code s. 561—Where a decree is in favour of the respondent the Appellate Court is not entitled to accept the facts found by the Court of first instance as uncontestedly proved merely because the respondent has not filed any cross-objections to the decree under s. 561 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XI of 1892). DHAGOJI v. BARTJI 1 L L R. 13 Bom. 75

7. — Credibility of witnesses—In cases turning on the credibility of witnesses the Appellate Court gives great weight to the decision of the Courts below. WOMESH CHUNDER ROY v. DEENDAYAL PORAMAYICK 2 Hay 12

8. — Where credit has been given to witnesses by the Court of first instance before which they have been examined the Appellate Court is not at liberty to say that it disbelieves them without stating reasons. HOYMO DASSEE v. SREE KISERN LUNDY 14 W R. 56

9. — Dealing with documentary evidence—Where a Munsif pronounces an opinion as to the authenticity of certain documents the lower Appellate Court must assume that he did his duty and looked into each and every one of them before pronouncing such opinion. On a question of simple credit to be given to a witness an Appellate Court having before it merely written depositions is not authorized to set aside the opinion of the Court of first instance which heard the witnesses and recorded that his demeanour was not satisfactory. GOPPEE NATH MOOKERJEE v. BODDHURMUT MAL [25 W R. 26]

See NOBIN CHUNDER POOSHAKEE v. RENGU CHUNDER CHATTERJEE 25 W R. 363

10. — Method of dealing with questions of fact in appeal—In dealing with questions of fact which turn entirely upon evidence given on the trial the High Court ought not merely to consider whether the lower Court has come to the same conclusion as that to which it should have come if it had originally heard the witnesses but before reversing the decision it ought to be satisfied that the Court was clearly wrong. OOTTA v. MULICK GHOLAM HOSSEIN 2 Hay 359

11. — Point taken in appeal but not argued by pleader—Where a point is taken on appeal the Appellate Court should consider and decide it although the vakil may omit to argue it. DADA VALAD VALLI v. BAYASHA VALAD KASAM [8 Bom. A C 9]

12. — Duty of Judge to hear comments on evidence—It is the duty of the Judge of an Appellate Court to allow the parties or their pleaders to submit the evidence to him at the hearing in open Court and to make upon the evidence so submitted every comment and found upon it every argument they may think necessary. LALLA JITO OSHNER SANYO v. GOPAL LALL 15 W R. 54

13. — Duty of Appellate Court to direct examination of witnesses before reversing decrees—Dismissal of suit by first Court without examining defendant's witnesses—Petition of decree on appeal—Where a Court of first instance considering it unnecessary to examine certain witnesses for the defence dismissed the suit, and the lower Appellate Court disbelieving the evidence of those witnesses for the defence who were examined allowed the plaintiff's appeal—Held that before doing so the lower Appellate Court should have afforded the defendants an opportunity of supplementing the evidence which they had given in the first Court by the testimony of those witnesses whom that Court had declared it unnecessary to hear and that the case must be regarded as one in which the first Court had refused to examine the witnesses tendered by the defendants. The Court directed the first Court to examine the defendant's witnesses and having done so to return their depositions to the lower Appellate Court which was to replace the appeal upon its file and dispose of it. KHURDA BAKSHI v. IMAM ALI SHAH 1 L L R. 9 All. 339

14. — Duty of Appellate Court to call the remaining witnesses before reversing the decrees of first Court—Dismissal of case in first Court without hearing all the witnesses—The Subordinate Judge having heard all the witnesses for the plaintiff and some of the witnesses for the defendant intimated that he did not consider it necessary for the defendant to call any more evidence. He then dismissed the suit. On appeal by the plaintiff the Judge upon the recorded evidence reversed the decree and allowed the plaintiff's claim. The defendant appealed to the High Court contending that the lower Court ought not to have found against him without allowing him an opportunity to call the witnesses whose evidence had been dispensed with by the Subordinate Judge. Held (reversing the decree of the lower Appellate Court and remanding the case) that the lower Appellate Court ought not to have reversed the decree of the first Court without allowing the defendant to give the evidence which the

15 ——— Discretion Exercise of—
Discretion capriciously exercised—Error of law—

16 ——— Appellate Court's power to interfere with exercise of discretion—When an appeal against an order based on facts is given from a subordinate to a superior Court the discretion vested in the former is absorbed in the latter and it is the duty of the superior Court to weigh the facts which form the basis upon which the subordinate Court proceeds and arrive at its own independent conclusion and this is so notwithstanding that the subordinate Court exercised its discretion after a proper enquiry and due consideration of the facts put before it and not capriciously or with prejudice

Appeal—B sued M and T for money due on a bond and on the 27th April 1877 obtained a decree against T the suit against M being dismissed. T applied for a review of judgment and B also made a similar application. On the 25th May 1877 T's application was granted and on the 16th July 1877 B's was rejected. On the 29th June 1878 the Court heard the suit against T and dismissed it. B appealed making T and M respondents and impugning in his memorandum of appeal the decree of the 27th April 1877 as well as that of the 29th June 1878. The Appellate Court assuming that the appeal was one from the decree of the 27th April 1877 preferred beyond time & admitted it after time and after hearing the case on its merits gave a decree against T and dismissed the suit as regards T. Held that the Appellate Court erred in assuming that the appeal was from the decree of the 27th April 1877 and that it was at liberty to admit it beyond time the appeal being from the decree of the 29th June 1878 that decree being the one which had brought B before that Court as an appellant and that the Appellate Court was not competent on an appeal from the decree of the 29th June 1878 to reconsider the merits of the case against T the appeal from the decree of the 27th April 1877 being barred by limitation and that decree and the decree of the 29th June 1878 being separate and distinct and not appealable in one memorandum of appeal from the latter decree

26 ——— Civil Procedure Code (1892) s 543—Memorandum of appeal containing scandalous matter—Duty of the Appellate Court—A memorandum of appeal presented to a District Court alleged to be actual partiality against the Judge whose decree was in question. The memorandum was returned for amendment on the ground that it contained language disrespectful to the Court of first instance. The appellant's pleader presented the appeal memorandum unamended stating that he wished to rely on the appeal on the passages objected to and asking that the Court would if necessary strike them out. The District Judge thereupon rejected the memorandum of appeal under Civil Procedure Code s 543. It appeared that the objectionable portions of the memorandum were separable from the rest. Held on appeal to the High Court against the order rejecting the appeal to the District Court. Per SUBRAMANJA AYYAR J.—The District Judge should have ordered the objectionable matter to be expunged and then to have admitted the appeal. Per MOORE J.—(Holding, that the statement which accompanied the memorandum of

46 ———— Striking names out of plaint and amending issues—Merits of case Error not affecting—Act VIII of 1859 s 300—Four plaintiffs sued as partners but it was found during the trial that they were not all partners at the time the cause of action accrued and the Judge thereupon amended the issue which had been raised on that point and raised the question whether the plaintiffs were or were not partners and it being decided in the negative the Judge ordered two of the plaintiffs' names to be struck out of the plaint and he gave a decree in favour of the other plaintiffs. Held that the Judge acted rightly in amending the issue but that he should have done so without striking the names of the plaintiffs out of the plaint. Such an error is an error in an interlocutory order not affecting the merits of the case and therefore under s 300 Act VIII of 1859 not a ground for reversing the decree on appeal. EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY v. JORDAN [4 B L R. O C 97 14 W R. O C 11]

47 ———— Remand—Civil Procedure Code 1877 s 562—An Appellate Court is not empowered by Act X of 1877 to order or allow a plaint to be amended or to remand a case under s 562 of that Act for the purpose of such amendment. FANZALALI v. YUSUF ALI 1 L R. 2 All. 669

48 ———— Waiver of defect in plaint in Court below—Ground for dismissal—In a case in which although the plaintiff mentioned no overt act justifying the plaintiff's request for a declaration of title and still it appeared on the admitted facts of the case that there was a cause of action and the Court of first instance adjudged on the merits and passed a decree in favour of plaintiffs—Held that it was too late for the lower Appellate Court to dismiss the claim on the ground of the above defect in the plaint. SHOME DUTT CHOWDHURY v. SUBH NARAYN CHOWDHURY 24 W R. 242

49 ———— Amendment of record on appeal—A second plaintiff was added in the Court below but no amendment was made in the record and the suit was dismissed with costs. An appeal being brought the original plaintiff failed to pay the costs was made insolvent and the Official Assignee declined to proceed with the appeal. It was objected that the appeal ought to be dismissed there being no appellant on the record but the Court allowed the appeal to proceed and the amendment order by the Court below to be affected. *HEDEAR NATH DOSS v. 52 ———— Objection not taken to plaint—Ground for dismissal of suit—Suit for declaratory decree without asking consequential relief—A suit should not be dismissed by an Appellate Court on the ground of its being one seeking merely for a declaratory decree and no consequential relief where that objection has never been taken by the defendants to the suit. The plaintiffs should in such a case be allowed an opportunity of amending their plaint. LIMBA BIN KRISHNA v. RAMA BIN LIMPU 1 L R. 13 Bom. 548

53 ———— Suit for declaration of title without asking for possession—Where a person brings a suit merely for declaration of his title without seeking to recover possession although he may be in physical possession the Appellate Court will not grant an opportunity to amend the plaint if the plaintiff had already such an opportunity and did not avail himself of it. *Limba bin Krishna v. 57 ——— Appeal against part of decree—Duty of Judge—Where a plaintiff is satisfied with as much of the decision of the first Court as is adverse to him appeals making the party in whose favour the decree is made the sole respondent the Judge of the Appellate Court has only to determine whether as between the appellant and respondent the order of the first Court is correct. KISHORE SINGH v POORNU SINGH

58 ——— Adjudication on evidence—Suit for contribution where shares were not specified—In a suit for contribution on account of Government revenue which was decreed by the first Court but dismissed by the lower Appellate Court because the plaintiff did not specify the shares of the different shareholders—Held that the lower Appellate Court was bound to adjudicate upon the evidence. DHONO BIBER v PALLAN OAZER

59 ——— Evidence improperly admitted in lower Court.—The lower Appellate Court was not competent to reject the documentary evidence which had been admitted by the Court of first instance merely because it had been admitted after the first hearing of the case or after the date on which it had been ordered to be produced. HOOVOMAN SINGH v FELI 3 Agr 149

60 ——— Decision in lower Court on merits.—N W P Rent Act 1851 s 20—In a suit instituted in the Court of an Assistant Collector under cl (4) s 93 of the N W P Rent Act an objection was taken that the plaintiffs not being recorded shareholders the suit was not maintainable in the Revenue Court. The objection was all well but the Court at the same time disposed of the case on the merits and dismissed the suit. On appeal the lower Appellate Court affirmed the decree on the ground that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction in the matter. Held that as there were materials in the record for the determination of the suit the Judge should with reference to s 20 of the Rent Act have disposed of the appeal on the merits. De's Saran Lal v De's Saran Upadhyay I L R 6 All 29 referred to SHRO LALASAD v AVEDDH SINGH

63 ——— Time for making application—An application to give additional evidence should be made when the case first comes before the Appellate Court. It is too late to make such an application when the case has been remanded and has come back for final disposal per ARVOULD C J. ARDESHIR DHANJIBHAI v COLLECTOR OF SURAT [3 Bom A.C. 118 at p 123]

64 ——— Power of Appellate Court—Discretion of Court—It is within the discretion of a lower Appellate Court to allow the parties an opportunity to adduce fresh evidence if it is satisfied that the interests of justice require that course. DANODDER PA v RITOO SINGH [24 W R. 325]

65 ——— Evidence insufficient—Where the evidence upon the record is not sufficient to enable the Appellate Court to pronounce a judgment upon regular appeal it may require the Court against whose decree the appeal is made to take additional evidence defining the points to which such evidence is to be confined in order to enable the Appellate Court finally to determine the case. NARASIMHARAY KRISHNARAY v ATTARI VIRUPAKSHI 2 Bom. 64 2nd Ed. 61

66 ——— Civil Procedure Code s 305—Evidence taken in lower Court insufficient—Where a Munsif without framing issues or examining the plaintiff passed a decree in his favour upon an admission made by the defendant and upon inspection of a document that was upon the record of a former suit but the Judge on appeal reversed the decree of the Munsif on account of the insufficiency of evidence the defendant in his appeal is not being a misfeasor—It was held that the Judge ought not to have reversed the Munsif's decree without first exercising his power of taking fresh evidence under s 305 of the Code of Civil Procedure. APPA VALAD KASHINATH v VITHOBA VALAD TUKARAM 6 Bom. witnesses to prove that he had been paying at a particular rate the Judge ought under a 356, Act VIII of 1859 to have directed the Deputy Collector to send up either the witnesses or their evidence and under a 357 to have directed the evidence to be confined to the rate and time of payment and the rent to which the payment had been appropriated. MOWHUR MUNDUR v. DILL BROOKLYN SINGH 9 W R, 127

68. — Omission to call evidence in lower Court—A suit to recover money having been commenced against P and others an attachment was applied for and certain goods supposed to be the defendants' were attached by order of the Court. Two other persons coming forward and claiming the attached goods as their property plaintiffs concluded them to be partners with the original defendants, and made them also defendants. The lower Court at the trial held that the proof of partnership failed. Held on appeal that the plaintiffs case could not at this stage be supplemented by examining parties whom the plaintiffs did not think fit to call or by books which they did not produce in the Court below. VELAET ALI KHAN v. MATADERY [10 W R. 402]

69. — Fresh evidence—Civil Procedure Code s 568—An appellant who had ample opportunity of giving evidence in the Court below and elected not to do so but to rest his case on the evidence as it stood, ought not to be allowed at the stage of appeal to give evidence which he could have given below. RAM DAS CHAKRABARTI v. OFFICIAL LIQUIDATOR OF THE COTTON GROWING COMPANY I L R, 9 All 366

70. — Application to put in evidence on appeal which applicant refused to produce in lower Court—The plaintiffs had applied, during the hearing of the case in the Court of first instance for the production of certain books of account of the defendants. The defendants resisted the application and the Court refused to order the books to be produced. The suit having been dismissed the plaintiffs appealed and in the Court of Appeal the defendants applied to be permitted to put in evidence the books which they had refused to produce. Held that the evidence could not be admitted. MOWHUR GANESH TAMBEKAR v. LAKSHMINAM GOVINDARAM [I L R, 12 Bom 247]

71. — Reversing decision without fresh evidence—Defendant having purchased a decree caused the judgment debtor's (B's) rights and interest in certain property to be sold in execution and bought them himself. Plaintiff who had purchased one B's rights and interest in a 4 annas share of the property intervened; but his intervention having been rejected in the summary department he sued to set aside the summary order and to establish his vendor's right in the property. The vendor having admitted the sale to the plaintiff the first Court thought it unnecessary to examine the witnesses to and the writer of the deed of sale and, finding the plaintiff in possession, decreed the suit.

This decision was reversed on appeal. Held that the lower Appellate Court did wrong in presuming collusion between D and his vendor (the plaintiff) and ought not to have rejected the deed without examining the writer and witnesses; and that it should have decided whether plaintiff was in possession at any time under the deed of sale. RAM LALL JHA v. 72. — Admission of fresh documentary evidence—The Appellate Court should not send for and admit fresh documentary evidence which has not been put in by either party in the lower Court. DWARKANATH BHANA v. RAM LOCHNAN DASWAS 10 W R. 62

73. — Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 350—Additional evidence after review—Where a lower Appellate Court admitted a review with the object of taking into consideration a material issue which it had omitted to consider at the trial—Held that having admitted the review on grounds independent of fresh evidence it was competent for the Court under s 300 Act VIII of 1859 to admit fresh evidence if required to enable it to pronounce a satisfactory judgment or for any substantial cause. BEHAR LALL NUDDER v. TROYLUCKHO MOYER BURNHONER 12 W R. 223

74. — Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 350—The true interpretation of a 355 Act VIII of 1859 is that when a Court sees that by some inadvertence or mistake a party has not produced some evidence which he was capable of adducing and that he is likely to be prejudiced by that omission or mistake which was simply unintentional undesignated and accidental the Court will allow such further evidence to be taken. GOOWHUN ALI KHAN v. SAKHIEVA KHANUM 15 W R. 507

75. — Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 355—Appeal from ex parte decree—The Court declined on appeal from an order rejecting an application under a 119 Act VIII of 1859 to set aside an ex parte decree to receive an affidavit which had not been previously tendered and held that s 355 was not meant to have application to such a case as this but to empower the Court of Appeal at its discretion to receive evidence upon issues of facts which had been tried in the Court of first instance. LESLIE v. 77 ————— Civil Procedure Code 1859 s. 355—Evidence excluded by first court—When the first Court was satisfied with the evidence produced and therefore did not allow the plaintiff to produce all his evidence and the Appellate Court does not think the evidence sufficient it ought to allow the plaintiff on appeal to call the witnesses excluded by the first Court. BHUG SOODHAR JOY & RAMMOONISSA 23 W R. 83

78 ————— Improper reception of evidence—Jemari—When a lower Court disposed of a case upon the merits as proved by evidence not legally admissible against the defendants and the Appellate Court considers it proper to allow the plaintiff to adduce further evidence it may either take such further evidence itself or send the case back to the lower Court to take such evidence. RAMJOY LEMAN MOGOMDAR & LURAY KISHEN BHOON 17 W R. 79 ————— Discovery of fresh evidence—Application for review—The High Court will in a case irrespective of certain documents brought forward by a party at the hearing of the appeal and afterwards received an application for a review of the judgment. In an application to the Privy Council for special leave to bring in these documents—Held that further evidence ought not to be admitted under s. 200 Act VIII of 1859; that there was great danger in the Court of ultimate appeal lightly introducing evidence which had not been under the consideration of the Courts below and which the parties had no means of testing. GODIND SUDHAR DHRAL & JAGADAXA KUBTA 3 B L R. 92 ———— Record of reasons—In a suit for possession of certain lands under a howla tenure the possession of which for some generations was alleged no special documentary title was set up in the plaint but one of the plaintiffs in his deposition referred the title to a particular pottah which he said had existed and had been lost in the time of his grandfather. Two of the defendants were the zamindars of the talukh in which the howla tenure was said to exist and had transferred their proprietary right to the other two defendants. The zamindars did not defend the suit and were not examined in the Court of first instance. The lower Appellate Court considered it necessary for the proper decision of the case to examine the zamindars and relying mainly on their evidence reversed the decision of the Munsif and gave a decree in favour of the plaintiff. Held on appeal that the lower Appellate Court had sufficiently recorded its reasons within the meaning of s 355 of Act VIII of 1859 for requiring the additional evidence that it was right in so doing and that although no special title had been set up in the plaint the decree which was given on the evidence in favour of the plaintiffs could not be reversed in special appeal. RADHANATH DHURI v LANGOOND PAL 3 B L R. to Appellate Court—The plaintiff as purchaser at a Court's sale sued in 1871 for possession of certain immovable property and tendered in evidence a sale certificate dated 20th September 1865. The first Court decided against the plaintiff on the ground among others that the certificate was not registered though registration of it was compulsory. On the 9th February 1875 the plaintiff filed an appeal in the High Court against that decree and on the 26th July 1875 applied to that Court for permission to give in evidence a new certificate of sale issued on the 1st February 1875 regarding the same property as that to which the certificate of the 20th September 1865 related. Held by the High Court that as the new certificate was issued after the first Court had made its decree the High Court ought not to receive it or to suggest or facilitate any application to the lower Court for a review of its decree on documentary evidence which had no existence when that Court made such decree. LALBHAI LAKHMDAS v. 102 ————— Civil Procedure Code (1852) ss 562 568 569—Additional evidence by Appellate Court—Invalidity of order reversing decree of lower Court on account of exclusion of evidence—A trial took place in the Court of a District Munsif who heard evidence decided issues and passed a decree. On an appeal being preferred the Subordinate Judge reversed the decree and remanded the suit for re-trial on the ground that certain documentary evidence which had been tendered by a defendant had been excluded, and plaintiffs' witnesses who had been cited in the list had not been wholly examined. On an appeal being preferred against that order—Held that s 562 of the Code of Civil Procedure was inapplicable to such a case and that the proper and only legal course for the Subordinate Judge to take under the Code of Civil Procedure was to take either under s 568 or s 569 by himself taking the evidence which he considered to have been wrongly excluded or to direct the District Munsif to take it. Perumbra Nayyar v. 122. ——— Stamp Act 1870, s 34, proviso III—Admission of documents in evidence—Unstamped promissory note admitted as a bond on payment of stamp duty and penalty—The plaintiff sued to recover the amount due on three khattas. The defendant objected that the khattas were not duly stamped. The Subordinate Judge held that the instruments were bonds and as such admitted them in evidence on payment of the proper stamp duty and penalty under s 34 proviso I of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). At a subsequent stage of the same suit his successor in office was of opinion that the khattas in question were promissory notes that as such they could be stamped only at the date of their execution and that they had been illegally admitted in evidence under a s 34 proviso I. He accordingly dismissed the suit. On appeal the District Judge agreed with the Subordinate Judge that the instruments sued on were promissory notes but held that after they had once been admitted in evidence on payment of the stamp duty and penalty the question of their admissibility could not be subsequently raised in the suit under proviso III to s 34 of the Stamp Act (I of 1879). He therefore reversed the decree of the Subordinate Judge and remanded the case for trial on the merits. Against this order of remand defendants appealed to the High Court. Held that the promissory notes having been once admitted in evidence could not afterwards be rejected on the ground of their not being duly stamped. DEVA CHAND v HIRA CHAND KAMARAJ I. 151. — Misjoinder of causes of action—*Property wrongly attached—Joint suit by holders of two shares to have their shares declared not liable to attachment—Civil Procedure Code s 578—Amendment of plaint—A decree holder in execution of a decree against one G L attached a house as belonging to G L and his two sons forming a joint Hindu family. The sons objected that the house had previously been partitioned and was held by them and their father in separate shares but their objection was disallowed. They then brought a joint suit for a declaration that their respective portions of the house were not liable to attachment in execution of a decree against their father. No objection was taken to the frame of that suit and the Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree on the finding that partition had in fact taken place prior to the suit in which the defendant judgment creditor had obtained his decree. On appeal by the judgment creditor the lower Appellate Court dismissed the suit entirely on the grounds of misjoinder of causes of action. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held on these facts that the plaintiffs should have been allowed to amend their plaint by striking out the name of one of them and that though there was irregularity in the procedure such irregularity did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure. BEHARI LAL v KODU RAM

the claim was liable to dismissal by reason of its involving the misjoinder of plaintiffs with different causes of action. This objection had been raised in the written statement and the Court was asked to raise an issue on the point. In answer to this contention it was urged by the appellants that as the respondents went to trial upon the merits it was not open to them to urge any objection like this to the frame of the suit on appeal. Held that it was open to the respondents to raise the objection as to misjoinder in appeal. Tarunee Charan Ghose v Hunsman Jha 20 W R 240 distinguished Smurthwaite v Hannay L R (1894) 4 C 491 referred to. MOHINA CHAKRAVARTY CHOWDHURY v ATUL CHANDRA CHAKRAVARTI CHOWDHURY I L R. 24 Cal. 540

156. — Non joinder of plaintiff's undivided brother—Suit by mortgagees against sons of a deceased judgment debtor—Decree against members of joint family—Parties Non joinder of—Civil Procedure Code (1882) s 578—A personal decree on a mortgage was passed against a Hindu (the mortgagor) and his two sons on 19th October 1877. The decree provided for payment of the secured debt in various instalments by May 1895. The mortgagor died in 1883 having discharged part of the debt. The decree holder having attached certain family property in execution the mortgagor's two younger sons who had not been born at the date of the above decree objected that their shares were not liable to attachment. This objection prevailed the Court expressing the opinion that the matter in controversy should be determined in a regular suit. The other defendants in the suit of 1877 had both died in the interval one of them leaving infant sons.

The decree-holder (in whose sole name the mortgage stood) now sued the sons of the mortgagor and their infant nephews in 1891 describing himself being allowed to amend his plaint as managing coparcener and representative of the joint family. A plea of non joinder was raised inter alia on the ground that the plaintiff had an undivided brother—Held that since the plaint (as amended) showed that the plaintiff sued as managing member of his undivided family the omission to join his brother was a merely formal error and was not fatal to the suit. RAMAYYA v. 162 — Improper exercise of discretion in granting declaratory decrees—Civil Procedure Code 1882 s. 578—The awarding of declaratory relief as regulated by s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act is a discretionary power which Courts of equity are empowered to exercise with reference to the circumstances of each case and the nature of the facts stated in the plaint and the prayer of the plaintiff that as long as a Court of first instance possesses jurisdiction to entertain a declaratory suit and, entering into the merits of the case arrives at right conclusions and awards a declaratory decree such a decree cannot be reversed in appeal simply because the discretion has been improperly exercised and that such improper exercise of discretion under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act has no higher footing than that of an error defect or irregularity not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court within the meaning of s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. This does not imply that even in cases where the discretionary power to award declaratory relief has been exercised wholly arbitrarily and in a manner grossly inconsistent with judicial principles the Court of Appeal would have no power to interfere. Ram Kanays Chuckerbutty v. 163 — Error in allowing wrong party to begin—Suit on bond—Right to begin—Civil Procedure Code 1877 s. 578—The defendants in a suit on a bond admitted the execution of the bond but denied that they had received as the bond recited they had done at the time of execution the consideration for it. The Court of first instance irregularly allowed the plaintiff to call witnesses to prove that the consideration had been paid at the time of the execution of the bond. They proved, however, that it had not been paid at the time of the execution but if paid at all at some subsequent time. The plaintiff gave no further evidence of payment and the Court of first instance, without calling on the defendants to disprove the suit. The lower Appellate Court held that the defendants should have been required to begin under the circumstances and reversed the decree of the Court of first instance and gave the plaintiff a decree. Held that it was doubtful how far regard to the provisions of s. 578 of Act V of 1877 whether it was competent for the lower Appellate Court to reverse the decision of the Court of first instance; but even if it were the lower Appellate

The first Court gave the plaintiff a decree and this decree was affirmed on appeal by the District Judge who however gave no reasons of his own for his judgment but merely adopted those of the lower Court. Held that having regard to the nature of the case and the simplicity of the point for determination the fact of the District Judge having omitted to state his reasons did not amount to such an error of law within the meaning of s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure as affected the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. ROHIMONT DABI v. 168 ——— Institution of suit in wrong Court—Civil Procedure Code 1882 s 578—Per MAHMOOD J—The institution of a suit in a Court of higher grade than the Court which is competent to try it is not a question either as to the jurisdiction or affecting the merits of the case. If the Political Agent was not properly representing the Chief he had no merits or rights against the defendants. The District Judge was therefore right in reversing the decree of the first Court—a s. 578 of the Code of Civil Procedure having no application to the present case. VENKATRAY RAJZ GHORADE v. The Courts below concurred in finding that there was sufficient evidence of the execution of the document by the pardanashin lady with full knowledge of its contents. From their judgments it appeared that if the defendant had been examined on commission and had given her testimony in support of her written statement it would not have been believed and in their Lordships' opinion it could not reasonably have prevailed. Held that the error alleged by the appellant to have occurred in the refusal of the Court to issue the commission (whether or not it would have been better to have issued it) was at all events no valid ground of appeal. Code (1892) ss 234 249 and 578—Application by decree holder for execution of decree by substitution on death of the judgment debtor to the Court where the decree has been transferred—A decree was transferred to another Court for execution. Pending the proceedings one of the judgment debtors died. On an application to that Court by the judgment creditor to execute the decree against the legal representative of the deceased judgment-debtor a notice was issued under s 243 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The legal representative objected that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the application and that the application should have been made under s 234 of the Code to the Court that passed the decree. Held that even assuming that an application under s 234 to the Court which passed the decree was a necessary preliminary to proceedings under s 243 by the Court executing the decree the omission to make it was only an irregularity which did not affect the merits of the case and under s 578 the order of the Court of first instance should not have been reversed on account of such irregularity. G. INTERFERENCE WITH AND LOWER TO VARY ORDER OF LOWER COURT—continued

196 ——— Presumption of correctness of judgment of lower Court—Grounds for interference with—An Appellate Court ought not to interfere with the judgment of the lower Court until perfectly satisfied that the conclusion arrived at by the Court below is erroneous. It is a presumption of law that the judgment appealed against is right until the contrary is shown and when there is a doubt about it the benefit of that doubt should be given by the Appellate Court to the respondent. 199 ——— Appeal on full Court fee from decree dismissing suit in part—Remand of whole case though no cross appeal or objections preferred—Civil Procedure Code ss 562 578—Practice—Dismissal of whole suit on remand—High Court competent in second appeal to consider validity of remand order not specially appealed—Civil Procedure Code ss 544 561—A plaintiff whose suit had been decreed in part appealed from so much of the first Court's decree as was adverse to him and stamped his memorandum of appeal with a stamp which would have covered an appeal from the whole decree. The defendant did not appeal or file cross objections. The lower Appellate Court remanded the whole case to the first Court under a 563 of the Civil Procedure Code the plaintiff not appealing under s. 588 ("8) from the order of remand. The first Court then dismissed the whole suit and on appeal by the plaintiff the lower Appellate Court confirmed the decree. On a second appeal to the High Court held (i) that the High Court was competent to consider the validity or propriety of the order of remand though it had not been specially appealed against (i) that the order of remand was ultra vires so far as it related to that part of the first Court's decree which was favourable to the plaintiff the lower Appellate Court not having jurisdiction in the absence of any appeal or objections by the defendant to disturb that part of the decree (ii) that the order of remand was not made valid by the subsequent appearance of the plaintiff before the first Court or by the appeal from the first Court's decree on the remand and (iv) that the case was not

200. — Application to set aside sale in execution of decree—Court reversing lower Court on evidence taken before necessary party was added—Superintendence of High Court—Civil Procedure Code s 622—A person alleging himself to be the undivided brother and as such the legal representative of a deceased judgment debtor applied to have set aside a sale of certain property alleged by him to be joint family property which had taken place in execution of the decree. He did not make the purchaser a party to such application. The Court of first instance dismissed the application. On appeal the Appellate Court made the purchaser a party to the proceedings and holding that there was irregularity in conducting the sale reversed the order of the Court of first instance. Held that the Appellate Court was wrong in so holding, upon evidence recorded by the Court of first instance when the purchaser was not a party to the proceedings and the order of the Appellate Court was set aside under s 622 of the Code. SUBBARAYAN v PEDDA SUBBARAYAN I. 201. — Want of cause of action—Grounds for rejecting plaint—Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) s 53—In a suit for confirmation of possession and declaration of title in respect of land where the plaintiff did not disclose any facts from which it could be said that the defendants denied the plaintiff's title but from the proceedings in the original cause it was established that before the suit was brought there was a dispute existing between the parties as regards the title and that a decree in favour of the plaintiffs had been passed by the original Court on the merits of the case—Held that though the plaintiff might have been rejected in the first instance under s 53 of the Civil Procedure Code on the ground that it did not disclose any cause of action it was too late for an Appellate Court to reverse the decree solely on that ground without being satisfied that no such cause of action was established on the evidence. SHAH AHMED SULTAN v TAREK RAI I. lite—When the decree of a subordinate Court is under appeal to the High Court it is open to the High Court to vary it either in points in which it is erroneous or in respect of matters occurring subsequently to the date of such decree which are admitted. The plaintiff obtained a decree in a partition suit in the Subordinate Judge's Court for his share in certain joint family property in the possession of the defendants (his co-partners). The decree was affirmed on appeal. The defendants filed a second appeal in the High Court but before it was decided one of the defendants died. The plaintiff at the hearing of the second appeal claimed a larger share in the family property than he had been awarded by the decree of the Courts below. Held that he (plaintiff) was entitled to a share in that of the co-partner who died pendente lite and that the decree appealed from ought to be varied accordingly. SA KHANAM MAHADEV DANGE v HARI KRISHNA DANGE [I. L. R., 6 Bom 113]

203. — Power to vary decree as made in the lower Court—Decree confined to rights in issue between parties—S 555 of the Code of Civil Procedure 1877—After the trial of issues raising the question whether the plaintiff was or the defendants were entitled to zamindari rights in certain mehals a decree was made affirming the title of the plaintiff the evidence in support of the defendant's case being discredited, and the latter were declared by the decree to be the plaintiff's under tenure holders of the said mehals. This was modified on appeal by the declaration that the defendants are patnidars of the same mehals. Held that it was unnecessary on this appeal to consider whether the Appellate Court was right in its conclusion that the defendants were patnidars because upon the case which had been set up for the defendants and upon the issues framed and tried in the lower Court the Appellate Court could not properly make such a declaration the defendants could not be in a better position than they would have been in had they claimed to be patnidars in which case an issue as to that title would have been framed and tried. S 555 of Act X of 1877 does not enable an Appellate Court to declare a right in favour of one of the parties where no issue has been fixed on the point and the right has not been set up in the lower Court. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL v KRISHNA CHANDRA MOZUMDAR [I. 224 ——— Objection to share taken on adoption—Objection on appeal to extent of share awarded to adopted son—In a suit by an adopted son to recover his share in his adoptive father's estate a son having been born to the adoptive father subsequently to the plaintiff's adoption the Court of first instance awarded the plaintiff a fourth share of the property in dispute. The defendant appealed to the District Court but in appeal raised no question as to the extent of the share awarded to the plaintiff. On second appeal to the High Court it was contended that in any event the plaintiff was only entitled to a fifth share. Held that under the circumstances and having regard to the nature of the question the point might be taken in second appeal on behalf of the defendant and the High Court varied the decree by awarding the plaintiff a fifth share instead of a fourth share but ordered the appellant (defendant) to bear his own costs of the appeal. GIRIATA v. NINGAPA I. L. R. 17 Bom. 100

225 ——— Alienation—Alienation by member of Mitakshara family—Invalidity of alienation—Proof of consideration—A father having executed a deed conveying certain ancestral property to two persons (D and B) who alienated it to several others his son sued to have the conveyances by D and B set aside on the ground that the deed given by the father was benami and that D and B never had possession. The suit was dismissed by both the lower Courts. Held that as plaintiff went to trial in the Courts below upon one issue only viz. whether D and B were ever really in occupation he was not entitled in special appeal to complain that evidence had not been taken as to the passing of consideration money. Held that as no issue was raised in the lower Courts which could have been the foundation for a declaration of right the non decision of a claim to such a declaration could not be made a ground of special appeal. Held that where the question whether the alienation of certain property by the father without the son's consent was valid under the Mitakshara law was not raised in the lower Courts such invalidity could not be admitted as a ground of objection in special appeal for it necessarily involved an issue of fact. PURJAG DUTT v. and to which the plaintiff her son was entitled after her death. While she was still living the plaintiff filed this suit praying that the will might be declared invalid. The defendants were the testatrix and those who took under the will. While the suit was pending the testatrix died. The Subordinate Judge passed a decree in plaintiff's favour and declared the will invalid. The defendants appealed and contended for the first time in appeal that the allegations in the plaint viz. that the will was in their favour and that they (the defendants) were interested in denying the plaintiff a title as reversioner did not constitute a case in which in the exercise of a sound judicial discretion a declaratory decree ought to be made. Held that as the objection was taken for the first time in appeal it would be unjust to allow the defendants to benefit after they had failed to resist it on a claim on the merits. MAAGNIAL PURUSOTTAM v GOVINDAL NAGINDAS

The case was tried on remand from the Judge as a suit under the provisions of s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859. Held per JACKSON J. that as the decree holder had not complained that the officer of the Court had been obstructed or resisted by the claimant the case did not fall within s. 229 of Act VIII of 1859 and therefore the Court had not jurisdiction to take summary cognizance of the case. 272. — Objection to suit for mesne profits as being matter for execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) s. 244

—A landlord sued his tenant for arrears of rent and obtained a decree for a certain amount and a declaration that if the amount were not paid within fifteen days the tenant should be ejected under s. 52 Act VIII of 1869. The amount was not paid and the landlord executed the decree and obtained possession. The tenant appealed and succeeded in getting the decree set aside and the amount found due from him for arrears by the first Court was reduced and a decree made directing that if the reduced amount were not paid within fifteen days, he should be ejected. He paid the amount found due by the Appellate Court within the fifteen days and recovered possession of his holding. He then brought a suit in the Munsif's Court to recover mesne profits from his landlord for the time he was in possession after the execution of the first Court's decree. It was contended on second appeal that the suit would not lie as the matter might and should have been determined in the execution department under s. 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that as the suit was instituted in the Munsif's Court and the Munsif under the circumstances of the case was the officer who in the first instance would have had to determine the matter in the execution department there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Munsif which he did not possess and that upon the authority of the decision in Purmessuree Iershah Nara n Singh v Jankee Koor 19 W R. 90 this could not be made a ground of objection on appeal. 271. — Summary suit for possession—A and B obtained a decree for possession of land against C. On their proceeding to execute their decree D who was in possession presented a petition to the Munsif complaining that they were thereby attempting unlawfully to interfere with his possession. The case was tried on remand from the Judge as a suit under the provisions of a 229 of Act VIII of 1859. Held per JACOB J. that as the decree holder had not complained that the officer of the Court had been obstructed or resisted by the claimant the case did not fall within a 229 of Act VIII of 1859 and therefore the Court had not jurisdiction to take summary cognizance of the case. PER MITTAN J.—This objection taken for the first time on appeal did not affect the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court. *BEHAL SINGH CHOWDHRY v. 272. — Objection to suit for mesne profits as being matter for execution—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1892) s. 244

—A landlord sued his tenant for arrears of rent and obtained a decree for a certain amount and a declaration that if the amount were not paid within fifteen days the tenant should be ejected under a 52 Act VIII of 1859. The amount was not paid and the landlord executed the decree and obtained possession. The tenant appealed and succeeded in getting the decree set aside and the amount found due from him for arrears by the first Court was reduced and a decree made directing that if the reduced amount were not paid within fifteen days he should be ejected. He paid the amount found due by the Appellate Court within the fifteen days and recovered possession of his holding. He then brought a suit in the Munsif's Court to recover mesne profits from his landlord for the time he was in possession after the execution of the first Court's decree. It was contended on second appeal that the suit would not lie as the matter might and should have been determined in the execution department under a 244 of the Civil Procedure Code. Held that as the suit was instituted in the Munsif's Court and the Munsif under the circumstances of the case was the officer who in the first instance would have had to determine the matter in the execution department there was at most only an error of procedure and no exercise of jurisdiction by the Munsif which he did not possess and that upon the authority of the decision in Purmessar Ierashad Narayan Singh v. Jankee Koor 19 N. W. R. 90 this could not be made a ground of objection on appeal. Held also that the point being one that was not raised in the pleadings or before either of the lower Courts and being a point which went exclusively to the jurisdiction of the Court it could not be raised on second appeal. *ABULKADIR HOSSEIN v. APPROPRIATION OF PAYMENTS—

5 — Payments unsupplied by either the debtor or the creditor should be appropriated to the earlier items making up the debt due. This rule is not impaired by the decisions in the cases of Mills v Fowler & Sons, W & C v J and Ash v Hodgson, 6 De G M and G, 5 d Hirada Karina Appan v Gadiga Meddappa.

[3 Mad. 107]

6 — In consideration of an advance of Rs 118 the defendant executed, in favour of the plaintiff a mortgage-bond, dated 3rd November 1879 by which it was stipulated that the amount should be repaid in kind by delivery of half the amount of the rubber crops of every description produced at the first-class rates and in case the same is not paid in kind it will be paid principal with interest from the date of execution at one anna per cent. per mensem in cash in the month of Baisakh 128, F b (April 1880). The defendants admitted execution of the bond and pleaded payments in grain to the amount of Rs 136 which they failed to prove. It was found that the plaintiff had received payments in grain to the extent of Rs 171 more than half of which however he claimed to be entitled to appropriate to the payment of other antecedent debts which were due to him by the defendants. It was not stated at the time of payment towards which debt the payments were to be applied but all the payments were admittedly made in kind. Held that the plaintiff was not entitled to appropriate the payments to the antecedent debts inasmuch as, within the meaning of s 60 of the Contract Act there were other circumstances indicating that the payments were made in liquidation of the amount of the bond. SUGUT LAL v DAJINATH ROY L.L.R. 13 Cal 164

7 — Contract Act (IX of 1872) s 60—Creditor's appropriation of payments to one or other of debts—One of two mortgages bore interest at 12 per cent on the mortgage debt payable with costs and the other carried simple interest. Payments made by the debtor had been appropriated by the creditor to payment of the interest on the bond bearing simple interest while the compound interest on the other hand had been left to accumulate. In a suit brought against the representative of the debtor after his decease to enforce the mortgage bearing compound interest the objection was taken to the appropriation by the creditor. Held that the rule in s 60 of the Indian Contract Act 1872 follows the ordinary law in prescribing a rule as to the case in which the creditor may at his discretion apply to one or other of the debts due to him payments made by the debtor. A reluctance shown by the debtor to agree to pay compound interest before he executed the mortgage bond at such interest was not an indication within that section that he intended that application of his payments should be made first to that bond. RAMESWAR KOER v MAHOMED MEHDI HOSSAIN KHAN

SENIOR v EMPRESS

19 ————— Tender of pardon Effect of—Criminal Procedure Code ss 337 339—Accomplice—Subsequent trial of accomplice for connected offences—A prisoner charged before a Magistrate at Benares with offences punishable under ss 471 472 and 474 of the Penal Code made a confession to the Magistrate in respect of those offences. He was then sent in custody to Calcutta and was there together with other persons charged before a Magistrate with offences punishable under ss 467 473 and 474. The conduct to which these charges related was closely connected and mixed up with that to which the charges first mentioned had reference. Under s 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code the Magistrate at Calcutta tendered a pardon to the prisoner upon the conditions specified in that section and the prisoner accepted the pardon and gave evidence for the prosecution. The Magistrate held that this evidence was not sufficiently corroborated, and accordingly discharged all the accused but the pardon was not withdrawn and there was nothing to show that the Magistrate was dissatisfied with the prisoner's statements or considered that he had not complied with the conditions on which the pardon was tendered. Subsequently the prisoner was committed by the Magistrate of Benares for trial before the Court of Sessions upon the charges under ss 471 472 and 474 of the Penal Code. He pleaded not guilty but did not in terms plead the pardon as a bar to the trial though he made some reference to the subject and the Sessions Judge having made a brief inquiry as to the proceedings at Calcutta came to the conclusion that there was no sufficient proof of any conditional pardon and convicted and sentenced the accused. Held that by the terms of the conditional pardon granted to the accused by the Calcutta Magistrate the conditions of which were satisfied as was shown by its never having been withdrawn the accused was protected from trial at Benares in respect of the offences under ss 471 472 and 474 and was not liable to be proceeded against in respect of them and that the trial and conviction were therefore illegal. Although s 337 of the Criminal Procedure Code does not in terms cover a case where a Magistrate holding a preliminary inquiry for commitment against several persons tenders a conditional pardon to one of them examines him as a witness and subsequently discharges all the accused for want of a prima facie case against them the words every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case mean that for all purposes (subject to failure to satisfy the conditions of the pardon as provided for by s 339) such a person ceases to be liable for the offence or offences under inquiry or (with reference to s 338) for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter while making a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to the offences directly under inquiry. The words last quoted refer to the importance when a pardon is tendered of encouraging the approver to give the fullest details so that points may be found in his evidence which may be capable of corroboration. The question of how far the pardon protects him and what portion of it should not protect him ought not to be treated in a narrow spirit. QUEEN EMPRESS v GANGA CHARAN

Where a third arbitrator appointed under a 12 of Act VI of 1857 considering that his services were required merely as an umpire though he had due notice of the first meeting neglected to attend that any subsequent meetings of the arbitrators and took no part in the making of the award—It was held that such non attendance of the third arbitrator did not render the award a nullity but was only a ground for setting it aside on the ground of irregularity. Where an officer appointed under Act VI of 1857 to conduct arbitration proceedings on behalf of Government attended the first two meetings of the arbitrators and did not object to two of the arbitrators proceeding with the reference in the absence of the third arbitrator and did not attend the subsequent meetings of the arbitrators—It was held that the Government had thereby waived their right to insist on the non attendance of the third arbitrator as a ground for setting aside the award. ANDESH HORMASHI WADIA v. 3 ——— s 32—Power of irregularity—Well in all compound—Manufactory—By a Government notification of the 3rd of June 1863 published in the Gazette it was declared under the provisions of Act VI of 1857 that a certain strip of land passing by the mill of the defendants was required for a public purpose—the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway—a plan of which land was to be seen in the Collector's office. On the 4th of November following the secretary of the defendants company received a notice signed by the Collector requiring the owner of the mill to call at the Collector's office to signify his acceptance or otherwise of the compensation for the land required. The secretary went to the Collector's office and there saw a plan from which it appeared that an adjoining well from which the engine of the mill was supplied with water was intended to be taken but no compensation for the well and required was then agreed upon. On the 28th of November notice signed by the Collector was served on the defendants stating that he had appointed an arbitrator on behalf of Government and requiring the defendants to appoint an arbitrator also; the defendants in reply stated that they had already appointed an arbitrator. Held that the defendants by appointing their arbitrator did not waive the compensation for the land required without any irregularity in the previous proceedings and precluded themselves from claiming to have the whole manufacture taken under s 32 of Act VI of 1857 though no proceedings were taken in the arbitration for nearly twelve months subsequently and the defendants had shortly before such proceedings commenced such a claim. KHARSHEDJI DASHRATHJI JECIJI

The Court made an order expressed to be by consent of the parties concerned and in exercise of the Court's discretionary power under s 16 of Act XX of 1863 referring the matters in difference to three arbitrators for final determination in the said arbitrators to make their award in writing and submit the same within a certain period. Each arbitrator delivered a separate award in writing—two arbitrators finding for the plaintiff. The Civil Judge made a decree in accordance with the award of the majority of the arbitrators. The first defendant appealed in the grounds (1) that he had not executed the arbitration and (2) that there being no provision in the order of reference to the effect that the finding of a majority of the arbitrators shall prevail there was no valid award. Held that in this case the order of the Judge was valid without the assent of the arbitrators and that he might when he made the order have inserted as a provision that the decision of the majority should be that of the body and that there was no reason why his refusal to do that would be of decision wholly within his discretion and not to be equivalent to a provision commanding. IMMEDY KANFOA PAMAYA GARDAN v RAMASWAMI ANBALAM arbitration comes within s 523 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1859-) and may be filed under that section. The section is not confined to cases in which a dispute actually existing at date of agreement is agreed to be referred to arbitration. But the agreement must name the arbitrator or arbitrators and an agreement which provides for the future appointment or election of arbitrators does not fall within the section. The effect of the last clause of s 523 is to give the parties to such an agreement power to nominate the arbitrator even when they have agreed that he shall be appointed by the Court. An executor having propounded a will applied for probate a caveat was filed denying the execution of the alleged will and the matter was duly registered as a suit. The executor and the caveator subsequently referred the dispute to arbitration and an award was made that the alleged will had not been executed. The executor nevertheless subsequently continued the suit. At the hearing the caveator pleaded the award and contended that it was binding on the plaintiff (executor). The plaintiff (executor) contended that the Court as a Court of Probate had no jurisdiction to try any question as to the award but was limited only to the question of the execution of the will. Held per CANDY J that the Court had jurisdiction to determine the question as to the award. Held also that the award was binding on the executor. GHELLABHAI ATMARAM v NANDUBAI

37 ——— Appointment of sole arbitrator in place of four—Civil Procedure Code 1859 ss 310 319—Recall of reference—Consent—Appointment of substitute for arbitrator—In a suit for a partnership account the matters in dispute were by an order dated the 19th April 1877 referred by consent to four persons and an umpire the award to be made within five months. Some steps were taken in the reference but the arbitrators failed to make their award within the time limited and meanwhile the umpire died. After negotiations for appointment of a fresh arbitrator and enlargement of the time had failed the plaintiff moved that the order of the 9th April 1877 might be recalled and that the matters in dispute might be referred to the arbitration of such person or persons as the Court might be pleased to admit or be tried and determined by the Court. The defendant opposed the application. An order was however made on the 29th May 1878 that the order of the 19th April 1877 should be recalled and that all matters in dispute between the parties should be referred to C D who should make his award in writing within three months or within such further time as the said C D might think necessary. Certain provisions as to the payment of costs were also made. Held that the order of the 19th May was not an order recalling the reference under s 318 and then referring it afresh under s 315 of Act VIII of 1859 but an order under s 319 appointing a new arbitrator in the place of the old ones for which the consent of all parties was not necessary. On the application of the plaintiff the Subordinate Judge under s 52b of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1859) ordered the award to be filed holding that the arbitrators had as such an implied power to deal with the costs. The defendant applied to the High Court under its extraordinary jurisdiction praying that the record of the case might be sent for and the order of the Subordinate Judge set aside. Held that the arbitrators had no implied power to deal with the question of costs and that on the defendant's objection the Subordinate Judge should have refused to file the award. The time for making and filing the award was by subsequent orders extended to the 18th May 1888. The award was made on that day but was not filed until the 18th June 1888. The second defendant obtained a rule calling on the other parties to show cause (inter alia) why the award should not be set aside by reason of its not having been filed in time. Held that the omission to file the award on or before the 18th May 1888 did not render it invalid. 66 ——— Refusal of arbitrator to reconsider award. The plaintiff in this suit sued the defendants to recover certain moneys presented to him on his marriage which he alleged the defendants had received and appropriated to their own use. The defendants denied that they had received such moneys but admitted that such moneys had been credited by the plaintiff's father to the firm in which they the plaintiff and the plaintiff's father were jointly interested against a larger amount of moneys belonging to the firm which had been expended on the plaintiff's marriage. The parties agreed to refer the matter in dispute between them to arbitration and to abide by the decision of the arbitrator. The arbitrator decided that the plaintiff could not recover the money he sued for and which had been credited to the firm of which he was a partner as a larger sum had been expended on his marriage out of the funds of the firm. The plaintiff obtained the opinion of certain pundits to the effect that under Hindu law gifts on marriage are regarded as separate acquisitions and prayed that the Munsif would remit the award with this point to the arbitrator. The Munsif remitted the award with the pundits requesting the arbitrator to consider them and to return his opinion in writing within a certain period. The arbitrator having refused to act further the Munsif proceeded to determine the suit and gave the plaintiff a decree on the ground that in a joint Hindu family presents received on marriage do not fall into the common fund. Held (1. LEASON J dissenting) that there being no illegality apparent on the face of the award the Munsif was not justified in remitting the award or in setting the award aside and proceeding to determine the suit himself but that he should have passed judgment in accordance with the award. NANAK CHAND v RAM NARAIN

The arbitrator made his return deciding by the award only one of the issues raised in the case and that the defendants had been in possession of the land in suit for more than twelve years. The plaintiffs and the defendants claimed under the same landlord. The Munsif remitted the award to the arbitrator for determination of the other matters arising in the case the arbitrator however refused to act further in the matter and the Munsif himself took up the case and decided it in favour of the plaintiffs. On appeal the subordinate Judge held that the award made by the arbitrator was sufficient for the determination of the case and reversed the decision of the Munsif and gave the defendants a decree in terms of the award. Held that as the plaintiffs and the defendants claimed under one and the same landlord and the question between them being which of the two had the better title to the land in dispute the case could not have been concluded by the finding of the arbitrator upon the question of possession and that the Munsif had acted rightly, on the arbitrator declining to complete the award in deciding the case himself. JAYARDON MUNDUL DAHA v SAMBHU NATH MUNDUL

The other sharers not objecting to this course such agreement was filed accordingly and the case was referred to such arbitrator. The arbitrator made an award whereby he partitioned such estate into lots assigning a name only of such lots by name and wherein he stated that he had not been able to settle the accounts owing to the default of the parties and that considering that the partition should take effect without any delay he did not ask for further time. He further stated that all the parties state that they will adjust the accounts after renewing the agreement and he requested that the unassigned lots might be drawn in Court. The Court made an order confirming the award and it being objected that the settlement of the accounts should not be postponed but that they should be settled as agreed directed that the arbitrator should settle the accounts and gave him a year's time for that purpose and some of the parties not being willing to draw the unassigned lots directed the distribution of such lots in reference to the age and number of the sharers Held that such order was a decree within the meaning of ss. 1 and 5 of Act X of 1874 that the arbitrator should himself have drawn such lots and should have made the parties draw them but inasmuch as it was not shown that the arbitrator had such lots drawn in Court and no objection had been taken to the arbitrator not having himself drawn them it was not incumbent on the Court to have remitted the award in order that the arbitrator might have drawn them that the Court however should not have distrusted such lots in the manner it had done but should have drawn a lot for each person and in settling as it had done it had acted contrary to the award and it is therefore its decree is not to be maintained and that in confirming the award before the accounts had been settled and an award made in respect thereof the Court had acted erroneously inasmuch as the award had left untrammelled a very important matter to the settlement of the accounts and the Court should under s. 53 of Act X of 1874 have remitted the award to the arbitrator in the award and it is therefore its decree is not to be remitted upon such terms as it thought fit the Court could have all well in the manner it had done and in this account and also because the Court had made an order postponing the settlement of the accounts and thereby made an order contrary to and in excess of the award its decree must be reversed. *SADIA ALI v. The award was submitted on the ground that the arbitrators had not determined the issues Nos 1 to 5 and 6. Held (1) the legality of an order remitting an award to the reconsideration of the arbitrators may be challenged on appeal against the decree ultimately passed and (2) that the award ought not to have been remitted there was no illegality on the face of it and there was a decision on the whole matter in issue between the parties. *Mothurath Zedares v. 80 — Appointment of new arbitrator Power of.—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) ss 506 508 510 521.—On 19th June 1884 an application for an order of reference was made under s 506 of the Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882) by both parties to a suit. It was signed by both defendants and by the plaintiffs' pleader. As the plaintiffs' pleader had not been specially authorized in writing to join in the application the Court postponed making any order on the application till the 23rd idem. On that day the first defendant did not attend the Court but the plaintiffs' pleader produced the requisite authority and the Court made an order referring the suit to the decision of the arbitrator nominated in the application of the 19th. On 27th June the first defendant made an application to the Court to revoke the authority of the arbitrator and appoint a new arbitrator in his place on the ground that after signing the application of the 19th he had become aware of certain circumstances connected with the arbitrator which showed that he was not worthy of the confidence

reposed in him. No final order was made upon this application till after the submission of the award when it was rejected on the ground that the charges of misconduct and partiality imputed to the arbitrator were not made out. Held first that the first defendant not having objected to the appointment of the arbitrator on or before the 23rd June 1884 when the order of reference was made must be taken to have tacitly acquiesced in the course adopted by the Court and that such acquiescence amounted to a fresh submission. Ardesar Hormozji Wadia v Secretary of State for India 9 Bom 177 and Sreenath Ghose v Raj Chunder Paul 8 W R 171 followed. The objections raised by the first defendant could only be considered after the submission of the award and then only to the extent permitted by s 521 of the Code of Civil Procedure (XIV of 1882). When once a matter is referred to arbitration it is not competent to the Court under the second paragraph of s 508 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882) to deal with the matter in difference between the parties except as provided in Ch XXVII of the Code. There is no section of that chapter which authorizes the Court to revoke the authority conferred on an arbitrator and to appoint a new one except in cases falling strictly within the purview of s 510 of the Code where the scope and object of the reference cannot be executed. It is only in those cases apparently that the authority conferred on arbitrators can be revoked for good cause the cause being such as is contemplated in that section as where an arbitrator refuses or neglects, or becomes incapable to act or leaves British India under circumstances showing that he will probably not return to India at an early date. The enactment of the second paragraph of s 508 of the Code of 1882 which does not occur in the corresponding section (315) of Act VIII of 1859 has the effect of rigidly restricting the Courts to the exact procedure laid down when dealing with cases in which the appointment of a new arbitrator becomes necessary. HAJIMHAT KAHIM DEBI v SHANKAR SAI 1 L R, 10 Bom, 381

The Court trying the suit accordingly directed that J should be examined on a certain day. Before J was examined the defendants objected to the case being decided in accordance with J's evidence but the Court disallowed the objection and having taken J a statement on oath decided the case in accordance therewith. Held by STUART C.J. that the provisions of ss 8 to 12 of Act X of 1873 were not applicable to the reference of the case to J that such reference was in the nature of a reference to arbitration under the Code of Civil Procedure that it would have been valid and binding on the parties had all the defendants joined in it but that as all the defendants did not do so the proceedings were illegal and they should be set aside and the suit be decided on the merits. Held by OLDFIELD J. that the reference of the case to J was not made under or governed by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code relating to arbitration and therefore the defendants were competent to revoke the agreement and that assuming the reference was made under the provisions of the Oaths Act there was no rule of law prohibiting the revocation of such a reference and therefore the defendants were competent to revoke the same. LEKHAJI SINGH v. Maintenance

Grant of villages for—Nature of grant whether absolute or resumable. A grant of villages was made by a talukdar to his younger son for maintenance. The elder son inherited the family taluk. In the next generation in 1861 an award was made by a body of Oudh talukdars as arbitrators on the submission of the disputants who directed that the village given as maintenance be decreed in favour of the grantee to continue as heretofore. The questions raised in that award were whether the villages had been granted only for life or were inheritable by the descendants of the grantee and whether the talukdar or the holder of the grant for the time being was liable for the revenue on the villages. The same questions were now raised by the third generation who are the great grandsons of the grantor on the construction of the award. There was no limitation in the original grant of the villages to the grantee personally, nor was the grant expressly declared to be to him and his lineal descendants through males. But possession had flowed in that order and the talukdar had always paid the revenue. The award not having been filed within six months after the passing of the Oudh Estates Act 1869 did not come within s. 33 of that Act. Held (1) that the award was not on that account invalid. It was obligatory upon both parties to the submission and upon those whose interests they represented. (2) That evidence of the antecedent possession of the villages as well as of the quasi-judicial acts of the arbitrators was admissible. (3) That the terms of the award conferred upon the grantee and his descendants the right to possess the villages free of rent to the talukdar who remained responsible for the revenue. (4) That the villages could not revert to the talukdar's line until the line of the grantee's descendants could have become extinct. Bhatia Ardawan Singh v. Uday Pratap Singh [I. L. The plaintiff alleged that the allowance so fixed was payable in perpetuity and was paid till 1845 when it was stopped and prayed for a decree declaring him entitled to it and arrears for eleven years. Held that effect could not be given to the award as a decree as no Court would pass a decree fixing a grant of maintenance in perpetuity that an allowance fixed by a decree as maintenance was ordinarily liable to be varied in the party ordered to pay it when circumstances rendering it equitable to make the variation and that there being no reason to suppose that the arbitrator had any idea of fixing the allowance for a longer period than the lifetime of the parties and all these parties being dead no effect could any longer be given to the award. *Madhav Rao Deshpande v. 127 ————— Civil Procedure
Code s 521 cl (a) — Misconduct of arbitrator —
The word misconduct as used in s 521 cl (a) of the Civil Procedure Code should be interpreted in the case in which it is used in English law with reference to arbitration proceedings. It does not necessarily imply moral turpitude but it includes neglect of the duties and responsibilities of the arbitrators and of what Courts of Justice expect from them before allowing finality to their awards. An arbitrator to whom the matters in difference in a suit were referred under s 503 of this Civil Procedure Code and who was directed by this order of reference to deliver his award by the 22nd September applied on the 17th September for an extension of time on the ground that a very full investigation was necessary which it was not possible to make within the prescribed period. On the 20th September without waiting for the order of the Court he notified to the parties that he proposed to hold an inquiry in the case on the 24th and it appeared that he did not expect this intimation to reach them before the 21st or 22nd. On the 23rd he informed the plaintiff's pleader that a new date would be fixed for the inquiry of which notice would be given to the parties. Notwithstanding this on the 23rd the arbitrator took evidence for the defendant in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. All these proceedings were held before the arbitrator received an order of the Court extending the time for delivery of the award up to the 26th October. On the 27th September he directed the parties to be informed that this investigation would be held on the 5th October. On the 4th October the plaintiff presented a petition praying the arbitrator to summon witnesses and to take documentary evidence and upon this a thing definite was settled at this time but after the pleaders had left the arbitrator passed an order rejecting the petition on the ground that the evidence sought to be produced was unnecessary.
On the same date and on the 5th and 6th October he took evidence for the defence in the absence of the plaintiff and his pleader. On the 10th he rejected a petition by the plaintiff praying for further time to produce evidence and complaining of his having taken evidence in the plaintiff's absence and having received in evidence a fabricated document. On the 25th October the arbitrator delivered his award in favor of the defendant. Subsequently upon objections made by the plaintiff the Court set aside the award and directed that the trial of the suit should proceed. Held that although no case of corruption within the meaning of s 521 cl (a) of the Civil Procedure Code had been made out against the arbitrator the circumstances above stated amounted to misconduct and the award was therefore bad in law and had rightly been set aside. Soobal Thakur

131. ————— In another case
heard at the same time and between the same parties
the facts were these — The first meeting of the arbitrators was held on the 9th January without any notice to the defendants. It was alleged that nothing was done at this meeting. On that day the arbitrators sent a notice to the appellants appointing the next day (10th) at 6.30 P.M. for the next meeting.
The defendants' attorney thereupon wrote protesting and asked the arbitrators not to proceed, as they intended to apply to the Court. No notice of this protest was taken by the arbitrators and they proceeded with the arbitration on the 10th in the absence of the defendants. On the 11th the defendants' attorney received a notice that the arbitrators would hold a meeting on the 12th at 8 A.M. A meeting was held on that day in the absence of the defendants and an award was made decreeing the suit. Held that the arbitrators did not give the defendants a fair and reasonable opportunity of being heard and were guilty of such misconduct as was sufficient to vitiate the award. Seemle — The ex parte meeting on the 10th

132 ——— Ground for setting aside award—Arbitrator receiving evidence from one side in absence of other side—Misconduct—Civil Procedure Code (1882) s 521—An arbitrator ought not to hear or receive evidence from one side in the absence of the other side without (if he does) giving the other side affected by such evidence the opportunity of meeting and answering it. This proposition is however subject to the qualification that the parties may agree that a reference may be conducted in any particular way and such an agreement may be either express or implied from their conduct during the arbitration and they may also expressly or by their conduct waive their objection to an irregular course of conduct on the part of the arbitrator. Where an arbitrator received certain papers and documents from the defendants in a suit referred to his arbitration together with a letter from the defendants containing certain documents sent to him and made his award without giving the plaintiffs an opportunity of seeing the said papers and documents and of meeting the inferences deducible from them — Held that there was such a breach of duty on the part of the arbitrator as entitled the plaintiffs to have the award set aside. CURSETJI JENANJOI KHANDATTA v CROWDER I L R 18 Rom 299

133 ——— Civil Procedure Code ss 509 514 521—Omission to fix time for delivery of award—Extension of time after expiration of period fixed—Invalidity of award if not made within time fixed by Court—Costs—The provision contained in s 508 of the Civil Procedure Code requiring the Court to fix a reasonable time for the delivery of the award is not imperative but directory and non compliance with it does not make the order of reference abortive and any subsequent arbitration proceeding is not ineffectual and bad. Under s 514 of the Code the Court may extend the time for making the award after the time fixed therefor has expired. The last paragraph of s 521 does not imply that an omission by the Court to fix a positive date within which the award is to be filed is fatal to the validity of the award. Where an order extending the time for delivery of an award was made after the time fixed therefor had expired and did not fix any positive date for the filing of the award — Held that the adoption of the award by the Court amounted to an enlargement of the time for delivery of the award to the date on which it was in fact delivered and to a ratification of what had been done by the arbitrators and that the parties having made no objection to the action of the Court must be taken to have waived any objection to the award. The mere circumstance of an arbitrator having first tendered and then withdrawn his resignation does not formally divest him of his character as arbitrator. Jaymangal Singh v Mohan Ram Marwarie 23 W P 429 referred to HAR NARAIN SINGH v BHAGWANT KWAR I L R 10 All 17

dissenting with reference to the legal competency of the arbitrators to administer the oath that the objection was good and that the arbitrators had no power to administer the oath. Per Pearson J that the statement of the defendant made on a legally administered oath could not form a valid basis of an award and the award was void and should be set aside. Per Bramble J that the plaintiff having offered to be bound by the oath and the defendant having agreed to take it the plaintiff was bound by the evidence given on such oath and that as the arbitrators acted by law and consent of parties authority to receive the evidence of the defendant the substitution by them of an oath on the Koran for an affirmation did not under the provisions of s 13 Act X of 1873 invalidate such evidence and consequently render the award based on such evidence void. Wallul Lah v Ghulam Ali

176. — Vague and indefinite award—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) ss 520 521 525 526—Certain disputes between parties were referred under a written agreement to an arbitrator who in due course made his award. The plaintiff then applied to the Subordinate Judge to have the award filed in Court under the provisions of s 6.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure. The defendants came in and objected to the award on the following amongst other grounds that the agreement of submission was vague and indefinite and did not clearly set out the matters in dispute. The Subordinate Judge overruled the objection without taking any evidence and directed the award to be filed and a decree to be passed thereon. The plaintiff appealed. Held on appeal that as the objection was well founded inasmuch as the agreement to refer was vague and indefinite and did not clearly lay down the power of the arbitrator in dealing with the subject matter in dispute and as it was not possible to make out what powers were intended to be conferred upon the arbitrator the award should not be allowed to be enforced under the provisions of ss 525 and 526. Bhindsuri Pershad Singh v Jankar Pershad Singh submission of the parties to the arbitration that the award shall dispose of all. This condition may be waived by the consent of the parties before the arbitrators. The partition of joint estate consisting of different properties having been submitted to arbitration and the parties agreeing to a division being made by steps and that each division should be final without any condition that the award should not be final while part remained undivided. Held in a suit brought by one of the parties for partition of the whole estate after such a division of part that although cases cited as to the invalidity of an incomplete award might have been applicable had the arbitrators awarded as to only part of the property of their own authority and without that of the parties it was competent to the latter to agree before the arbitrators to the division being made as it had been and that here the partition as to the property divided was final. Only a decree for the partition of the undivided residue could be made. MAKOND RAM SUEAL v DALIQ RAM SUEAL [I. L. R. 21 Cal. 580, I. R. 21 A. 47]

178 — Reference applied for by agent without authority—Knowledge and tacit ratification by principal—Estoppel In a suit which was defended by an agent (am m khtar) on behalf of the defendant the agent applied for a reference to arbitration although he had no power to do so under the am m khtarnameh. After the submission of the award objection was made on behalf of the defendant that the agent had no authority to apply for a reference to the reference. The objection was overruled by the Court and a decree made in accordance with the award with one slight modification in the defendant's favour. Held that although the agent was not authorized to apply for or consent to a reference the defendant having been aware of the proceedings and tacitly ratified the action of his agent could not be allowed to question the legality of the award and the award was not void ab initio. Unraman v Chatlan [I. each sitting they came to a decision either unanimously or by a majority on different questions submitted to them. The remaining arbitrators not being asked to sign it they never did sign it. Held that the actual award was an oral award made by all the arbitrators on the last day of their joint sitting and the drawing up of the formal award was a purely ministerial act to give effect to the previously completed judicial act. The omission to take the signatures of the minority of the arbitrators to the document which formed the record of the award was not fatal to the award. DANDEKAR v DANDEKARS I L R. 8 Bom. 863

and 50 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1859) are those which are specified in ss. 50 and 51 and these relate to cases in which the referee and the award are accepted facts but where the objection denies the factum of the particular award sought to be filed and the objection does not seem to be frivolous but one giving rise to enquiry into difficult questions of law and fact it is not competent for the Court to deal with that objection under ss. 520 and 521. In such a case the Court should have the applicant to a regular suit on the award as the basis of his cause of action whereas the party urging the objection will have the advantage of being a defendant rather than a plaintiff and of having an appeal open to him in the event of an unfavourable decision.

Objections to filing award—Civil Procedure Code 1977 ss. 520 and 521—Rejection of application to file award—Consent of parties to jurisdiction.—A dispute between the plaintiffs and defendant having been referred to arbitration and an award made the plaintiffs applied under s. 520 of the Civil Procedure Code that the award should be filed in the Munsif's Court. It having been objected that the arbitrators had been guilty of impartiality and other misconduct an issue was framed with the consent of both parties whether the award could be filed and enforced and the Munsif after hearing evidence dismissed the application. On appeal the Subordinate Judge decided that the award was valid. On second appeal—Held that although where an application to file an award under s. 520 and objection is made up on any of the grounds mentioned in s. 520 or 521 the proper course for the Court is to dismiss the application and leave the applicant to bring a regular suit to enforce the award yet both parties having consented to the matter being tried upon the application as if in a regular suit it could not on second appeal be objected that the lower Courts had acted without jurisdiction.

Civil Procedure Code ss. 520-525—Partnership—Agreement to refer disputes to arbitration.—The three parties to a deed of partnership agreed that in case of any dispute or difference, the matter should be referred to the arbitration of persons chosen by each party to such dispute and that in case any such party should refuse or fail to nominate an arbitrator then the arbitrator named by the other party should nominate another arbitrator and the two should nominate a third person as umpire. Certain differences having arisen among the three partners two of them called upon the executors of the third to nominate an arbitrator under the terms of the deed but they refused to do so. The first mentioned partners then nominated an arbitrator who in his turn nominated another and these having appointed an umpire made an award. One of the partners at whose instance the matter in dispute had been referred to arbitration presented an application under s. 25 of the Civil Procedure Code praying that the award might be filed in Court. This application was opposed by the executors of the third partner who appeared and lodged verified petitions disclosing grounds of objection within the meaning of s. 520 or s. 521 of the Code. Held that the word parties as used in s. 520 should not be confined to persons who are actually before the arbitrators, that if persons by an agreement have undertaken between themselves that in the event of a certain state of things happening a particular procedure shall be followed which under one state of circumstances may be adopted in arbitrum they should for the purposes of s. 525 be regarded as parties to that arbitration and that there was sufficient reason to show that the defendants in the present case were prima facie bound by the arbitration so as to bring them within the terms of s. 520 as parties thereto who should be called on to show cause why the award should not be filed.

WILLCOX v. STORLEY L R 1 C P 671 and Re Newton and Hetherington 19 C B N S 342 referred to. Held also that as s. 520 and 521 of the Code read together mean that the party coming forward to oppose the filing of the award must show cause that is must establish by argument or proof or both reasonable grounds to warrant the Court in arriving at the conclusion that the award is open to any of the objections mentioned in s. 520 or s. 521 and it is not sufficient when it is sought to make the award a rule of Court for the defeated party to come and merely say upon a verified petition that this or that ground referred to in ss. 520 and 521 existed against the filing.

Private award—Enforcement of—Procedure—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 327. When a private award between parties is filed in a Court the prescribed course is for the Court to give judgment upon it and pass a decree; not to order execution before such decree has been passed. SARHEN PAK JHA & KASHEENATH JHA

218 ——— *Award not declining chief subject of dispute—Order setting aside
filing of award*—Amongst other matters the arbitrators were asked to make a division of certain fields to which the parties were equally entitled. The arbitrators decided the other matters but as regards the fields said that it was inconvenient to do so in consequence of the rains and ordered the parties to receive the profits half and half and to pay the assessment half and half. Held that the award left undetermined one of the principal subjects of dispute and as the Court had no power to remit the award to the arbitrators the applicant was entitled to a judgment setting aside the order for filing the award. DANDEKAR v. DANDEKARS

219 ——— Civil Procedure Code s 520—Suit on a private award—Alternative claim on original consideration—Withdrawal of claim on award—The plaintiff lent money to two of the defendants who were partners with the third defendant for the purposes of the partnership and obtained promissory notes from them.
Disputes which arose between them were referred to arbitrators who made an award. An application by the plaintiff to have the award made a rule of Court was opposed by defendant No 1 and the plaintiff was referred to a regular suit. He now brought his suit in the alternative on the award and on the promissory notes. The award was found to be unenforceable. The plaintiff then declared himself satisfied to withdraw his suit as far as the award was concerned and the Court passed a decree for plaintiff on the merits. Defendant No 3 alone having appealed the Court of first appeal held that the plaintiff must succeed or fail on the award and that the withdrawal of the prayer for a decree on the award altered the nature of the suit and finding that there was no evidence of misconduct on the part of the arbitrators he passed a decree in the terms of the award. On a second appeal preferred by defendant No 1—Held that this procedure was right. NAHASATYA v. RAMA raised objections and the following issues were framed—(1) Whether a certain arbitrator was nominated or accepted as one of the arbitrators by the plaintiff? (2) Whether there was any and what illegality apparent on the face of the award? (3)

Whether the proceedings conducted by the arbitrators were illegal?—It is that the objections taken by the defendant which were the subject of the

On being asked to produce his licence he was unable to do so it not then being with him. No opportunity was afforded him of producing the licence but he was charged with an offence under s. 19 of Act XI of 1878 and on these materials convicted and fined. Held that the conviction was wrong. The law does not require a licensee always to have his licence with him. If under such circumstances on being required to produce it he is prepared to do so on a reasonable opportunity being given him to get it and it exists he should not be prosecuted. If prosecuted the production of the licence at the trial is a sufficient answer to the charge of infringing the Arms Act. Held further that a licence granted to a person to carry arms and including a retainer authorizes any retainer to carry the arms specified with the permission of his master and does not restrict him merely to carry them while in the actual presence of his master. QUEEN EMPRESS v. 9 — ss 19, 20 29—Possession of or control over—Breach of Legality of—Sanction to prosecute—Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1878) ss 53 103 and 165—The licence of the accused for the possession of firearms and ammunition was cancelled in August 1897. He was suspected of being in possession of arms after the cancellation of his licence. On the 23rd of April 1899 the Assistant Magistrate of Purneah with a number of police went to the house of the accused to search for arms. They surrounded it, arrested the accused, and then searched his house. The police had no search warrants, nor was there anything to show upon what charge the accused was arrested. Two gun stocks some ammunition, and implements for reloading were discovered in the house. There was nothing to show that the sanction required by s 29 of the Arms Act was given before proceedings were instituted against the accused. Accused was convicted and sentenced under ss 19 and 20 of the Arms Act. Held that the conviction under s 20 was not sustainable but that the accused must be taken to have had arms and ammunition as defined by the Arms Act within the meaning of sub s (f) of s 19 of that Act, and the conviction under that section must be confirmed. Held further that with respect to the question of whether or not any previous sanction had been given under s 29 of the Arms Act the Court was not unmindful of the suggestion that the charge in this case was in the first instance in respect of an alleged offence under s 20 and not of one under s 19 but that ss 19 and 20 were so interwoven that it was difficult to see how an offence could be committed under the first paragraph of s 20 unless an offence under one of the enumerated sub-sections in s 19 had also been committed. It was not suggested that the charge here was an offence under the second paragraph of s 20. ARMED HOSSAIN v. QUEEN EMPRESS 3 I L R. 27 Calo 692

10 — s 19 cl (f) and Notification 459 of the 18th March 1893—Exemptions from the operation of the Arms Act—Volunteers—A volunteer being a person exempted in virtue of Notification 459 dated 18th March 1893 of the Government of India, is not exempted merely with reference to his duties as a volunteer but generally (subject to the exceptions mentioned in the said notification). It is therefore not unlawful for a volunteer to possess fire arms and to use the same. QUEEN EMPRESS v. LUKA

11 — s 19 cl (f) and ss 25 30—Arms in a temple—Confiscation of arms used for purposes of worship—Police Inspector specially empowered—Licence to possess arm—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1872) s 579 and sch II—Offences against other laws—A collection of fire-arms consisting of four small cannons, four just is and thirty-one muskets had been kept as objects of worship in a Sikh temple in Patna for upwards of two centuries. The Mohunt of the temple neglected to take out a licence in respect of these arms under Act XI of 1878. A Police Inspector who was appointed to see that the provisions of the latter Act were obeyed searched the temple on information received and having found the arms prosecuted the persons who had charge of the temple. The latter was convicted by the Deputy Magistrate of Patna under s. 19 cl. (f) of Act XI of 1878 and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs 50 or to be rigorously imprisoned for two months. The Deputy Magistrate also ordered the arms to be confiscated, and directed that their value and the fine should be divided between the informer and the Police Inspector. On a reference from the Sessions Judge of Patna, Held with reference to Act X of 1872 s. 579 and the last heading to sch. IV of the same Act and to s. 19 cl. (f) of Act XI of 1878 that the proceedings of the Police Inspector and the conviction of the accused were not illegal. There is nothing in the Arms Act to exempt the custodians of a temple from complying with the requirements of the Arms Act either by taking out a licence or obtaining exemption under s. 27. S. 25 of the Arms Act appears to refer to cases in which the Magistrate considers that arms whether under a licence or not are possessed for an illegal purpose or under circumstances such as to endanger the public peace. S. 30 of the Arms Act appears to contemplate the presence of some specially empowered officer besides the officer conducting the search. EMPERESS v. TEJRA SINGH

s. 22—Master and servant—Master's liability for the criminal acts of his servant.—Where the manager of a licensee vendor of arms ammunition and military stores sold certain military stores without previously ascertaining that the buyer was legally authorized to possess the same. Held that the licensee was liable to punishment under s. 22 of the Indian Arms Act (XI of 1878) though the goods were not sold with his knowledge and consent. The principle—Whatever a servant does, in the course of his employment with which he is entrusted and as a part of it is his master's act—is applicable to the present case. *Attorney General v. 1 CIVIL ARREST

1 ——— Arrest pending enquiry into insolvency—Application of judgment-debtor to be declared insolvent—Subsequent proceedings in execution against him—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852) s 245B 336 337A 344 and 349—G obtained a new decree against M and in execution applied for his arrest and imprisonment. Before the warrant of arrest was issued but after M had appeared in Court in obedience to a notice under s 245B of the Civil Procedure Code another judgment creditor applied for execution of another decree against him. Thereupon M applied under s 344 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852) to be declared an insolvent and in his application mentioned G as one of his creditors (s 345). The Subordinate Judge referred to the High Court the question whether pending the inquiry into M's insolvency he could be arrested in execution of G's decree against him. Held that there was no provision in the Code to prevent the Court from issuing a warrant of arrest against him. Where however such a judgment debtor is brought before the Court under a warrant of arrest or comes before it upon notice under s 245B the Court has a discretionary power not to put the warrant in force under s 319 or not to issue it under s 336 (where the requisite notification has been published by the Local Government) if the applicant furnishes security for his appearance when called upon. In such cases the Court can also act under s 337A of the Civil Procedure Code. GANPAT BHAGYAT v MAHADEV HARI

The lunacy of a judgment debtor is good cause within the meaning of s 33 A of the Code for disallowing an application for his arrest. BHAGADHAI v CHOTABHAI

3 ——— Arrest of debtor in execution of money decree—Civil Procedure Code 1852 s 245B 337A 339—Subsistence allowance—A decree by consent was made on 6th May 1890 ordering the defendant within one year to pay to the plaintiff Rs 412 with interest and costs. On 14th May 1893 a notice was issued to the judgment debtor to show cause why this decree should not be executed by his arrest and imprisonment. He pleaded poverty and other sufficient cause and the matter was set down for inquiry under s 337A. When it came on the Court after hearing the evidence of the judgment debtor held that no cause had been shown why he should not be arrested and that it was bound to order his arrest at once under that section and subsistence allowance was ordered under s 339. GUSBOY v RAMDOYAL CHOWBAY

4. ——— Suit for damages for arrest in execution of decree—Malice—Reasonable and probable cause—Want of—A suit to recover damages on account of injuries caused by an arrest in accordance with a decree of a competent Court can only be maintained under special circumstances—viz the plaintiff must show (i) that the original action out of which the alleged injury arose was decided in his favour (ii) that the arrest was procured without reasonable and probable cause (iii) that the injury sustained was something other than an injury which has been or might have been compensated for by an award of the costs of the suit—e.g. that he has suffered some collateral wrong. Where a plaintiff must show absence of reasonable and probable cause malice is not alone sufficient to entitle him to a verdict. PAN CHUNDER POY v SHAMA SOONDARI DEBI cause and while returning home applies to a defendant to a suit under the summary procedure sections of the Civil Procedure Code who has not obtained leave to appear and defend and who therefore cannot be heard at the trial. Questions as to the privilege of exemption from arrest in the case of persons arrested under writs issued from the Small Cause Courts in Calcutta must be governed by the English law and not by s. 642 of the Civil Procedure Code. It is not a deviation sufficient to forfeit the privilege if the shortest road home is deviated from and a less crowded and more convenient road adopted. IN THE MATTER OF SURENDRO NATH ROY CHOWDHURY

9 — Civil Procedure Code 157 s. 642—Arrest in execution of process of Revenue Court—S. 642 of the Civil Procedure Code only protects an accused person while he is attending a Criminal Court from arrest under that Code. Held therefore where a person who had been convicted by a Magistrate and had been fined was arrested in execution of the process of a Revenue Court while waiting in Court until the money to pay such fine was brought that such person was not protected from such arrest by the provisions of that section and that having escaped from custody under such arrest such person had properly been convicted under s. 601 for escaping from lawful custody. EMPEROR OF INDIA v. ss 2 prov (b) 12 and ss 30 151 and 154—Settlement holder his rights under a settlement—Nus Kherajdar his rights to a settlement—The effect of ss 30 and 151 of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation 1886 is that a settlement made by a Settlement Officer unless interfered with by the Chief Commissioner is final but the settlement holder does not thereby acquire any right to the land so settled as against any person claiming rights to it. The effect of an order by the Government of India before the passing of the Assam Regulation in regard to the right of a nus kherajdar to hold lands found upon survey to be in excess of his nus kheraj estate and to obtain a settlement thereof considered. In 1881 S a nus kherajdar obtained a settlement for a year of certain lands which were found upon survey to be in excess of his nus kheraj estate. Subsequently a pottah was granted to S for a portion of the excess lands while the other portion was settled by the revenue authorities under a kobala pottah with V who entered into possession under his settlement. In a suit by S the nus kherajdar for a declaration of his right to a settlement of the portion settled with V and for possession—Held that having regard to the provisions of s 2 prov (b) s 12 of the Regulation and the order of the Government of India the nus kherajdar was entitled to a declaration of his right to a settlement but in view of s 154 he was not entitled to a decree for possession. MAHOMED NATH SHARMA v. Those sections cannot be said to have different meanings for if it were to be held that the incumbrance which could be set aside under s 71 of the Regulation I of 1886 must be an incumbrance actively created by the previous holder it would amount to this that any acquiescence or laches either wilful or arising from pure negligence on the part of the holder by which the taluk or estate becomes incapable in the hands of the purchaser of yielding the Government revenue would be outside the scope of this section. MAHOMED NASIM v. The Judge therefore proceeded to record medical and other evidence on the point and having come to the conclusion that there was no reason to doubt from the prisoner's conduct either prior or subsequent to the murder that in committing the murder he knew that he was doing a wrongful act convicted the prisoner. Held that the plea was in effect one of not guilty and that the trial should not have proceeded without assessors and that it should be quashed. QUEEN v. CHIT RAY

Procedure Code (Act X of 1882) ss 269 272 284
 285—The accused was committed for trial to the Sessions Court on a charge of murder. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and claimed to be tried. Thereupon the Sessions Judge chose two assessors but as one of them was ill his attendance was at once dispensed with and the Sessions Judge proceeded with the trial with the aid of the other assessor only. Held that this procedure was illegal and contrary to ss 284 and 285 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882). The attendance of one of the assessors having been dispensed with before the commencement of the trial the Sessions Judge ought to have chosen another assessor in his place. A trial in the Sessions Court with the aid of assessors does not begin with the reading of the charge as the assessors are chosen under s 272 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) only if the accused does not plead to the charge or claims to be tried. QUEEN EMPRESS v. BASTIANO.

18 ——— Assessors prevented by death or illness from attending a trial—Criminal Procedure Code ss 269 290—During the course of a trial before a Sessions Court with three assessors one assessor died at an early stage of the proceedings. Later on another assessor became too ill to take any further part in the trial and the third assessor was obliged to retire at the beginning of the accused's plea to a charge to the Court and did not return until it was finished. Held that the law contemplated the continuous attendance of at least one assessor throughout the trial. This condition not having been fulfilled the proceedings before the Sessions Court must be set aside as having (with regard to the provisions of s 269 of the Code of Criminal Procedure) been held before a Court not having jurisdiction. QUEEN EMPRESS v. MUHAMMAD MAHMUD KHAN.
 [I L R 13 All 337]

17 ——— Effect of incapacity of assessors to understand the proceedings—Criminal Procedure Code (1882) s 280—Three assessors were chosen to assist the Court at a trial. Before the case commenced it was discovered that one of the assessors was deaf and his presence was accordingly dispensed with. The trial proceeded with two assessors present but after the Public Prosecutor had closed his case it was discovered that one of the remaining assessors was so deaf as to be incapable of understanding the proceedings. Under these circumstances, it was held that the trial having been held with practically only one assessor the proceedings ought to be set aside and a new trial ordered. QUEEN EMPRESS v. BABU LAL.

5. ——— Political pension—Civil Procedure Code 1852 s 206 sub s (g)—Payments due under the Oudh loans of 1839 and 1842—Exemption from liability to attachment for debt—Although it is probable that the enactments of s 206 Civil Procedure Code 1852 were not meant to cover pensions payable by a foreign State when remitted for payment to their pensioners in India they certainly include all pensions of a political nature payable directly by the Government of India. A pension guaranteed payable by the latter by a treaty obligation contracted with another sovereign power is in the strictest sense a political pension. An allowance payable by the Government of India under an arrangement made between the King of Oudh and the Governor General in 1812 for the benefit of members of the King's family and household and their respective heirs in perpetuity and payable to one of such heirs who has inherited it as his share in the interest in the Oudh loan of 1849 is a political pension within the meaning of s 206 sub s (g) Civil Procedure Code 1852. The arrangement of 1842 cannot be treated as merely a provision out of the King's private estate for the maintenance of members of his family there having been in a State like that of Oudh no distinction between State property and private property vested in the sovereign. This recommendation was sanctioned and the amount of the bonus was received by the District Paymaster. Before payment to K the money was attached in execution of a decree obtained against him by J. Held that inasmuch as the bestowal of the money was a gift of moveable property of date subsequent to the 1st July 1880 and was not evidenced by a registered instrument it could only be effected by actual delivery that as there had been such delivery as completed the transfer (s. 13 of the Transfer of Property Act) and s. 90 of the Contract Act) the money was not at K's disposal and he could not have effected payment and that the money was therefore not liable to attachment in execution of a decree against him. The person served with the order applied under s 278 to have the attachment removed. Held that the application could not be entertained under s 278 that section having no application to the case but that before issuing a proclamation of sale in execution of a decree of the debt so attached it is the duty of the Court under s 287 of the Code to ascertain all that the Court considers material for the intending purchaser to know in order to judge of the nature and value of the property claimed for sale. If the property of which sale is sought is a debt and the Court receives notice from the alleged debtor that no debt exists the Court should satisfy itself as to the existence or otherwise of the debt and if it comes to the conclusion that no debt exists it should abstain from proceeding to sale. HARILAL ANTHADHAI v ABHESANO MEHU

The will did not give expressly the widow power to dispose of it. The plaintiff in execution of a decree against F sought to attach F's interest in the house. The lower Court held that as the interest taken by the defendant in the house under her husband's will was only a widow's estate F as her husband's son had an interest in the house which might be attached by the plaintiff. Held (reversing the decree) that V had no interest in the house. He had only a spec successionis—an expectancy of succession by survivorship and such a hope or expectancy is not attachable under s 266 (k) of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). The entire estate was vested by the testator in the defendant. No doubt her estate was a widow's estate. Her estate in it closely resembled that of a married woman in England to whom property is given with a restraint against alienation. That being so she was unable to dispose of it but still she was its full owner. The whole property passed to her from the testator. Nothing was left in him. By his first wife he had a son U. J a second wife was G by whom he had a son whose widow was K the defendant in the suit J died leaving U his son G his widow and K his son's widow and on his death U inherited the village. Prior to the year 1874 U had made a gift to G of 100 bighas situate in the village. In 1874 the rights and interests of U in the village were sold by auction and purchased by T the ancestor of the plaintiffs G by a deed of gift conveyed the 100 bighas to K and ultimately died on 26th January 1883. Plaintiffs then sued to set aside the gift and for possession of the land. The learned Judge found that the land was given to G in lieu of her maintenance which she was to hold rent free for her life and that she had been in possession thereof for twenty years. Further that U had the right to resume the land and assign it to rent on the death of G and that all the rights and interests of U in the land were attached and sold in 1874. On second appeal it was contended that the interest of U in the land at the time of the sale of the village by auction was in the nature of a mere expectancy and therefore could not be sold and was not sold. Held that U gave to G the usufruct of the land for her life in lieu of her maintenance that after the gift the interest of U in the land was of the same character and carried with it the same consequences as the reversion which the lessor would have for land leased for life or years and analogous to the right which a mortgagor who had granted a usufructuary mortgage would have that U had a vested right in the land which was capable of being sold and that right passed to the auction purchaser at the sale of 1874. He attained majority in October 1893 At the date of suit D was eighteen years old and P was twenty five. It was contended that the widow was only a trustee of the rents for the benefit of her sons P and D On the 13th June 1895 the plaintiffs obtained a decree for Rs 976 10-10 against the widow and her son P In execution of that decree they attached under an order dated 2nd July 1895 the immovable properties which had belonged to the testator's estate on the ground that both the widow and P had an interest in them The attachment was issued under a 2/4 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1852) The defendants contended that the widow had no attachable interest at all in the said properties she being under the will merely a trustee as above mentioned for her sons and that if she had it was an interest in moveable property which should have been attached under s. 268 of the Code and that the attachment under s. 274 was ineffectual and inoperative They further alleged that by an assignment dated the 20th February 1896 she had assigned and surrendered her life interest to her son D and that such interest was therefore not available to satisfy the plaintiff's decree against her As to P's interest the defendants alleged that by a deed of settlement dated the 9th February 1895 it was validly settled for the benefit of himself and his family and that therefore he had no interest in him which could be attached under the order of the 2nd July 1895. Held (1) that the widow had an attachable interest in the property () That her interest was an interest in immovable property and was validly attached under s. 274 of the Civil Procedure Code (3) That her assignment of the 20th February 1896 was invalid as against the plaintiffs under s. 276 of the Civil Procedure Code NATHA KESAR v. 117 ——— Money paid to sirdar as wages of coolies—Act VIII of 1859 s. 236 237—The defendants were sirdars of coolies. A decree was obtained against them by the plaintiff in respect of goods supplied for the coolies. It was proved that by virtue of custom a sirdar of coolies was entitled to have the wages of coolies paid to him so that he might deduct the amounts due to him by the respective coolies for food supplied by him to them; but it was not found that the coolies were hired on the basis of such custom. In execution of the decree an order was made upon the officer of the Public Works Department in whose employ the coolies were engaged, all moneys which are or may become payable to the debtors whether on their own personal account or on account of the coolies over whom they were sirdars. Held the attachment could not be maintained. 132. — Attachment of money deposited in Court—Civil Procedure Code (1882) ss. 453 and 454—The term "property" as used in ss. 453 and 454 of the Code of Civil Procedure is wide enough to include property of every description moveable and immovable whether in the actual possession of the defendant or of some other person on his behalf, and the words "the Court" may require him to produce and place at the disposal of the Court only refer to such property as is capable of being produced in Court. Where property ordered to be attached is deposited in the Court which made the order for attachment that order is sufficient notice to itself that the property ordered to be attached is to be held subject to the further orders of the Court, and it is not necessary that a separate formal notice should be drawn up. *CHANDI LAL v. 133. — Attachment before judgment of Company's property—Winding up Company—Sa I against Manager of Company—Compensation to a party to the suit—Remedy of liquidator—Appeal—Civil Procedure Code (1882) ss. 233, 453, 457, 585 and 623—The Dhulia Manufacturing Company Limited, carried on business at Dhulia and had its registered office at Bombay. One M was the manager at Dhulia and he had authority to borrow money and draw drafts on behalf of the company. In August 1894 the directors opened negotiations for the sale of the company's factory to one H and in September 1894 while the negotiations were pending a special resolution was passed to wind up the company voluntarily. The resolution was confirmed in October 1894 and A was appointed liquidator under s. 177 of the Indian Companies Act (VI of 1882). In December 1894 the liquidator agreed to sell the factory to H for the sum of Rs 68,000. Under the agreement H was to enter into possession of the factory but the company was to have a lien upon it until the completion of the purchase which was to take place in May 1895. A month before the date fixed for the completion of the sale the plaintiff filed a suit in the Court of the first class Subordinate Judge of Dhulia against M the manager of the company in his individual capacity and as manager of the company. His claim was professedly against the company but he did not make the company which was then in liquidation a party to the suit. Subsequently the plaintiff applied for and obtained an order for attachment before judgment of the company's factory at Dhulia. No notice of the application or of the order made on it was given to the liquidator. He at once applied to the Court to raise the attachment contending that the Court had no power to attach the property of the company which was not a party to the suit. The Court made the company a party and dismissed the liquidator's application confirming its previous order for attachment. The liquidator appealed to the High Court. Held that the order of attachment should be reversed. The intended sale by the liquidator which was the sole reason for making the order was not with intent to obstruct any decree that the plaintiff might obtain against the company but was being effected by the liquidator in the course of his duty and in pursuance of a contract entered into long before the suit was instituted. The plaintiff's claim if established would be satisfied pari passu with the other debts of the company. The plaintiff was not entitled to security for his claim in preference to the other creditors. It was contended that no appeal lay against the order of the Subordinate Judge and that the liquidator's sole remedy was by suit under ss. 233 and 457 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). Held that the company having been made a party to the suit the order of attachment was made under s. 453 of the Civil Procedure Code and consequently under s. 559 an appeal lay from that order. If the company had not been made a party the High Court would have set aside the order of attachment under s. 623 of the Code as in that case the Subordinate Judge would have had no jurisdiction to make it. *MIR ALI MAHOMED PATEL v. 134. — Attachment Effect of—Necessity of subsequent attachment—Civil Procedure Code 1882 s. 89—R filed a plaint against J on the 15th and obtained a decree on the 27th of February and a prohibitory order was made against J's property on the 18th of March subject to three prior attachments one by J's whose plaint was filed on the 30th of January and who obtained a prohibitory order on the 13th and a decree on the 16th of February, a second by N's who filed his plaint and obtained a prohibitory order on the 30th of January and obtained a decree on February 2nd; and a third by K's who also filed his plaint and got a prohibitory order on January 30th and a decree on February 28th for an order for the sale of the goods on notice to the other three plaintiffs, and the Court ruled that N's and A's were entitled to priority over R's. Held that the process in attachment before judgment is in all respects the same as in cases of attachment after judgment and the effect in binding the property attached so as to prevent alienation is the same. That an attachment whether before or after judgment places the property in the custody of the law. That if property have been attached before judgment there is no need of a second attachment in the same suit after judgment. That the words "attachment before judgment" in s. 89 of Act VIII of 1882 must be read as equivalent to attachments in pending suits or in other words the phrase "before judgment" must be read as meaning "until after judgment." *RAJCHANDRA ROY v. The master being about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court with his vessel the plaintiffs under s 477 of the Code of Civil Procedure applied for an order that the defendant should give security for his appearance to answer any decree that might be passed against him and a rule was issued calling on him to show cause why such security should not be furnished. The defendant shewed cause and alleged that the amount claimed for the repairs was excessive that the repairs were badly done that the plaintiffs were not entitled to dock hire and that some of the repairs charged for had not been executed. He further counter-claimed for a large sum for demurrage owing to the detention of his vessel and damages caused to it by the wrongful act of the plaintiffs. It was contended that as the claim was on a contested account which on the face of it was stated but unsettled on the principle of the English authorities the plaintiffs were not entitled to the order asked for. It was further contended that the suit was not a bond fide one but brought merely to harass the defendant and that for this reason security should not be ordered to be given. It was not disputed that the defendant had no domicile in this country and that he was shortly leaving, in his vessel in the ordinary course of his business. The Court found the plaintiffs were undoubtedly entitled to recover some amount on account of repairs and that the mere fact that the plaintiffs added on to such a claim one of a disputable character did not go to show that the suit was not a bond fide one. Held that there is no authority for saying that the principles applied in England to the granting of writs ne exeat regno should be applied in this country that the Court can only look to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure that when a person comes on business to this country in which he has no property or domicile and enters into a contract with a person to do work in connection with that business and which must be done before he leaves the country and it is known he intends to leave as soon as the work is completed there is an implied understanding if the work was done on his credit that it should be paid for before he leaves. Held also that the case fell within the provisions of s 477 of the Code and that the defendant should furnish security for his appearance while the suit was pending, within a week in terms of s 479 such security to be for the amount of the claim. *PROBONZ GRUNDER MITTLICH v. Procedure 1859 property of the defendant which is not within the jurisdiction of the Court cannot be attached before judgment. KRISHNASAMI v. FNOZIL [L. L. R., 6 Mad. 20]

142. ——— Security for satisfaction of decree—Civil Procedure Code 1877 s. 494—Security—The defendants were on the 10th of March 1881 called upon under s. 494 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1877) to furnish security for the satisfaction of a decree that the plaintiff might obtain against them or to shew cause on the 25th March 1881 why security should not be furnished. To this direction the order was appended which is provided by the form at the end of the Code of Civil Procedure for a provisional attachment under s. 491. The defendants to avoid the attachment gave security on the 12th March 1881 for satisfaction of the decree and the attachment was not carried out. On the 23rd March 1881 they showed cause why security should not be furnished but the Subordinate Judge as security had been furnished thought the matter was at an end and that he could not cancel the security bond. Held that the Subordinate Judge was wrong the security so given was really not the security expressly provided under s. 494 and did not preclude the defendants from showing cause why no security should be furnished. LOTLIKAR v. LOTLIKAR [L. L. R., 5 Bom., 648]

143 ——— Grounds for granting application—Defendant leaving jurisdiction to avoid or delay process—Civil Procedure Code 1859 ss 74 75—Applications under ss 74 and 75 Act VIII of 1859 on the ground first mentioned in 74 must show at least that defendant is about to leave the jurisdiction with a view to avoid process or to delay the plaintiff in the prosecution of his suit. Evidence sufficient to support this must be adduced in all cases. TEENARAM v. RAMRUTTON 2 Hyde 161

144 ——— Defendant leaving jurisdiction or dealing with property so as to make it unavailable—Ground for arrest of debtor—A creditor is not entitled merely because he has a just demand against his debtor to move the Courts to put in force the extraordinary processes of arrest or attachment on mere process he must also have good reason to believe that his debtor is about to depart from the jurisdiction of the Court or to deal with his property in such a manner that it will be unavailable for satisfaction of the claim against him. *GOUIERE v. 149. ————— *Security for personal appearance of defendant—Civil Procedure Code (Act XII of 1859) s 477 479—Bond fide suit—*A suit was instituted against the master of a vessel for repairs done to his vessel and for hire of a dock in which the vessel had been. The master being about to leave the jurisdiction of the Court with his vessel the plaintiffs under s 477 of the Code of Civil Procedure applied for an order that the defendant should give security for his appearance to answer any decree that might be passed against him and a rule was issued calling on him to show cause why such security should not be furnished. The defendant showed cause and alleged that the amount claimed for the repairs was excessive, that the repairs were badly done, that the plaintiffs were not entitled to dock hire and that some of the repairs charged for had not been executed. He further counter claimed for a large sum for demurrage owing to the detention of his vessel and damages caused to it by the wrongful act of the plaintiffs. It was contended that, as the claim was on a contested account which on the face of it was stated but unsettled on the principle of the English authorities the plaintiffs were not entitled to the order asked for. It was further contended that the suit was not a bond fide one but brought merely to harass the defendant and that for this reason security should not be ordered to be given. It was not disputed that the defendant had no domicile in this country and that he was shortly leaving in his vessel in the ordinary course of his business. The Court found the plaintiffs were undoubtedly entitled to recover some amount on account of repairs and that the mere fact that the plaintiffs added on to such a claim one of a disputable character did not go to show that the suit was not a bond fide one. Held that there is no authority for saying that the principles applied in England to the granting of writs ne exeat regno should be applied in this country; that the Court can only look to the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure; that when a person comes on business to this country in which he has no property or domicile and enters into a contract with a person to do work in connection with that business and which must be done before he leaves the country and it is known he intends to leave as soon as the work is completed there is an implied understanding if the work was done on his credit that it should be paid for before he leaves. Held also that the case fell within the provisions of s 477 of the Code and that the defendant should furnish security for his appearance while the suit was pending, within a week in terms of s 479 such security to be for the amount of the claim. *PROBODER CHUNDER MULLICK v. Meanwhile in December 1885 a decree for pre-emption in respect of a sale by the judgment-debtor in 1881 of their musaf interests in the village was decreed in favour of persons who were not parties to the litigation in which the attachment of 1884 was effected. The plaintiffs (who were in possession) sued for a declaration of their right to the musaf interests as against the auction purchaser under the sale of January 1886. Held that the attachment in 1884 was not a good attachment of the musaf interests of the judgment debtors, and the auction purchaser could not be held to have purchased those musaf interests and the title of the plaintiffs under their pre-emptive decree of December 1885 must prevail. HAROO LAL SINGH v. 205 ——— Attachment before judgment—Termination of attachment—Sale in execution—Material irregularity in publishing or conducting sale without attachment—Haver—Civil Procedure Code ss 311 453—The plaintiff instituted a suit against the defendant for recovery of money and previous to judgment that is on the 8th January 1885 applied for and on the 11th obtained orders for attachment of several houses and premises belonging to defendant and such attachment was made. The suit was dismissed but eventually on appeal it was decreed but the attachment was never withdrawn. Plaintiff then applied for execution of his decree and his application was granted by an order directing that the property of the judgment-debtor should be notified for sale on the 1st February 1887 and accordingly on the 21st December 1886 a sale notification was issued. Judgment-debtor twice applied for postponement of sale but his applications were refused and the sale took place on the date fixed. The judgment-debtor then objected to the confirmation of the sale urging that the property sold was never attached in execution of the decree and the attachment previous to judgment was infructuous because afterwards the claim was dismissed by the Court of first instance that there had been several other irregularities in publishing and conducting the sale; and that owing to the irregularities property had been sold at a grossly inadequate price causing substantial injury. The Subordinate Judge overruling the objections confirmed the sale. On appeal by the judgment-debtor—Held following Mahadeo Dubey v. Bhola Nath Dicht I L R 5 All 86 that a regularly perfected attachment is an essential preliminary to sales in execution of decrees for money and where there has been no such attachment any sale that may have taken place is not simply voidable but de facto void and may be set aside without any inquiry as to substantial injury being sustained by the judgment-debtor for want of a valid attachment; and that so attachment before judgment like a temporary injunction becomes functus officio as soon as the suit terminates. Further that the phrase a material irregularity in publishing or conducting to the first paragraph of s 311 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be liberally construed and that absence of attachment of property at the time of sale thereof is a material irregularity attachment being the first step which a Court in executing a simple money decree has to take to assert its authority to bring property to compulsory sale. RAM CHAND v. The judgment debtor was entitled to a life interest in certain trust funds under a settlement of which the Official Trustee was the trustee. 5 PRIORITY OF ATTACHMENT

211 ——— Question of priority of attachment—Attachment under decree of High Court of property already attached under decree of Small Cause Court—Claim to attached property by what Court to be decided—Civil Procedure Code (1882) s 272—In execution of a decree obtained in the High Court the plaintiffs on the 22nd of March 1895 attached certain property of the defendant which however had been already attached on the 22nd of February 1895 by one B who had obtained a decree against defendant in the Court of Small Causes. The plaintiffs attachment was therefore effected under s 272 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) by a notice addressed by the Prothonotary of the High Court to the Registrar of the Small Cause Court. The claimant was mortgagee in possession and the defendants were his tenants. On the 26th February he had lodged a claim in the Small Cause Court to the said property as mortgagee in possession and on the 2 th March 1895 a consent order was passed by the Chief Judge of that Court directing that B's attachment should stand subject to the claimant's claim. On the 22nd April 1895 the claimant applied to the Chief Judge of the Small Cause Court to issue a notice to the plaintiffs in this suit under s 272 of the Civil Procedure Code to determine the question of priority of claim to the attached property between him and the plaintiffs. His application was refused the Chief Judge being of opinion that he could not interfere in a High Court suit. The claimant then filed his claim in the High Court and took out this summons to remove the plaintiffs' attachment. Held that under s 272 of the Civil Procedure Code the Small Cause Court was the only Court to decide the question of priority between the claimant and the plaintiffs. JET NARAYAN MEZHAR v ISMAIL KURIMA

Twelve years after the attachment no further steps having been taken in the matter the execution case was struck off the file and the property was afterwards mortgaged by the judgment-debtor to J. Subsequently a fresh attachment was issued at the instance of the holder of the former attaching creditor and in which the property was put up for sale subject to J's mortgage and J herself became the purchaser. In a suit by R to set aside the judgments granted during the continuance of the first attachment—Held that the prohibition against alienation of property under attachment avoids such alienation only as against the execution-creditor or persons entitled to claim under him. A conveyance executed by the judgment-debtor after an attachment has been removed and before a fresh attachment is issued is valid though the second attachment is under the same execution as the first. Quere—Whether an alienation of property under attachment void as against the execution-creditor becomes valid by relation when the attachment is removed. Settle—It may be presumed that an execution long neglected and finally struck off has ceased to be operative and in that case a judgment-creditor's title will only date from any subsequent attachment which he may obtain. PUDDOMONKE DASS v. Code (1882) s 273—Dismissal for an application for execution—Attachment of a decree—Execution of attached decree—The holder of a decree dated 1885 applied to execute it but his application was dismissed in March 1887 on the ground that no further steps had been taken. It did not appear that any notice was given to him before the order of dismissal was made. Nevertheless the decree holder proceeded to execute a decree of the judgment debtor attached by him and brought to sale certain property which was in question in the present suit and it was purchased bona fide by the present defendant who obtained a sale certificate from the Court. The present plaintiff claimed as assignee from the holder of the attached decree to execute it against the same land and now sued for a declaration that it was liable to be brought to sale by him and that the defendant's purchase was void as against him. Held (1) that under the circumstances of the case the attachment in execution of the decree of 1885 was subsisting at the time of the purchase by the defendant (2) that a judgment creditor who attaches a decree is competent to execute it RANGASAMI CHEITI v PERIASAMI MUDALI I. *Civil Procedure Code (1852) s. 276—Kam granted during a subsisting attachment and subsequent discharge of judgment-debt a decree later attachments—Claim for rateable distribution—Effect of discharge in rendering a first attachment inoperative as against all creditors—Kam was executed by the kam in favour of a tardwad in plaintiff's favour for a just consideration for the discharge of judgment-debts decreed against the tardwad. On or before the date of the said kam plaintiff's father had placed under attachment the properties covered by the kam decreed in favour of one of the said creditors, but the claim having been satisfied no Court sale followed. While the said attachment was still subsisting and at a date later than that of the kam the first defendant and other judgment-creditors applied for and obtained orders for the attachment of the same properties. On plaintiff's suing to establish the validity of his kam it was contended that in consequence of the said attachment first defendant would be entitled to rateable distribution under s. 276 of the Code of Civil Procedure and that this was a claim enforceable under the attachment within the meaning of s. 276. Held that the kam was valid. The attachment subject to which the kam had been granted ceased to be operative both as regards the attaching creditor and the other judgment-creditors when the judgment-debt was discharged and there could be no sale by the Court and no right on the part of the other creditors in the circumstances to apply for such a sale. KUNHI MOOSA v. Title acquired by private purchaser—Incumbrance created after attachment—Civil Procedure Code (Act VII of 1852) s. 240—The title obtained by the purchaser in a private sale of property in satisfaction of a decree differs from that acquired in a sale in execution. Under a private sale the purchaser derives title through the vendor and cannot acquire a title better than his. Under an execution sale the purchaser notwithstanding that he acquires merely the right title and interest of the judgment debtor acquires that title by operation of law adversely to the judgment debtor and freed from all alienations and incumbrances effected by him after the attachment of the property sold. In 1858 the respondent obtained a decree against B. In 1863 in satisfaction thereof he caused to be attached a decree for mesne profits made in favour of B against the appellants in 1869. In May 1865 the respondent obtained an order for the sale thereof but instead of proceeding to execute a sale he purchased in 1865 the whole of the mesne profits due under the decree of 1860 by private sale from B. Meanwhile in September 1865 an order of Court had been made between B and the appellants on their consent (but without the respondent being a party to it) whereby the decree for mesne profits was set off pro tanto against a prior decree for a larger amount which the appellants had obtained against B. Held that the sale of 1865 having been a private one and not in process of execution the respondent not only obtained such title as B had in the decree of 1860 but a title subject to the effect of the order of September 1865. DIXEN BROTHERS SINGH v. 246 ——— Alienation under attachment making material error in description of property—Civil Procedure Code 1877 s. 276—Attachment of immovable property—Private alienation after attachment—Application was made for the attachment in execution of a decree of a musafi holding, belonging to the judgment debtor. The numbers and areas given in such application as the numbers and areas of the lands comprised in such holding were the numbers and areas of certain revenue paying lands and were not the numbers and areas of any lands held as musafi by the judgment debtor. The order of attachment described the property as described in the application for attachment. The judgment debtor having alienated by sale a musafi holding belonging to him the decree holders sued to have such alienation set aside as void under the provisions of s. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held that having regard to the description given in the application for attachment and the order of attachment it could not be said that the musafi holding alienated by the judgment debtor was under attachment at the time of the alienation and its alienation was therefore not void under s. 276 of Act X of 1877. Held also that the material misdescription of the property in this case in the order of attachment protected the alienees who are bona fide purchasers from having the alienation set aside as void under s. 276 as the attachment could not under the circumstances be held to have been fully intimated and made known as required by that section. GUMANI v. Private alienation after such attachment—Civil Procedure Code ss 274 276 292 sch 11 No 141—A judgment debtor whose property had been attached in execution of a money decree sold the property and out of the price paid into Court the amount of the decree and prayed that the attachment might be removed. While the attachment was subsisting and prior to the sale the holders of other money decrees against the same judgment debtor preferred applications purporting to be made under s 290 of the Civil Procedure Code and praying that the proceeds of the sale of the property might be rateably divided between themselves and the attaching creditor. The Court refused to remove the attachment until these creditors had been paid. It was found that the sale by the judgment debtor was a bona fide transaction entered into for valuable consideration. Held that inasmuch as no order for attachment of the property was passed in favour of the decree holders in manner provided by s 274 of the Civil Procedure Code their claims were not entitled to the protection conferred by s 276 against private alienations of property under attachment that these claims were not enforceable under the attachment which was made that the sale by the judgment debtor was valid; and that execution of

in the market between attachment and sale are the natural and necessary consequences of the creditor's unlawful act. The plaintiff having taken without success the summary proceeding under s. 2/8 to get the release of goods attached under s. 487 in a suit to which he was not a party afterwards in a suit brought by him in accordance with s. 283 established his right of property in the goods. Held that (a) in order to entitle him to the full indemnity for the wrongful attachment he was not bound to allege and prove that the defendants had resisted his previous applications under s. 2/8 maliciously or without probable cause and that (b) the goods having been sold under the Court's order the difference in market value of the goods at the time of their attachment (November 1883) and their price when they were sold (June 1884) the selling prices having fallen intermediately must be added to the damages. Held also that without bringing under review the judgment under s. 2/8 the effect of the judgment in the suit brought in accordance with s. 283 was to supersede the order under s. 2/8 and to render it inconclusive. The procedure on attachment not being the same in India as in England where a judgment creditor is not responsible for the consequence of a sale under a judicial order of goods taken in execution in satisfaction of his debt that proposition does not hold good under the Indian procedure. *Walker v. Effect of striking off execution proceedings how it affects attachment—The striking an execution proceeding off the file is an act which may admit of different interpretations according to the circumstances under which it is done and no general rule can be laid down which would govern all cases of that kind but having regard to the circumstances of the present case and that the Court below had no opportunity of considering the circumstances under which the several execution proceedings were dismissed it could not be held that there was no subsisting attachment and that the order of the Court was bad in law. BHAGWAN RAMANUJ DAS v. In 1864 A in execution of his decree attached land belonging to C but the execution case was struck off the file in 1865. After several ineffectual proceedings A re-attached the property in March 1869. In execution of a decree against C B had in February 1869 attached the same property. The property was sold under A's attachment in May 1869 and on the application of A the Subordinate Judge on the strength of A's attachment in 1864 gave priority to A's claim over that of B. The balance of the sale proceeds after satisfaction of A's decree was only sufficient to cover a small portion of the decree obtained by B. In a suit by B against A under s 270 Act VIII of 1859 to recover the amount of her claim which remained unsatisfied—Held that the attachment of A in 1864 on the strength of which A's claim was considered by the Subordinate Judge to have priority over that of B was not a sufficient and valid attachment under s 270. The attachment contemplated by that section means an attachment after a final money decree. The decree-holder having failed to furnish adequate security the execution case was struck off. The appeal to the Privy Council having been dismissed the decree-holder revived execution proceedings adding costs and interest to her original claim. Upon this a third party intervened and objected to the attachment on the ground that he had obtained a mokurari pottah of the properties from B's representative. The objection having been allowed under Act VIII of 1859 s 246 A brought a suit to have the mokurari declared to be invalid and fictitious. Held that plaintiff was not required to cause A's admitted proprietary right to be sold before she could maintain her suit. Held that the act of the Court in striking off the execution proceeding because of the inability of the decree-holder to furnish the required security was only for the convenience of business and it left intact all the proceedings which had been taken up to that stage nor did the decree-holder abandon the attachment which was therefore subsisting when the mokurari pottah was granted. Accordingly the alienation of the property by the pottah was invalid and inoperative. SOONDUR SINGH v. BUDHORIA ALUM BASHIR

The possession of the instrument to commit mischief by fire and the going about of the person with it are sufficient to raise a presumption that he intended to commit the act and had already begun to move towards the execution. These facts are sufficient to constitute an attempt. Held by MITTAL J that the possession of a fire ball and moving about with it cannot support a conviction under ss 436 and 511 of the Penal Code. These facts are not sufficiently indicative of an intention to destroy a building used for human dwelling. To constitute an offence under s 511 of the Penal Code it is not only necessary that the prisoner should have done an overt act towards commission of the offence but that the act itself should have been done in the attempt to commit it. QUEEN v DAYAL BAWRI

[3 B L R A C., 55]

3. — Attempt when offence could not be committed—A person cannot be convicted of an attempt to commit an offence under s. 511 of the Penal Code unless the offence would have been committed if the attempt charged had succeeded. IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION OF RIASAT ALI FAYRUS v RIASAT ALI

4. — Attempt to murder—

Inconsistency between English Law and Penal Code—In order to constitute the offence of attempt to murder under s. 307 of the Penal Code the act committed by the prisoner must be an act capable of causing death in the natural and ordinary course of events. After under s. 511 taken in connection with ss 299 and 300. Therefore where the prisoner presented an uncapped gun at FG (believing the gun to be capped) with the intention of murdering him but was prevented from pulling the trigger—Held that he could not be convicted of an attempt to murder upon a charge framed under s. 307 of the Penal Code but that under the same circumstances he might be convicted upon a charge of simple attempt to murder framed under s. 511 in connection with ss 299 and 300. Apparent inconsistency between the English law with reference to attempts as laid down in Reg v Collins 33 L J M C 177 and the provisions of the Indian Penal Code explained. REG v CAISIDY [4 Bom Cr 17]

5. — Penal Code ss 307

of killing him. The deceased fell down senseless on the ground. The accused believing that he was dead set fire to the hut in which he was lying with a view to remove all evidence of the crime. The medical evidence showed that the blow was struck by the accused with a stick to cause death, and did not cause death, and that death was really caused by injuries from burning when the accused set fire to the hut. Held (PARONS J. dissenting) that the accused was guilty of attempt to murder under s. 30 of the Penal Code. QUEEN v. EMPRESS & KHANU. I. L. R. 15 Bom. 104.

6 ————— Facts necessary to constitute such attempt — All of the Penal Code does not apply to attempts to commit murder which are fully and exclusively provided for by s. 30 of the said Code. A person is criminally responsible for an attempt to commit murder when with the intention or knowledge requisite to its commission he has done the last proximate act necessary to constitute the completed offence and when the completion of the offence is only prevented by some cause independent of his volition. QUEEN v. EMPRESS & KHANU. I. L. R. 14 All. 38.

7 ————— Intention—Knowledge of probable consequences of act—Presumption — Where a woman of twenty years of age was found to have administered datura to three members of her family it was held that she must be presumed to have known that the administration of datura was likely to cause death although she might not have administered it with that intention. QUEEN v. EMPRESS & TELSHA. I. L. R. 20 All. 143.

8 ————— A young Brahmin widow was confined of a child. The chief constable of police acting as he stated on information that the accused was about to kill a baby went to search her house with a number of men and found her lying on the first floor and discovered on the second floor a young new born child wrapped up in a cloth with a cooking pot turned over it. The Sessions Judge convicted the accused of attempt to murder. The High Court on appeal reversed the conviction on the ground that the evidence was insufficient to support it. REG v. CHIMA. [8 Bom. Cr. 184]

9 ————— Attempt at dacoity — s. 511 of the Penal Code does not apply in a case of dacoity. Where a prisoner was found guilty of an attempt at dacoity under that section and of causing grievous hurt in such attempt under s. 397 and a sentence of three years rigorous imprisonment was passed on him the finding was amended by striking out s. 397 and 511 and substituting s. 39. QUEEN v. KOONKE. [7 W. R. Cr. 48]

10 ————— Attempt to fabricate false evidence—Concealment of salt — Facts showing that an accused person had dug a hole intending to place salt therein in order that the discovery of the salt so placed might be used in evidence against his enemy in a judicial proceeding would justify a conviction for an attempt to fabricate false evidence. QUEEN v. NUNDA. 4 N. W. 133.

11 ————— Attempt to commit forgery—Penal Code ss. 467–511—Intention to commit offence — To constitute the offence of attempt under s. 511 Penal Code there must be an act done with the intention of committing an offence and for the purpose of committing that offence and it must be done in attempting the commission of the offence. The provisions of s. 511 Penal Code do not extend to make punishable as attempts acts done in the mere stage of preparation. Although such acts are doubtless done towards the commission of the offence they are not done in the attempt to commit the offence within the meaning of the word attempt as used in the section. QUEEN v. HANSARU CHOWBEY. [4 N. W., 46]

12 ————— Penal Code ss. 467 and 511—Forgery—Facts necessary to constitute an attempt—Abetment — One C calling himself X the son of B went to a stamp vendor accompanied by a man named A S and purchased from him in the name of A a stamp paper of the value of 4 annas. The two men then went to a petition writer and C again giving his name as A they asked the petition writer to write for them a bond for Rs. 10 payable by X to A S. The petition writer commenced to write the bond but his suspicions being aroused did not finish it but took C and A S to the nearest thana. Held that under the above circumstances A S was rightly convicted of an attempt to commit the offence defined in s. 467 of the Penal Code and C of abetment of the said attempt. QUEEN v. Ram Sarun Chowbey & N. W. 46 referred to. QUEEN v. EMPRESS & HALYAN SINGH. [I. L. R. 16 All. 409]

13 ————— Attempt to cheat—Penal Code ss. 417–511 — In a prosecution for an attempt to cheat under s. 417–511 of the Penal Code the accused was charged and convicted of having at the central octroi office made false representations as to the contents of certain kuppas (skin vessels) the object of which was to obtain a certificate entitling him to obtain a refund of octroi duty. Prior to granting the certificate the octroi officers examined the contents of the kuppas and found that the representations of the accused regarding them were untrue. In consequence of this discovery no certificate was given to him and he was charged and convicted as above mentioned. The procedure necessary for obtaining a refund of octroi duty was that the central office on satisfying itself that the articles produced were of the nature stated would grant a certificate which certificate would have to be indorsed by the outpost clerk when he passed the goods (on which refund was claimed) out of the town and the owner would have to take back the certificate so indorsed to the central office and present it to be cashed. Held that even assuming the accused to have falsely represented the contents of the kuppas as alleged he had not completed an attempt to cheat but had only made preparation for cheating and that the conviction must therefore be set aside. QUEEN v. EMPRESS & DRUNDI. I. L. R. 8 All. 304.

Application for payment of lost halves of currency notes—A man may be guilty of an attempt to cheat although the person he attempts to cheat is forewarned and is therefore not cheated R v Mensler 11 Cox C C 570 referred to M wrote a letter to the Currency Office at Calcutta enclosing the halves of two Government currency notes stating that the other halves were lost and enquiring what steps should be taken for the recovery of the value of the notes. The Currency Office having upon enquiry discovered that the amount of the notes had been paid to the holder of the other halves and that the notes had been with drawn from circulation and cancelled sent M the usual form of claim to be filled up and returned to it. It appeared from the evidence that the Currency Office never contemplated paying M in respect of the notes. The form was filled up and signed by M and returned by him to the Currency Office. Held that although there was no intention on the part of the Currency Office to pay the amount of the notes M was guilty of an attempt to cheat. GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL v UMESH CHUNDER MITTER I L R. 16 Calc 310

duct—Where an attorney knowingly prepares a conveyance containing untrue recitals of the transaction between the parties thereto and attests the deed and a receipt for consideration money which to his knowledge was never paid or intended to be paid the production of such a document to the Court is sufficient ground for calling upon the attorney for an explanation of his conduct. But if such explanation be given supported by evidence to the effect that there was no fraudulent intent and if no fraudulent use of the deed has in fact been made or attempted, nor any injury caused thereby it is not sufficient ground for striking the attorney off the rolls of the Court. Semble—The High Court in Calcutta is not authorized in striking an attorney off the rolls when such a step would not be sanctioned by the practices of the Courts in England. IN THE MATTER OF STEWART

Lien on translation of documents—Messrs P and W were solicitors for the plaintiff in this suit from its commencement. When the case was about to appear in the list for hearing Messrs P and W wrote to the plaintiff requesting her to send them an advance of Rs 1000 to enable them to deliver briefs to counsel. They received no reply from the plaintiff who afterwards obtained leave to sue as a pauper and appeared by other solicitors. Messrs P and W were subsequently served with a subpoena to produce at the hearing certain translations and other documents relating to the plaintiff's case which had remained in their possession and upon which they claimed a lien in respect of costs due to them by the plaintiff. Held that Messrs P and W could not be compelled to produce. A solicitor who is discharged by his client holds the papers entrusted to him subject to his lien for costs and the plaintiff by her conduct had discharged Messrs P and W from being her solicitors. A solicitor has the same lien upon translations as he has upon other documents and the fact that they have been made by the Court's interpreters makes no difference. Having got the work done and paid for it he need not put with such translations or produce them except on terms which will secure him against fraud. BAI KESSEBBAI v. NARANJI WALJI

The plaintiff not having satisfied in full his attorney a taxed bill of costs the attorney applied for payment out of the fund in Court. Previously to this application the fund had been attached by a third party. Held that the attorney was entitled to enforce his lien as against the attaching creditor for all costs incurred up to the date of attachment that the attaching creditor was then entitled to be satisfied before the attorney could claim payment out of the balance in Court of any sum remaining due to him on account of his costs. *SUPRAMANYAN SETHI v. 2. ——— Discharge for want of evidence—Criminal Procedure Code (Act XXV of 1861) s. 212—Act X of 1872 s. 339—The accused in a case of dacoity and assault were discharged by the Magistrate for want of evidence. At the same time, he ordered them to give security to the amount of Rs 50 to appear before him any time within six months if called upon. The Judge referred the question of the legality of the order to the High Court by whom the order for security was quashed. RAJMAL TEWARI v. SUPPHARAY [I. B. L. R. S. N. 26 10 W. R. Cr. 34]

II & 12 Vic. c. 21) and sentenced to imprisonment. Under s. 73 of the Act he appealed against the decision and sentence of the Insolvent Court and applied to be admitted to bail pending the hearing of his appeal. Held refusing the application that the High Court had no power to admit him to bail. 5. ——— Further remand—Evidence of guilt—Necessity of taking evidence before refusing bail—When an accused person is first brought before a Magistrate and a remand is required by the prosecutor it is ordinarily sufficient to show by the evidence of a police officer that the police are in possession of information believed to be reliable that the accused has committed an offence; but when the accused is again brought up after remand and a further remand is needed, some direct evidence of the guilt of the accused should be required to justify the Magistrate in refusing bail and with each remand the necessity for production of evidence of guilt becomes stronger. PONTNAMI CHETTI v. QUEEN I. L. R. 6 Mad. 69

6. ——— Criminal Procedure Code 1872 s. 190 194—Remand of case for evidence—Judicial proceeding—Reasonable ground for remand not supported by sworn testimony—The proceeding in which it has to be determined whether an accused person should be admitted to bail by a Magistrate is a judicial proceeding and as such cognizable by the High Court under s. 227 of the

Code of Criminal Procedure 1872 s 194 of the Criminal Procedure Code 1872 must be read as a proviso to s 190 and authorizes a Magistrate for reasonable cause to remand an accused person to jail without examining any witness. Where evidence was available but it appeared necessary to the Magistrate to defer the examination of witnesses in order that further evidence might be produced (so that the enquiry when commenced might be continuous)—Held that such a reason recorded by the Magistrate although not sworn to justified a remand for five days and a further remand for four days. An accused person has a right to have the evidence against him recorded at as early a period as possible and the fact that there is or may be a great body of evidence forthcoming against him is not a ground for detention for an indefinite period. Per KERNAN J.—When a Magistrate defers the examination of witnesses adjourns the enquiry and remands the prisoner under s 194 of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1872 he is bound to express clearly on the record the reasonable cause from which such action became necessary or advisable. MANI KAM MUDALI & QUEEN I L R. 8 Mad 83

1. — Deposit of money—Obligation to keep funds separate—Breach of trust—Commission agents—The insolvents carried on business as bankers and commission agents receiving the money of their constituents on deposit for investment or for remittance charging a commission on each transaction and allowing 4 per cent interest on deposits. An opposing creditor one of their constituents, sent them in April 1879 a letter instructing them to invest Rs 40,000 in municipal debentures. The insolvents failed in November and it was found on the evidence that they could not have procured the desired quantity of municipal debentures without paying more than the market price for them. They purchased Rs 18,000 worth of such debentures and were debtors to the opposing creditor for the balance. Held that the money was in their hands as bankers and not as agents and this being so they were not bound to keep the Rs 40,000 separate from their own funds nor even after the letter received in April to set it apart for investment. The bank presented it for payment by one of its servants B who brought it back reporting that payment had been refused. The manager of the bank with the intention of returning it to A placed it in an envelope sealed and stamped, which was laid upon the table ready for the post it being the custom of the bank to post all letters in that manner. The hundi did not reach A and it afterwards appeared that B presented it for payment the following day and obtained cash for it. Held that the bank was guilty of such neglect as to render it liable to A for the amount of the hundi. PEOPLE'S BANK v. ODBARD

to pay dividends to shareholders at a time when the bank is insolvent and cannot legally pay dividends. In the case of a bank registered under the Indian Companies Act as a company limited by shares and governed by the regulations contained in table A in the first schedule to the Act it was held that the directors had dominion over the property and the management of the funds of the bank that they were bound not to pay dividends except out of the profits of the bank; and that if they dishonestly that is knowingly and intentionally paid dividends to the shareholders out of deposits when there were no profits, intending to cause gain to themselves or others to which they were not entitled or to cause wrongful loss to other persons they were guilty of criminal breach of trust as bankers under s. 409 of the Penal Code but that the manager and the accountant or assistant manager were not within the meaning of the section, persons who were entrusted with property or with dominion over property as bankers or agents and therefore did not come directly under s. 409 though they might be guilty of abetment under s. 409 read with s. 109 by conspiring with the directors to commit criminal breach of trust if they assisted the directors to obtain the sanction of the shareholders to the illegal payment of dividends and did so for the dishonest purpose of causing wrongful gain or wrongful loss. Whether the illegal payment of dividends under the circumstances stated could be regarded as causing wrongful loss to the bank as a corporate body quære. Whether moneys deposited in the bank by its customers and not in any way earmarked could after such deposit be regarded as property of the depositors within the meaning of s. 409 quære. Held also that if the directors manager and accountant dishonestly that is to obtain wrongful gain for themselves or to cause wrongful loss to others, put before the shareholders balance sheets which they knew to be materially false and misleading and likely to mislead the public as to the condition of the bank and concealed its true condition and thereby induced depositors to allow their money to remain in deposit in the bank they were guilty of cheating in the aggravated form made punishable by s. 418 of the Penal Code and if they acted together to put forward such a false balance sheet they were guilty of abetment by conspiracy to cheat. Semble—The making of such a false balance sheet is not an offence within s. 191 of the Penal Code and where it is made prior to the commencement of the winding up of the company is not an offence within s. 216 of the Companies Act (VI of 1882). A false balance sheet of a company under the Indian Companies Act need not be a true balance sheet in the sense that it must represent the actual state of the company's assets and liabilities. If it falsely states the condition of the company it is a false balance sheet though it shows the accounts as shown in the books of the company and correctly represents what is in the books. A balance sheet which shows a profit for the company amounting to Rs 2000 while the actual state of assets without any reserve is shown with the firm of balance sheet amounting to Rs 1000, which of such debts were paid and what was not paid and undivided and what was not paid and undivided.

The condition being fulfilled G collected moneys for A under the decree and retained the sum promised. It was not proved that A assented to the appropriation by G of the sum retained in payment of the promised present. A sued G to recover the sum retained. Held (1) that if G was to be regarded as a barrister he was under a disability to contract with A as to his fees (2) that if G was to be regarded as a pleader he was prohibited by a Circular Order of the Sadar Adalat from enforcing this contract. Semle—The decision in Kennedy v Brown 13 C B N S 677 governs all agreements made by members of the English Bar in that character. ACHAMPARAMBATH CHERIA KUNHAMMU v GANTZ I L R. 3 Mad. 138

The degree of barrister is but one of the qualifications for admission and enrolment as an advocate of the High Court. Where the defendant a barrister who was not admitted an advocate of the High Court or specially authorized to plead in the superior Court accepted a vakalatnamah from the plaintiff to defend him upon a charge pending in the Session Court and the defendant failed to appear on the day to which the trial of the plaintiff was adjourned and the plaintiff sued the defendant to recover the amount of the fee paid. Held that the suit was maintainable. KIANTVA ROW v MITTAKISTNA 4 Mad., 244

24 — Breach of covenant—Cause of action—Plaint—Consent of benamidar—The plaintiff alleged that the three first defendants with a brother since deceased purchased a patna mehal therein described that the same was thereafter sold for arrears of rent and purchased by the said three defendants with their own funds but that the Collector in compliance with their petition entered the name of their mother the fourth defendant as the purchaser. The plaintiff then alleged a subsequent sale by the three first defendants to the plaintiff that they the said defendants caused a kothala to be executed by the fourth defendant and that they being the real owners became witnesses to the deed and received the whole of the consideration money and prayed for reason of ouster and disturbance alleged for damages against all the defendants for breach of the following covenant contained in the kothala: If any one making any objection to the sale by me of the said mehal give you trouble in any way then I will put matters straight. If I fail to do so I will return the consideration money. If I do not return it you will realize it by means of a suit. The Civil Judge in whose Court the plaint was filed held that no cause of action was shown, and the High Court on appeal remanded the case to try whether there had been the ouster and disturbance alleged, and whether, under the circumstances they constituted a breach of the contract. The High Court however dismissed the suit against the three first defendants holding that the mother only was bound by the contract. Held by the Privy Council that the plaintiff disclosed a cause of action against all the defendants and that the case must be remanded accordingly. One issue raised by the plaintiff was whether the kothala was really entered into by the mother as the agent and on behalf of the three first defendants and by their authority

27 — Benami purchase by judgment debtor of property subject to mortgage decree—Effect of—P L brought a suit against H and while it was pending executed a bond in favour of R C hypothecating the property in dispute. The suit was dismissed with costs and another suit was brought by one P M upon the bond and while it was pending the property in dispute was sold in execution of H's decree for costs and purchased by S. The day after this sale on 10th November 1868 P M obtained a mortgage decree which he transferred to R B who executed it and attached the property in dispute when S intervened objecting that the mortgage the mortgage decree and the transfer of the decree were all fictitious and collusive and brought about by P L. This objection having been rejected a suit was brought on the same ground against R B P M and the widow of P L to establish S's rights and to stop the pending sale. The property was however sold and purchased by D who was then made a defendant in the suit. Both the lower Courts found that R B was a benamidar for P L and upheld the title of S in preference to that of D. Held on the principle of In re Saroop Chunder Ha ra B L R 938 9 W R 230—viz that the purchase by a judgment debtor extinguishes the decree—that the same result followed in a benami transaction when the decree was a mortgage decree and therefore although S by virtue of his auction purchase was not entitled to the property in dispute yet he was entitled to a declaration that so far as the amount of his purchase money went to satisfy the decree of November 1868 it should be considered a charge on the property.

question is, whether property bought and held in the name of another than the party claiming as the real purchaser is the property of that other or merely bought and held in his name (benami) for the claimant, the criterion is to consider from what source the purchase-money came; the presumption is that a purchase made with the money of A in the name of B is for the benefit of A and where the purchase is by a father whether Mahomedan or Hindu in the name of his son, there is no presumption of an advancement in favour of the son. 46. — Benami purchase—Whether property was held benami for the claimant or was a gift to the holder—Evidence of ownership p.—Source of purchase-money—The claimant having supplied the purchase money on the sale of the village in suit took the transfer by sale deed in the name of the first defendant who remained in possession of it, receiving rents. The claim was for proprietary possession by the purchaser on the ground that the property was held benami for him. The first Court decreed the claim. The Appellate Court reversed this decision. The first Court had attributed too much to the fact that the plaintiff had supplied the purchase-money—an important fact in most of the cases raising the question of benami or not benami but not the only test of ownership. Here the source of that money was consistent with the claimant's having as the defence alleged intended to make a gift of the property to the holder of it and the right inference from the fact was that it was not held benami for the claimant but belonged to the defendant. BAK NABAIN v. Purchase of a taluk in Bengal by a Hindu in his eldest son's name the conveyance though in the English form of lease and release held to be a benami purchase and the son in whose name it was purchased declared to be a trustee for the father and the taluk part of the father's estate. GOPEKHESTO GOSAIN v. When the rights of creditors are in issue in such a transaction very strict proof of the nature of the transaction should be required from the objector to such rights and the burden of proof lies with more than ordinary weight on the person alleging that the purchase was intended for the benefit of the son. NAGENDHAR & ABDULLA

66. ———— Act XII of 1841—Suit tooust certified purchaser at sale for arrears of revenue—§ 22 Act XII of 1841 did not apply to a suit for a declaration of the plaintiff's title in right of inheritance as against other members of the family. MAHOMED WAYEE v SUGZEBOONIESA 6 W R 38

67. ———— Act I of 1845—Purchaser at sale for arrears of revenue—The ruling of the Full Bench in Bihari Kunwar v Bihari Lal 3 B L R F B 15; 11 W R F B 16 that a benami purchaser is debarred from setting up his title in opposition to a certified purchaser was held not to apply in a suit in which the plaintiff was a certified purchaser who had bought at a sale for arrears of revenue under Act I of 1845. BINJO BENARSEE SINGH v WAJID HOSSEIN 14 W R, 672

68. ———— S 21—Purchases made benami—S 21 Act I of 1845 does not protect purchases made in the name of third parties from the operation of decrees against the persons beneficially entitled to the purchased property. AMEERBOONIESA BEEBEE v DEWODE PAM SEIN 2 W R 29

69. ———— Property purchased by member of joint family—Property purchased by a member of a joint family with money out of the common estate is family property even if purchased in the name of his son. Even if the son is a certified purchaser at a sale under Act I of 1845, the other members of the family are not debarred by a § 21 from claiming a share of the purchase as joint property. HOONIADE LALL v DEWKEE NUDDUY LALL 19 W R, 223

70. ———— Onus probandi—In a suit to recover possession by the ostensible purchaser of an estate sold for arrears of revenue under Act I of 1845 where it was found that plaintiff had stood by ever since his purchase and had for 11 years allowed defendants to remain in possession and enjoy the usufruct as proprietors—Held that the burden of proof was rightly thrown on the plaintiff. Jadub Bam Deb v Bam Lochan Muduck 5 W P F B, 15 11 W R F B 16—the former on § 26 Act XI of 1859 and the latter on § 40 Act VIII of 1859—considered and applied to a case

71. — Certified purchaser—S 21 Act I of 1845 does not apply to a suit brought to oust the certified purchaser on the ground that the purchase was made on behalf of another person but to make void a potish granted by his mother BISSOWATH SRAMA BRUTTACHALJEY & MORAN W R, 1884, 353

72. — Fraudulent purchase—Act I of 1845 was not intended to afford statutory protection to a purchaser at a sale brought about by fraudulent default on a preconcerted arrangement for the purposes of title MUNSOOR ALI KHAN & OJODHYA RAM KHAN 8 W R, 399

73. — Sale of arrears of revenue—Purchase by manager of joint Hindu family—Suit by one member to recover his share—A purchase by a managing member of a joint Hindu family in his own name at a revenue sale held under Act I of 1845 is not affected by s 21 of the Act. A suit by one of the members for recovery of possession of his share of the property purchased by the managing member in his own name but for the use of the family is not a suit to oust a certified purchaser and therefore not affected by s 21 Act I of 1845 TUNDAY SINGH & PUKH NARAYAN SINGH [5 B L R 548; 13 W R 347]

74. — Act XI of 1859 s 36—Act XII of 1841—Held (by MITTER J) that s 21 of Act I of 1845 and s 36 of Act XI of 1859 do not apply to a purchase under Act XII of 1841 BOOA KISSOOLKE & NAWAB NAZIM OF BENGAL [11 W R 382]

75. — Act XI of 1859 s 36, Construction of—Title of benami purchaser how limited—Benami property its liability to claims against true owner—The object of s 36 of Act XI of 1859 is to prevent the true owner from disputing the title of his benamidar (certified purchaser) and not to preclude a third party from enforcing a claim against the true owner in respect of the benami property CHUNDRA HAMIR DIXTA & RAMKRISHN IATRUCK I L R, 12 Cal, 303

76. — Suit to oust certified purchaser—A purchased a mahal in the name of A's brother and obtained possession. He then sold B who was acting as his talukdar for an account and for delivery of certain papers connected with that mahal. Held that the terms of s 36 of Act XI of 1859 did not apply to bar the suit SHIVDAS CHUNDER DEVI & RAM SENDER MOZDAN [I L R, 21 Cal, 375]

77. — Penal section Construction of—Suit to oust an assignee from a certified purchase—Maintainability of suit—A plaintiff in trust in trust No. 1 to purchase a certain property at a revenue sale on his behalf; & fraudulent No. 2 purchase it in his own name but with the money of the plaintiff and afterwards agreed to execute a deed of release in favour of plaintiff but without doing that he fraudulently executed a deed of sale in favour of defendant No 1 who had notice of plaintiff's title. In a suit by plaintiff for recovery of possession and declaration of title of the property it was cont'd that a 36 of Act XI of 1859 was a bar. Held per MACLEAN CJ and GHOSE J that s 36 of Act XI of 1859 is a penal section and ought to be construed strictly and literally and in construing the section the Court ought not to go beyond the strict letter of the language used or to put a construction upon that language which would have the effect of materially extending the operation of the section. Held further by MACLEAN CJ that s 36 is no bar to the suit, inasmuch as this is not a suit to oust the certified purchaser but to oust somebody else although he claims through the former; and the true ground upon which the suit is based is the fraud of defendant No. 2 of which defendant No 1 had notice. Held per GHOSE J that the suit might well be regarded as based upon the ground of fraud and in this view of the matter the case falls outside the provisions of s 36 of the Revenue Sale Law. Bukans Kocur & Lalla Behares Lall 14 M I A 496. Lokhee Narain Roy Chowdhry & Kalypudda Bandopadhyay L R 2 I A 151. Toondun Singh & Pokhharan Singh L R 1 I A, 312 referred to. Per TARVELIAN J (dissenting)—S 36 of Act XI of 1859 applies just as much to a suit to oust the assignee of a certified purchaser as it does to a suit to oust that purchaser. The Legislature in enacting s 36 intended to give to a certified purchaser in possession a statutory title against the person if any on whose behalf he had purchased, and therefore this protection should devolve upon his heir or assignee who would take a title in continuation of that of the certified purchaser. RAJ CHUNDER CHUCKENBUTTY & DINA NATH SARA [2 C W N, 433]

(6) CIVIL PROCEDURE CODE 1852 s 317 (1859 s 200)

78. — Civil Procedure Code 1852 s 317—Sale for arrears of revenue—Act XI of 1859 s 36—Certified purchaser suit against—A the certified purchaser of a talukhat a sale held under the provisions of Act XI of 1859 for arrears of revenue and who had obtained symbolical possession had at the time of the sale agreed with B the former owner of the talukhat to re-convey to him (B) after the sale had been completed. In a suit by B to compel specific performance of the contract alleging that he had never quitted actual possession of the talukhat, objection was taken that the suit was not maintainable under s 36 of Act XI of 1859 and s 317 of Act XI of 1852. Held that the suit not being one to oust the certified purchaser from possession it was not barred by s 36; and that neither was it barred by s 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. That section applying only to sales in execution of decrees of Civil Courts held under the Procedure Code. FAZAL RAHMAN & IMAM ALI I L R, 14 Cal, 582

79 ————— Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 200—Party not a certified purchaser—S 200 of Act VIII of 1859 does not preclude a person purchasing benami from setting up his title against a person not being the certified purchaser or claiming through him. SHROFATY DASSEE v GOPESMOON DART DASSEE Marsh, 423 2 May 512

80 ————— Suit between benamidar and beneficial owner—Suits between the benamidar and the beneficial owner are all referred to s. 200 Act VIII of 1859. SEETANATH GHOSH v MADHUB NARAYAN BOY CHOWDHURY 1 W R, 329

81 ————— Purchase in another's name at Court sale—Liability of property to creditors of benamidar—The immovable property of A at a Court's sale was purchased by B with the money and on behalf of A. B subsequently conveyed the property to C for the benefit of A. Held that the property could be taken in execution by the creditors of A. Quare—Whether but for the subsequent conveyance B under the operation of ss 209 and 260 of the Civil Procedure Code would not have had a good title against the creditors of A. SATAPU VALAD DAV DONWRE v HARBASAPA 7 Bom., A. C. 21

82 ————— Agreement to recover—A's property was sold under a decree to B a bona fide purchaser who offered to A to convey to him on being repaid the purchase money. Held that, if A accepted the proposal s 200 of the Civil Procedure Code did not preclude a contract from arising. MOR JOSHI v MUHAMMAD IBRAHIM [10 Bom. 344]

83 ————— Suit for possession against certified purchaser—Suit for possession by purchaser from certified purchaser at an execution sale. Defendant in possession not only denied plaintiff's title but that of his vendor whose purchase was clearly fraudulent being made in collusion with the judgment debtor to defraud creditors. Held that s 200 Act VIII of 1859 did not prohibit a defendant under such circumstances from questioning the plaintiff's title; that it provided for the dismissal of a suit brought to question the title of the certified purchaser but did not prohibit a defendant from questioning that title when the auction purchaser sought to oust him. KHYBAT ALLI v SYFULLAH KHAN [8 W R, 130]

84 ————— Previous possession of party claiming to be the real purchaser—The correct interpretation of s 200 Act VIII of 1859 is to the effect that a suit by a party claiming to be the real purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree cannot be brought against the certified auction purchaser even though the claimant has had previous possession. BIKUNT CHUNDER MOOSTAZEE v KHEMA MOYEE DEBIA [9 W R, 380]

debtor sued to be confirmed in possession of the property by virtue of his certificate of sale and to obtain the cancellation of the second sale and the order disallowing his objections to that sale. Held that the provisions of s 200 of Act VIII of 1859 did not prohibit the consideration of the circumstances of the first sale when the question for determination was whether at the time of the second attachment the judgment debtors were in possession as owners of the property or merely as lessees of the certified purchaser. GANESH PERSHAD v SNEO CHURUN LALL [6 N W 197]

86 ————— Suit by decree holder against certified purchaser—S 200 of Act VIII of 1859 does not preclude the Courts from entertaining a suit brought by a decree holder against the certified purchaser of property to bring the property to sale in execution of his decree as the property of his judgment-debtor on the allegation that the certified purchaser had purchased the property benami for the judgment debtor who had remained in possession as owner from the date of purchase and was in possession as such at the time of attachment. SORUN LALL v LALA GYA PERSHAD [6 N W 265]

87 ————— Onus probandi—Where plaintiff as heir of the ostensible auction purchaser sued to oust defendant who had been twelve years in possession and the latter pleaded that the sale was made benami—Held that the long possession would go to prove the truth of defendant's allegation that the auction purchaser was merely a trustee for him and it would be for plaintiff to show that his ancestor paid for the purchased property. Held that ss 259 and 260 Act VIII of 1859 did not apply as the sale was made before that law came into operation. ZOOLFEKAR ALI v MANOMEND TUKER [9 W R, 439]

88 ————— Certified purchaser—The purchaser of immovable property sold in execution of a decree of a Civil Court got a certificate under a 259 of Act VIII of 1859 and subsequently sued for possession of that which he had purchased. Held that the defendant (who was in possession) was by s 260 debarred from pleading that he himself was the real purchaser and that the purchase was made benami for him in the name of the plaintiff the certified purchaser. JOKHER LALL v HUNTS KOOKE [10 W R 167]

A decree for redemption was passed which was reversed on appeals filed by the supplementary defendant and the kharidar respectively. Civil Procedure

Code (1882) s 317—Effect of benami purchase and purchase at execution debtor's agent—Right of suit for possession—Where the purchaser at an execution sale is the agent of the execution debtor and buys the property as such though he advances the purchase money on the understanding that he is to be repaid a suit for possession of the property is maintainable by the latter against the former. Such a transaction is not a mere benami purchase and is not a bar to such a suit under s 317 of the Civil Procedure Code. SANKUN NAYAR v NABAYANAN ANMURU I L R 17 Mad., 262

his hypothecation for the sale of the property against B and the mortgagor. In execution the land was purchased by the agent of B with his money and he agreed to execute a conveyance to B. This agreement was not carried out and the nominal purchaser ejected B a tenant. Held the suit was not barred by s. 317 of the Civil Procedure Code that B was entitled to a decree for delivery of possession and execution of a conveyance. *KUMBALINGA PILLAI v. 114. — *Civil Procedure Code (1882) ss 231-317—Trusts Act (II of 1892) ss 82-88—Purchase by alleged agent of decree holder at sale in execution—Certain decree-holders (appellants) were refused permission to purchase at the sale in execution and subsequently the defendant alleged by the decree holders to be their agent but of whose general duty the making of such purchases was not a part purchased the property and got his name entered in the sale certificates. The decree holders hearing of the purchase supplied the purchase-money ratified the purchase and agreed to take a conveyance of the property after confirmation of the sale. On the refusal of the defendant to execute the conveyance the decree-holders sued for a declaration that they were the real purchasers and for possession of the property. Held that under such circumstances the second paragraph of s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure did not exclude the application of the first paragraph of that section. Held further that ss 82-88 of the Indian Trusts Act (II of 1892) did not apply. Sankaran Nayar v. Narayanan Ambuduri I L R. 17 Mad. 292 and *Kumbalinga Pillai v. The plaintiffs thereupon brought this suit against the defendants (the pleader and his mohurrar) for a declaration that the pleader defendant in so purchasing was a trustee on their behalf for an order directing the defendants to reconvey the property to the plaintiffs and for other relief. At the time of filing the suit possession of the land sold had not been given to anybody. Held affirming the decision of the Subordinate Judge that the suit was not barred having regard to the case made in the plaint by s. 317 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Held also (on the merits) that the pleader could not according to equity and good conscience retain for his own benefit the property so purchased by him. *AGHOBE NATH CHUCKERBUTTY v. The estate was one bruce on the register of revenue paying estates in the Collectorate with regard to the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1868 s 10. The district of the 24 Pargunnahs is a permanently settled district but the portion of it forming the Sunderbunds was declared by Regulation III of 1823 s 13 not to be included in the permanent settlement. The Sunderbunds tract was moreover under Regulation IX of 1816 formed into a separate jurisdiction for settlement purposes under an officer styled the Commissioner of the Sunderbunds who is subject to the direct control of the Board of Revenue and independent of the Collector of the 24 Pargunnahs. 3. —Decree transferred to Civil Court for execution—Appeal—Bengal Act VIII of 1869 s 108—Act X of 1859 s 133—In a suit brought for recovery of Rs 75 for arrears of rent the plaintiff obtained an ex parte decree on 18th March 1869 in the Court of the Deputy Collector. In October 1871 he applied to the Munsif for and executed execution of his decree. In January 1872 one of the defendants applied to the Deputy Collector for a review of his judgment and the Deputy Collector admitted the review and dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal the Judge held that the Deputy Collector had no jurisdiction to entertain the application for review or to hear the case the decree having been transferred under Bengal Act III of 1870 to the Munsif for execution and reversed the judgment of the Deputy Collector. Held that the suit having been decided by the Deputy Collector before Bengal Act VIII of 1869 came into operation the procedure therefore would be that laid down by s 108 of the Act i.e. under Act X of 1859 and the appeal would lie to the Collector not to the Judge under ss 153 and 155 of that Act. 1. ——— Income tax—Suit for arrears of rent—Set off—Effect of Act on agreement made before passing of Act—In 1860, at the time the income tax was in force, A made a patta in allotment of certain lands with B, B agreeing to pay any enhancement of the revenue that might be made by Government at any time or any impost in future to be levied by Government the income tax to be paid by A according to his income B having nothing to do with the same. In 1870 A brought a suit against B for arrears of rent B under the contract, claimed to have set off as a tax on income a sum which he had paid under the Road Cess Act which had been passed in 1871 after the Income Tax Act had been repealed. Held that the tax imposed by the Road Cess Act passed by the Bengal Council could not be considered to be a tax on income the income tax having been a tax imposed by the Government of India on a person's annual income levied upon whatever actually came to his hands as income and not upon the value of his property and that therefore B could not set off the amount as being income tax. Held also that although the Road Cess Act contains no saving clause in favour of contracts it does not prohibit in future the making of contracts which shall interfere with the incidence of the road cess as directed by the Act nor vacate contracts that may have been made before the passing of the Act and in the absence of any provisions to that effect an agreement entered into before the passing of the Act could not be affected by the subsequent passing of the Act. *SURNOMYEE DABEE v. If in future any chowkidari tax or any other new abwab or tax or fee or kor or any additional fee or jinama be fixed upon the mahal by Government I will pay that separately. In a suit by the zamindar for increase of rent the defendants claimed to set off a sum representing the amount which the zamindar was bound to contribute under the Road Cess Act and Public Works Cess Act and which amount they had paid to the Collector. Held that the amount in question came within the terms of the kabuliat and that the defendants were not entitled to the set off claimed by them. *SURNOMYEE DABEE v. 2. ——— s 3 and ss 9 10 23 25 and 28—*Sale for arrears of road cess Effect of—Right of purchaser—Interpretation of clause construction of—In a suit on a bond by which certain land admittedly lakkhury was mortgaged the purchaser of a portion of the mortgaged property at an auction sale for arrears of road cess due under Bengal Act X of 1871 was added as a defendant and the lower Courts holding that the effect of such a sale was to pass the property to the defendants free of incumbrances made a decree excluding that portion from liability in respect of the mortgage bond. Held on the construction of Bengal Act X of 1871 that the sale had no such effect and that the whole of the property was liable to be sold in satisfaction of the plaintiff's claim. Although the effect of an interpretation clause is to give the meaning assigned by it to the word interpreted in all places in the Act in which that word occurs it is not the effect of an interpretation clause that the thing defined has annexed to it every incident which may seem to be attached to it by any other Act of the Legislature. It does not follow therefore that because lakkhury property is defined in the Road Cess Act 1871 to be a tenure all the interests and consequences attached by other Acts to tenures generally or to particular classes of tenures become annexed to lakkhury property. *UMACHURN BAG v. 1. ——— Hindu Law—Mahomedan Law—Concert—Justice equity and good conscience—To entitle a person to have the Hindu or Mahomedan law applied to him under the first paragraph of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871 he must be an orthodox believer in the Hindu or Mahomedan religion. The mere circumstance that he calls himself or is called by others a Hindu or Mahomedan as the case may be is not enough. His only claim to have a special kind of law applied to him is that he follows and observes a particular religion that of itself creates his law for him. If he fails to establish his religion his privilege to the application of its law fails also and he must be relegated to that class of persons whose cases have to be dealt with under the latter paragraph of s. 24 of Act VI of 1871 according to justice equity and good conscience. B alleging that his family was a joint undivided Hindu family sued R his father for a declaration that certain property was joint ancestral property and for partition of his share according to the Hindu law of inheritance of such property sic one moiety. R set up as a defence to the suit that the members of the family were Mahomedans and were therefore not governed by the Hindu law. The evidence in the suit established that the members of the family were neither orthodox Hindus nor Mahomedans. It also established that the Hindu law of inheritance had always been followed in the family. Held following the principle enunciated above that the family not being Hindus nor Mahomedans the rule of decision their cause of action as arising when the Municipal Commissioners refused to remove the stones. Defendants case was that the land had been in possession of Government till Bengal Act III of 1864 was extended to Howrah since which time the Commissioners had held the land. Held that the plaintiffs cause of action could not be considered to have first arisen on the refusal of the Municipality to remove the stones. Held (by BAYLEY J) that the Municipal Commissioners had acted properly under the law and were entitled to the application of s 87 Bengal Act III of 1864. Held (by PHEAR J) that s 87 could only protect defendants if sued for damages consequent on a wrong done by them in the reasonable belief that they were exercising their lawful powers not if they were sued by parties kept out of possession by their continued wrong-doing. POORNO CHUNDER ROY v BALFOUR 9 W R 535

After the dismissal of the suit the plaintiff brought the present suit for recovery of his share of the land on the allegation that his tenant had relinquished the land within three months in consequence of his having been dispossessed by the Municipal Commissioners. Held that s 87 Bengal Act III of 1864 did not apply. Scemle—Bengal Act III of 1864 s 87 relates only to actions brought in respect of acts done by the Commissioners under that Act for the purpose of the Act. PRICE v KHILAT CHANDRA GHOSH 5 B I R Ap 50 13 W R, 461

Chairman of the Mothbari Municipality 1 L R 17 Calc 323 approved. A landowner on whose land a market had been held for some years previous and which land lay within the bounds of a municipality was prosecuted under s. 344 of the Bengal Municipal Act and convicted and fined for using such market without having obtained a license under s. 338. He alleged that he had applied for a license, and that it had not been granted him and that the neglect to grant it was due to the fact that his market interfered with a new market established by the Municipal Commissioners and their desire to close his market. It appeared that some time previous to the institution of the prosecution the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting passed a resolution that the provisions of s. 337 of the Municipal Act (Bengal Act III of 1884) be extended to this municipality and it was contended that by this resolution license became necessary to sell at any market any of the provisions mentioned in that section and that selling without such license rendered the accused liable to prosecution and fine under s. 344. It appeared further that Part V of the Act which includes s. 337 had been previously extended to the municipality by an order of the Government of Bengal. Held that the resolution of the Commissioners was not an order such as is contemplated by s. 337 as it was not sufficiently precise to convey any definite meaning and purported only to do what the Bengal Government had already done some time previously. Held further that the conviction and sentence must be set aside there being no proper order under s. 337. QUEEN EMRESS v. MUKUNDA CHUNDER CHATTERJEE

s. 339—Obtention of Municipality to grant license—Interpretation of statute—May shall—There are no words which render it obligatory on a municipality to grant a license under s. 333 of Bengal Act III of 1884. The word may in s. 339 of that Act is not to be construed as shall. MORAN v. CHAIRMAN OF THE MOTIHARI MUNICIPALITY

ss. 353 218—Continuous offence—Removal of obstruction—The petitioner was convicted of an offence of having erected culverts on public drains belonging to a municipality and prosecution for such offence was made six months after the date on which the commission was first brought to the notice of the Chairman. Held that though the offence was continuous in its nature the prosecution was barred under s. 353 of the Bengal Municipal Act and that s. 218 had no application to a case of this kind. LUTTI SINGH v. Assessment of land for marly occupied for Government salt works

—Upon the relinquishment by the Government of lands within the ambit of a permanently settled zamindari continuously used before and since the perpetual settlement of salt works from the commencement of salt making by the Government until after the passing of Regulation I of 1874 the provisions of that Regulation are applicable to the mutual rights of the zamindar and of the Government. Such lands were held by the officers of the Salt Department in terms of cl 11 of that Regulation free of rent and under a perpetual title of occupancy whether belonging to a permanently settled estate or not. The force of the Regulation and the right of the Government to assess such lands are not affected by khali payments having been made among other compensations by the Government to the zamindar; and cl 11 appears to contemplate some such payment. On a settlement of the relinquished lands khali payments being sums remitted to the zamindars and to be allowed in perpetuity within the meaning of cl 4 of s. 9 of Regulation I of 1824 must be continued to the zamindar; or if a settlement should be made with others he should be assessed only for the

4. — Suit to recover excess of rent—Act X of 1859 ss 10 and 23 cl 2—Exaction of sum in excess of rent—Contemporaneously with the execution of a pottah it was verbally agreed that the tenant should supply the zamindar with a certain quantity of rice and that a deduction should be made from the rent reserved in respect thereof. The zamindar took proceedings against the tenant under Regulation VIII of 1819 for the recovery of the entire amount of rent notwithstanding the tenant had supplied the rice and was entitled to the reduction. The tenant without contesting his liability or demanding an investigation as to the amount due paid the entire amount. Held that this was not "an exaction from the rayat of a sum in excess of the rent specified in the pottah within the meaning of s 10 Act X of 1859 (Bengal Act VIII of 1849 s 11) and that a suit was not maintainable in respect of it under the Rent Act. CHUNDER MOYEE CHOWDHURY v DEBENDRANATH ROY CHOWDHURY Marsh. 420 2 May, 1910

The suit was first brought in the Revenue Court and as their co-sharers had not joined in the suit the plaintiffs made them defendants and their being defendants preventing the plaintiffs from continuing the suit in the Revenue Court they instituted it afresh in the Civil Court after Bengal Act VIII of 1859 came into operation. The defendants objected that under the limitation provided by s 29 of that Act no more than three years' rent could be recovered but the Jndgs held affirming the decision of the Munsif that the case was governed by cl 16 s 1 Act VIII of 1859 and that six years' rent could be decreed. Held on special appeal to the High Court that the fact of the co-sharers being made pro forma defendants did not alter the real character of the suit which was to recover arrears of rent and that therefore the provisions of s 29 Act VIII of 1859 were applicable, and a decree for three years' rent only was given. GOBIND SEN v GOBIND CHUNDER DASS

Res judicata—Limitation—A the zamindar granted a patni lease of certain talukhs to B who assigned it to C and D. On B's death C and D applied to the Collector for registration of the patni talukhs in their names as assignees of B. A objected to the registration on the ground that the lease insured only for the life of B. A's objection being overruled he instituted a regular suit to eject C and D the present defendants which was decided against A finally by the Privy Council in 1874. During the pendency of this litigation the zamindar sued to recover the rent for the year 1868 not upon the basis of the patni lease but for use and occupation treating the tenants as mere trespassers. This suit was dismissed on the ground that the plaintiff ought to have sued on the lease. In 1875 the plaintiff brought the present suit for the rent of 1868 on the patni lease. The defendants pleaded res judicata and limitation. The plaintiff contended that the suit was within time on the ground that the right to recover the rent was in suspense during the pendency of the litigation regarding the lease. Held that the suit though not res judicata was barred under s. 29 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. SWARNAMAYI v SHASHI MUKHI BARMAN 2 B L R P C 10 distinguished. WATSON & CO v DHONENDRA CHUNDER MOOKERJEE

having employed him as a moonshee and the defendant relied for proof on the fact of his subsequent re-appointment as tahsildar. The lower appellate Court construed s. 33 as applicable to the case. Held that this was not a correct interpretation of the section and that so long as the defendant continued to be employed in the plaintiff's service his agency had not terminated. WILMONT SINGH DEO v. In a suit brought on the 28th of October 1878 to recover the balance found on enquiry to be due—Held that s. 30 of Act VIII of 1869 had no application the special agreement taking the case out of the scope of that section and therefore the suit was not barred by reason of having been brought more than one year after the defendant's dismissal. BEER CHUNDER MANICKYA v. 32 ——— Suit against administrator of deceased agent for sums misappropriated—In April 1875 A entered into an agreement in writing with B whereby he agreed to act as the manager of B's zamindaris and other landed properties for three years on certain terms therein mentioned. The agreement was duly registered. On the 15th of June 1882 B sued the Administrator General of Bengal as administrator of A's estate to recover certain sums of money set forth in detail in the plaint as having been received by A and not accounted for stating that they had been misappropriated by A. Held that in respect of such sums as were received by A in virtue of his position as manager under the registered agreement the limitation of six years applied but that in respect of the sums received by him in the course of transactions which did not come within the scope of the registered agreement the limitation of three years applied. Held also that the suit was not such as is contemplated by Bengal Act VIII of 1869 s. 30. HARENDER KISHORE SINGH v. BENGOAL RENT ACT, VIII OF 1869 (X OF 1859)—continued

Suit for value of crops—Distraint—Jurisdiction—Small Cause Court—The plaintiff made a complaint to the Magistrate against the defendant his landlord for forcibly carrying away his crops whereupon the defendant was tried convicted of theft and punished. The plaintiff then instituted a suit against the defendant in the Munsif's Court apparently under s 95 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869 and obtained a decree declaring the distraint to be illegal and directing the crops to be given up to him. The defendant offered to give up a smaller quantity than was mentioned in the decree. The plaintiff refused to take the same and brought a suit in the Small Cause Court to recover the value of the quantity he had claimed before the Munsif and something additional. Held that the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction and that the suit ought to have been brought under s 93 of Bengal Act VIII of 1869. HYPER ALI v. 2. — Landlord and Tenant—

Suit for rent—Enhancement of rent—Enhancement of rent by a registered khabulat within fifteen years from a previous oral agreement to pay enhancement of rent—Effect of—By an oral agreement in the year 1885 the tenant defendant agreed to pay an enhancement of rent and he paid rent at that rate until subsequently he executed in the year 1893 a registered khabulat by which he agreed to pay a further enhancement of rent which was more than two annas in the rupee. Upon a suit for rent by the landlord based on the registered khabulat—Held that inasmuch as the enhancement of rent in s 29 of the Bengal Tenancy Act refers to enhancement after the promulgation of the Act if in this case the enhancement which was made in the year 1885 was before the Act came into force it would not bar an enhancement during the period of fifteen years from the date thereof as contemplated by cl (3) of s 29. But if the said enhancement was made after the Act came into force it would also not bar a subsequent enhancement within fifteen years from the date thereof as the previous contract was only an oral one and was not effectual and binding upon the defendant. Held also that having regard to cl (b) of s 29 as the enhancement was more than two annas in the rupee the registered khabulat was bad in law if the rent then agreed to be paid was an enhanced rent. The khabulat would also be bad in law if the rent agreed to be paid is partly enhanced and partly increased rent. Held further that having regard to prov (1) of s 29 as also the provisions of s 27 the plaintiff would at any rate (i.e. failure the khabulat) be entitled to recover rent at the rate paid by the defendant for more than three years.

decree for road cess on—The word 'rent' in s 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act 1885 includes road cess payable by the landlord. A tenant holder granted a usufructuary mortgage of certain lands within his tenure to A and directed the tenants to pay their rents to him. Subsequently the superior landlord brought a suit for road cess against the tenure holder and in execution of his decree sold the tenure under s 65 of the Bengal Tenancy Act. A then brought a suit against one of the tenants for arrears of rent and contended that all that passed under the auction sale was the right title and interest of the tenure holder and that his rights under the mortgage were unaffected by the sale and that he was still entitled to the rent. Held that Ch VII of the Bengal Tenancy Act must be read with s 65 of the Act and that having regard to the definition in cl 5 of s 3 'rent' as used in that section includes road cess payable by the tenant and that the sale was a sale of the tenure the purchaser acquiring the property free from the incumbrance created by the tenure-holder in favour of A it not being a registered and notified incumbrance within the meaning of s 161 of the Act. MOHIN CHAND NUSKAH v BANSTATH PARAMANICK I L R. 21 Calc. 722

sory sale a small piece of land made up of several rayati holdings within the estate. The applicaindigo factory who had taken under leases from the rayats the greater part of the lands of the village including the holdings within which the plot in question was comprised. The Collector of the district had certified under s 84 that the purpose for which the land was required was reasonable and sufficient. The Munsif tried the matter as a disputed question of fact and held that the purpose alleged was not reasonable or sufficient and declined to authorize the purchase.

The District Judge on appeal reversed the Munsif's finding and authorized the compulsory acquisition of the land. Held that there is no appeal is not conclusive as to the reasonableness and sufficiency of the purpose for which the land is sought to be acquired that the jurisdiction of
